PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 108th CONGRESS, SECOND SESSION

SENATE—Tuesday, February 10, 2004

The Senate met at 9:30 a.m. and was called to order by the President pro tempore (Mr. STEVENS).

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Dr. Barry C. Black, offered the following prayer:

Let us pray.

Lord of wisdom who reigns forever, judging the nations with righteousness and Your people by Your truth, Your steadfast love endures forever and Your faithfulness to all generations. Thank You for the gift of this new day and for the opportunities to promote good will and understanding here at home and unto the ends of the Earth.

Lord, forgive us when we have slept in the face of opportunity or refused to shoulder the responsibilities that come with the privileges of freedom. Today, deliver our Senators from any shortsighted policies and enable them to live up to their lofty vocation. May each of our lives ever glorify Your wonderful and holy Name. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The PRESIDENT pro tempore led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

> I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

RECOGNITION OF THE MAJORITY LEADER

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The majority leader is recognized.

SCHEDULE

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, this morning the Senate will resume consideration of the highway bill. There are several amendments pending to the legislation and it is hoped that we can consider and dispose of those amendments during today's session. Although it appears as though we have not made as much progress on the floor as most of us would like, the chairman and ranking member have been working with a number of Senators on their amendments—as we said, working through the weekend and through yesterday. Thus, work continues on that front. And, again, on behalf of the managers, I encourage Senators to come forward and offer their amendments and discuss those amendments with the managers.

Rollcall votes are possible today as we continue to look for ways to make progress on the bill. I have been talking to the chairman about the continued desire to finish the bill this week. Although last week was a challenge in the Senate, the bill has been pending since that time, and we had hoped to have considered more floor amendments under the regular order.

We have now been on the bill 7 days. Again, there has been a lot of discussion, but I do ask our colleagues to accelerate the process of the consideration of amendments. And they must be brought forward now.

I will continue with discussions with the managers to look for an appropriate avenue for completing this bill this week. I will notify all Senators as we proceed as to when rollcall votes can be expected.

I thank everybody for their attention.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, will the distinguished majority leader yield for a question?

Mr. President, I say, through you to the majority leader, one of the things we have appreciated on this side during the tenure of the Senator from Tennessee as majority leader is that you have been very good to us, with rare exception, in allowing us to offer amendments. You have given us ample time to offer relevant amendments and nonrelevant amendments prior to doing something procedurally to stop the debate.

I recognize, as does Senator INHOFE, that it is not the Republican leadership that has thrown the roadblocks up to the amendment process on this bill. We acknowledge that. There are a number of Senators, for various reasons, who have prevented this bill from moving forward.

Speaking only for this Senator, I do not hold the Republican leadership responsible for these dilatory activities. I think the majority leader, in conjunction with the minority leader, the Democratic leader, has to assess how best to proceed in the immediate future.

This, as the majority leader has said, is an important piece of legislation. As Senator LOTT said yesterday, this could be the most important piece of legislation we will handle this year. Whether that is right or not, I do not know, but I know it is a very important piece of legislation. I hope there is a way we can move forward on this bill.

Mr. FRIST. I thank the Senator.

Mr. President, in closing, I do stress the importance to leadership on both sides of the aisle—we have been in constant communication—that people have the opportunity to express themselves and to have that appropriate debate on the floor. Again, we were on the bill all last week. Yes, we had some interruptions last week with extraneous circumstances, but resilience came through and we had the opportunity with the floor open, as it will be all this week.

At the end of the day, our obligation is to have that opportunity to debate, have our ideas reflected, and then give people an opportunity to choose. That is, again, my goal over the course of the debate during this 2-week period.

With that, I would like very much to finish the bill this week and give each of our colleagues the opportunity to choose and reflect their opinions on this bill.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the leadership time is reserved.

SAFE, ACCOUNTABLE, FLEXIBLE, AND EFFICIENT TRANSPORTATION EQUITY ACT OF 2003

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the Senate will resume consideration of S. 1072, which the clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

● This "bullet" symbol identifies statements or insertions which are not spoken by a member of the Senate on the floor.

A bill (S. 1072) to authorize funds for Federal-aid highways, highway safety programs, and transit programs, and for other purposes.

Pending:

Modified committee amendment in the nature of a substitute.

Dorgan amendment No. 2267, to exempt certain agricultural producers from certain hazardous materials transportation requirements.

Gregg amendment No. 2268 (to amendment No. 2267), to provide that certain public safety officials have the right to collective bargaining.

Dorgan amendment No. 2276 (to the language proposed to be stricken by the committee amendment), to modify the penalty for nonenforcement of open container requirements.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Who seeks recognition?

Mr. INHOFE. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, we had a number of presentations made yesterday. There is a great deal of confusion as to what this bill is all about. I would like to go over a couple points.

First, I invite all Members with amendments to bring them to the floor and discuss them. We are rapidly approaching the point where we are going to be considering amendments. I am very proud of the staff, Democrats and Republicans, who staffed an office over the weekend to get information from Members who had amendments to offer.

For those who have not had a chance to become familiar with what we are doing, an injustice has been done to some of the members of the Finance Committee, particularly the chairman and the ranking member. They have worked long and hard. They have come up with something that meets the criteria originally put forward by the administration, such as not including a gas tax. It does not include going into the general fund. I do believe there are some areas where we have rectified problems with treatments that had been taken previously to the highway trust fund. Of course, I consider that something that should have been done anyway.

We are now in position to consider the bill. It is going to be a huge jobs bill. It is going to accomplish great work for the country.

A lot of people do not understand the formula aspect. One Member came down yesterday and talked about how one State is doing better under the formula. There are a lot of considerations to the formula, considerations such as the total lane miles of interstate, the vehicle miles traveled, the annual contributions to the highway trust fund attributed to commercial vehicles, the diesel fuel used on highways, relative share of total cost of repair and replacement of deficient highway bridges—I can identify with that, as in Oklahoma we have the worst bridges in the country—weighted nonattainment in maintenance areas, rate of return of donor States. That is one of the problems people have failed to understand, that we are getting all donor States up to 95 percent.

To do this, there have to be some who have been actually in a better position than they should have been by any formula because let's keep in mind that in TEA–21, 6 years ago, we had the minimum guarantee. The minimum guarantee was a political document. Let's look at who was in charge at that time. We had quite a disproportionate number of leaders from the Northeast. We had Senator Moynihan, Congressman SHUSTER over in the House who was driving the boat, Senator CHAFEE, Senator BAUCUS from Montana. As a result, there are some States that got up to a larger share than they would have achieved under any type of formula.

What they did was start with the same formula, using the factors I just outlined, and then, halfway through the process, went to the minimum guarantee. The minimum guarantee is the easy way out. All you have to do is count up 60 people, give them what they want, and you have 60 votes. That is not the right way to do it. We are doing it the right way.

I haven't seen anyone who really understands the formula, and everything that went into the last year we spent working on it, who is not supportive. They may not like how their State fared. Their State may have been in a position where they were getting more than they were entitled to for a period of time. That might be rectified by this. But we have the best intentions of going ahead. I am quite sure, in the final analysis, we will have a bill that is far greater and better and more equitable than ISTEA was—I was here during the ISTEA debate—and TEA–21 in 1998. I believe we have done a good job.

I refer again to the cooperation we have had on both sides of the aisle. We have had an opportunity to work with the leadership, and Senators JEFFORDS and REID have been great to work with. They have set partisanship aside. Historically, this has been a nonpartisan bill. It should be that way. A lot of the actions of the Environment and Public Works Committee are nonpartisan. Certainly at the top of that list is this bill. I don't think anyone would accuse us of being at all partisan in this legislation.

There are winners and losers—no question about that—when compared to TEA–21. But let's go back to see what happened in TEA–21 before we are critical of where we are today.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, it is my understanding that the Senator from Oklahoma has to be gone from the floor this morning. We have our caucuses at 12:30. There are a number of people on our side who have requested time for morning business. I am wondering if it would be appropriate, in that we are in kind of a procedural tangle anyway, that we have time for debate only until the caucuses.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I propound that as a unanimous consent request, that we have debate only until after the conclusion of our conferences.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. What is the request?

Mr. REID. The request is that we remain on the bill, but for debate only, until 12:30.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, the EPW Committee has been working this bill for the past 2 years. Senators INHOFE, BOND, and REID and I have been very involved in this process. From the beginning, we wanted to accomplish a few important national goals: First, improve roads and bridges; second, move freight; third, address congestion; and fourth, improve safety.

Congestion is a growing concern all across America. Each day, Americans spend more time in their cars as they pursue routine activities, such as going to work, taking the kids to school, or picking up some groceries. As our Nation's population grows, travel demands grow as well.

The number of miles traveled annually on our Nation's roads is increasing at a substantial rate.

Many roads are at or approaching their physical capacity. In many areas of the country, it is both impractical and financially infeasible to add lanes to existing roadways.

However, we can increase capacity by actively managing the transportation network.

Intelligent transportation systems provide State and local governments the data and tools necessary to undertake time saving activities like incident management, ramp metering, traveler advisory systems, and variable pricing.

Over the past 10 years, some areas of the country have begun to implement these techniques, and they have realized numerous benefits.

Areas that employ transportation management techniques enjoy improved travel times, more timely incident management, and improved communication with the traveling public.

Crafting this reauthorization bill, we recognized the importance of enhancing State and local governments' ability to manage their infrastructure now and in the future.

S. 1072 expands Surface Transportation Program eligibility to ensure that States may use Federal highway dollars to manage their network.

The bill shifts Intelligent Transportation Systems out of the research realm and into the mainstream program. States may use core highway program dollars to fund ITS projects.

S. 1072 directs the Secretary to implement a nationwide real-time travel data network. Additionally, States are directed to develop statewide incident reporting systems.

Implementation of these systems will assist travelers and provide State and local transportation agencies the information they need to manage our current infrastructure and to plan for future improvements.

Finally, S. 1072 provides resources to examine future management technologies. The research title of the bill includes provisions to develop the next generation of intelligent transportation systems and management tools.

The research title also provides resources to train the engineers who will design, build, and manage our future transportation infrastructure.

Mr. President, I think it is clear that S. 1072 addresses congestion in a proactive manner by providing policy changes and financial resources to promote the efficient use of our Nation's transportation infrastructure.

As I have said before, passage of this bill is critical. I urge my colleagues to support this effort to provide much-needed resources to our States.

I yield the floor.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

THE COST OF HEALTH CARE

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I will use my leader time for the day. I want to talk about health care today for a few minutes. Health expenditures in this country are at the highest levels now that they have been in our Nation's history. Not only are they at the highest levels in our history, they exceed, by some magnitude, the health expenditures in other countries.

The World Health Organization, in its most recent calculation of what we spend, lists the United States at $4,500 in total expenditures per capita; Canada, $2,058; United Kingdom, $1,774; Japan, $2,009; France, $2,335; and Sweden, $2,097. So we spend more than twice what other countries are currently spending for health care.

One would hope that if we spent twice as much, we would get twice the result. But just the opposite is true. We have the lowest life expectancy of any of the countries I have listed. Our life expectancy is 77 years. That is over 4 years less than Japan. I would hope that at least when it comes to infant mortality, we would get twice the result. But, again, it is just the opposite. We have the highest rate of child mortality of any country I have mentioned—eight deaths per thousand. In Sweden, it is three and a half per thousand. So one could only conclude from these numbers that we are not getting what we are paying for; that we are not getting a bang for the buck.

We will not have the opportunity to address infant mortality, life expectancy, and all of the other challenges we face in our health care system without making some fundamental changes in the system itself.

There are those who have argued it is now impossible for us to achieve universal insurance coverage. Some have even suggested that we would go bankrupt if we were to do that. What I find ironic is that these countries I have listed all have guaranteed health care. That has been the essence of their success, the secret to their success—this ability to cover everybody and, in so doing, reduce child mortality, increase life expectancy, and find ways in which to keep people healthy throughout their lives.

So we are paying more and not only do we have unacceptable results—at least measured by child mortality and life expectancy—we also have unacceptable levels of health coverage. Mr. President, 43.6 million Americans last year had no coverage. That is an increase of 2 million people over the year before. About 75,000—12 percent—of the people in my State have no health insurance. But statistics don't speak to the anguish that is felt by so many people in our country regarding an issue as personal as their health care.

Last summer, I spent a good deal of time on the road, dedicating virtually the entire month of August to talking with people as to how they feel about health care. The anguish, the stories of financial ruin, the extraordinary dilemmas and life-threatening circumstances that so many of these people face are still indelibly printed in my mind.

Yet there are those who say it is impossible to get everybody covered; it is impossible to get to 100 percent. It may be impossible to get to 100 percent, but I am told virtually every country I have listed—and I will list them again: Canada, Britain, Japan, France, and Sweden—virtually every industrialized country has guaranteed coverage today, near 100-percent coverage.

The Bush administration's chief architect on health issues, Health and Human Services Secretary Tommy Thompson, was quoted that he does not think that administratively or legislatively it is feasible to cover everyone. I find this a remarkable statement because we have always prided ourselves as Americans on having a can-do spirit. We have always said if we can go to the Moon, if we can set out challenges for our Nation, we will achieve them because of good leadership, and because of our values, and because of our attitude.

What does it say about our leadership, our values, and our attitude if we say we can't do what every other industrialized country has done? What does it say about our commitment? What does it say about this spirit of America about which we hear so much? We can't? Or we won't? I don't think it is impossible to ensure coverage for all Americans. I think it is imperative we do it.

The United States, as I have said, is the only industrialized country that has not. In each of these countries, one does not need to be a brain surgeon to see the connection between universal coverage and better life expectancy; universal coverage and higher rates of infant survivability, lower infant mortality. That is the key, that is the essence of our need, of our success, and of finding a way to do what we have said from the very beginning: We will always attempt to do our very best.

If we say we can't, if we think we can't, we are right. If we say we can, if we think we can, we are right. It is up to us. It is a question of our leadership, our commitment, our willingness to excite and ignite an interest and a commitment and an enthusiasm about this issue as we have done on so many other issues.

Last month, the Institute for Medicine called for universal health coverage by 2010. They think we can do it.

Bob Dole, the former Republican leader, could have spoken for all of us when he said: The bottom line is, I think we have what it takes to get it done. I think we have what it takes.

I think we have what it takes as well, but we have to demonstrate what it takes is a commitment, not an "I can't." What it takes is bipartisan support for a goal shared by millions of Americans today. Let's provide universal coverage. Let's begin to address this embarrassment for our country. Let's recognize if Britain, Canada, Japan, France, and Sweden can do it, so can we, and we can do it better. Let's accept the fact that $4,500 for every man, woman, and child with less results in infant mortality and life expectancy than other countries is unacceptable in this country. We can, and we must. I hope it starts this year.

Mr. President, I yield the floor, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ENZI). The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant journal clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Ms. STABENOW. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

JOBS AND THE ANNUAL ECONOMIC REPORT

Ms. STABENOW. Mr. President, I wish to take a moment to comment about the report that was just released yesterday, the White House Annual Economic Report of the President, because I was stunned to see the statements regarding the economic report to the country as it relates to jobs.

I invite any member of the group who put this report together or anyone from the administration to visit us in Michigan and see literally every day now the headlines in the papers. It doesn't matter if you are in Detroit or Grand Rapids or in northern Michigan or southern Michigan; we have headlines about jobs that are leaving this country and going overseas, good-paying jobs, white-collar jobs, blue-collar jobs, service jobs, and manufacturing jobs.

When we look at the report of economic advisers and we hear them saying, "President Bush's top economist yesterday said the outsourcing of U.S. service jobs to workers overseas is good for the Nation's economy," I wonder what nation are they talking about. Whose economy are they talking about? It is certainly not good for our economy when people are losing their jobs.

Let me go on to some of the other statements that are quoted in today's Washington Post:

> Shipping jobs to low cost countries is the latest manifestation of the gains from trade.

These were not the gains from trade I was hearing about. I was hearing that we were going to actually be creating more markets to produce more goods and services that would be increasing jobs, not losing jobs.

It says:

> Just as U.S. consumers have enjoyed lower prices from foreign manufacturers, so, too, should they benefit from services being offered by overseas companies that have lower labor costs.

It is stunning to me that we would not be concerned about the outsourcing of jobs, good-wage jobs to other countries. I commend any of my colleagues to watch, as I do nightly, Lou Dobbs on CNN with the continuing critique of what is happening to our country, including service jobs.

I have friends and constituents in Michigan who have been in good-paying service jobs who are now unemployed and have lost their insurance, many of them struggling to see whether they will lose their homes as a result of having lost their job. They would not agree with this report. What we are seeing is the assumption that somehow moving out of this country to lower cost labor countries, whether it is goods or services, is ultimately better for the United States. Now think about this for a moment. They are embracing a race to the bottom that will only eliminate middle-class America.

We had a recent situation occur in Greenville, MI, a small community of 9,000 people. There are 2,700 people who work at the local refrigeration plant, manufacturing refrigerators, Electrolux. They added a third shift. They have been productive. They make money. But the company came in this fall and said even though they make money, they make a profit in Greenville, MI, and people are productive, they could make more money if they went to Mexico and paid $2.50 an hour with no health benefits.

Well, I am sure that is true. I am sure any business could make more money if they paid $2.50 an hour with no health benefits. I am sure they could make more money if they paid $1 an hour or 50 cents an hour with no health benefits. My question to the management was: Who will be able to afford to buy your refrigerator? Who will be able to afford to buy our automobiles? Who will be able to afford a middle-class standard of living in this country if this is only about a race to the bottom?

When we look at what is happening in our country today, not only in manufacturing but in the service industry, we see a race to leave the country because instead of having trade policies that encourage a middle class in Mexico, in China, in India, and other places around the world so they bring up their standard of living, so they can have good wages and buy our products, we see instead pressure on our businesses and our workers to lower our standard of living, to lower our costs, and there is a race to the bottom.

This race ultimately will cost us our way of life and our middle class. But that is how we are different and strong. That is why we are the greatest country in the world—because we have a strong middle class.

I am extremely concerned when I see these kinds of statements. In fact, also quoted in this article from the Washington Post is a statement by Franklin J. Fargo, vice president of International Economic Affairs at the National Association of Manufacturers:

> It is kind of a flip thing to say when people are losing their jobs.

I would agree with that. It is more than flip; it is outrageous to say we as a country somehow benefit by the outsourcing and the elimination of jobs.

In recent years, companies have shipped out software engineering jobs, data entry, customer service, hospital jobs, as well as manufacturing. We know when we pick up the phone—in fact, I picked up the phone one time to talk to a credit card representative and asked where they were. They said: A facility near you. Well, I knew it was not a facility near me in Michigan, where I was calling from, but it was a facility overseas.

I think often of a friend of mine who goes to my church in Lansing, MI. He is a trained engineer, a very competent individual who has lost his job. He told me he is now working for $19 an hour with no health benefits, that he is now struggling with whether he will be able to keep their home with kids in college. That is very real.

I urge those making statements that losing jobs to other countries is a good idea to talk to somebody who has in fact lost their job and may lose their home, and may not be able to send their kids to college, may not be able to buy that new car or keep the house, the cottage up north, be able to do those things that spend dollars in our economy, buy that new refrigerator. How in the world have we gotten to a point where we do not understand the basic economics of people being able to have a good wage so they can purchase goods and services and care for their families and be successful in this country? We know there are serious issues.

Looking at something else in this report, it says: Indeed, outsourcing health care jobs to lower wage countries could help control the upward spiral of health care costs. When a good or service is produced more cheaply abroad, it makes more sense to import it than to make it here.

First, as someone who has worked on health care issues and helped to lead efforts to try to move us to lower health care costs, health care prices, the idea of saying the way we are going to lower health care prices is by losing jobs rather than tackling the big issues of lowering prescription drug prices, rather than allowing Medicare to negotiate group discounts under the new Medicare bill, which we did not do because the prescription drug company wants to be able to stop us from lowering prices—instead of addressing those things that will bring costs for businesses down, the suggestion is we should export health care jobs. So maybe if all of our nurses, doctors, and health care workers were all in another country where they were making less, we would be lowering our health care costs.

I find this report and the comments in it and the public comments in the paper extraordinarily out of touch with what is happening to the people of our country and what is good for our country.

I argue instead that in fact we do need to tackle health care costs. It is a major issue for businesses, large and small. In a global economy, it is a major issue for them to be able to compete. It is a major issue for our families and workers who are being asked to pay more, take a pay cut, pay more in a premium or copays. We should tackle that by addressing what is actually causing the health care costs to go up—the lack of competition, an explosion in prescription drug pricing. If we want to lower prescription drug prices and lower health care costs, rather than having the jobs go to Canada, let us open the border and bring the prescription drugs back from Canada at a cost of 50 percent less. We could do that tomorrow if the administration would look at what is best for our families instead of what is best for the pharmaceutical lobby.

We do not have to export jobs. We can import safe prescription drugs that are actually made here, which we help to produce, that taxpayer dollars subsidize, that are then allowed to be sold in other countries around the world for half the price.

I agree, health care costs are a huge issue for our businesses, and we need to tackle it in a way that brings down prices, that maintains our quality and does not say the way we are going to cut costs is to export our jobs.

As I mentioned earlier, I also ask all of us to rethink what we are doing on trade. We must trade in a global economy, obviously. But our trade laws need to focus on incentives and on policies that will increase the standard of living in other countries, not decrease ours.

I also would ask the administration to work with us on issues to level the playing field. We know China, Japan, and others manipulate their currency. What does that mean? It means it costs us more to sell into China. Our businesses can pay up to a 40 percent tax, essentially, for selling something into China because they want us to move the plant there. It costs us more to sell to them. It costs them less to bring in goods.

If the Treasury Secretary will simply certify that this is going on, we have, then, the authority to begin to do something about it; we have legislation that will give us an opportunity to do something about it. I am proud to be a cosponsor, with Senator SCHUMER, in that effort.

There are actions we can take to level the playing field. There is no doubt in my mind that if we give American businesses and American workers a fair shot, a level playing field, we will win every time. We can compete when the rules are fair. But instead of addressing those things, we have a report coming before us that says outsourcing of U.S. jobs to overseas workers is good for our Nation's economy. With all due respect, I think they should go back to the drawing board and try this again.

I would just say one other thing. The Annual Economic Report predicted 2.6 million new payroll jobs by the end of the year. Certainly we would all greatly love to see that be the case. But last year they reported 1.7 million jobs would be created and the year before they said 3 million jobs would be created. Instead, the Nation lost 53,000 payroll jobs last year, according to the Labor Department.

Instead of proposing, and suggesting, and proclaiming millions of new jobs without the right policies to actually make it happen, I hope we will place on our agendas the loss of jobs—manufacturing jobs, service jobs, professional jobs—happening in this country, all across our Nation, and certainly in my State of Michigan, where we have paid dearly for policies that have not worked. I hope we make this our top priority and that we focus on those things that will stop the exodus from the United States and the exporting of American jobs around the world.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Florida.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Mr. President, I say to the Senator from Michigan as she was commenting about this report about how sending jobs out of the United States is going to help with the cost of health care here in the United States, that is as ridiculous as the old medical practice, 200 years ago, of curing the patient of his disease by bleeding him.

Ms. STABENOW. That is right.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. What we need to do about the cost of health care is get to the cost of health care. The cost of health care is going up. Technology has brought us miraculous new medicines and procedures. All of that is going up. But where do you have an opportunity to bring down the cost of health care? You do it by having best business practices that allow you to have the economies of scale, ergo health insurance, the largest possible pool of people. You use the principle of insurance to work for you, which is take the health risk and spread it over the largest possible group so you bring down the per unit cost.

But we are not approaching it that way. We divide up the population in these little narrow categories and then, when that category gets sick and it gets older, what happens to the costs of that health care? It goes up to the point they cannot afford it.

Ms. STABENOW. That is right.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Or what about what we did in the Medicare bill here, the prescription drug bill, for which the Senator from Michigan and the Senator from Florida certainly didn't vote.

Ms. STABENOW. Right.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. What it was billed as was a $400 billion bill for prescription drugs. We now find it is $525 billion over 10 years. And where did it go mostly? As a bailout to the pharmaceutical companies and as a bailout to the insurance companies.

Ms. STABENOW. That is right.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Not in a way of providing a direct benefit. When the senior citizens in the State of Florida find out how meager this benefit is, when it kicks in in 2005, I predict senior citizens are going to be somewhat upset.

I thank the Senator from Michigan for her comments.

Ms. STABENOW. If I might ask a question of my friend from Florida, as a former insurance commissioner, he certainly understands the insurance side of this. I think, first of all, he is absolutely right. I think the two major drivers for health care now are the explosion of prescription drug prices and the fact that every time a person loses his or her insurance and that person walks into an emergency room to get care and is sicker than they otherwise would be, and so on, people with insurance end up seeing their rates go up because there is a smaller and smaller group of people who actually have insurance, and they pay more and more. Wouldn't that be the philosophy?

Mr. NELSON of Florida. That is correct. There are 40 million people in this country who do not have health insurance. But they get health care. They often get it, as the Senator suggests, at the time of the emergency. Where do they get it? They get it in the most expensive place, the emergency room. Instead of treating the sniffles, they wait until it becomes pneumonia, so the care becomes so much greater.

So you have to get that much larger a group and ensure that larger group. Do it in the private sector. That is the way it ought to be done. Let there be competition to get your most efficient health insurance product, and then give the consumers, also, a choice of plan. So if they want a Cadillac plan, they can take that. If they want a Chevrolet plan, they can take that.

But mix all of those elements into it. That is how we are going to get health insurance and health reform. But we are not going to until we get to such a crisis because there are so many players who have so much at stake and there is so much money to be made.

Ms. STABENOW. If I might ask my friend another question, wouldn't he share my amazement that, in this new economic report, the proposal is that the way we lower health care costs is to export the jobs? Export the nurses, export the doctors, radiological assistants, whoever it is—that is how we should bring down health care costs? Lose our jobs to other countries? Does that make sense?

Mr. NELSON of Florida. That is exactly the opposite of what ought to be done. What was that report the Senator cited again?

Ms. STABENOW. This report actually is the new report from the economic advisers to the President on the state of the economy and jobs, where they are saying outsourcing to other countries is, in fact, a good thing and, in fact, outsourcing health care jobs will actually bring health care costs down.

I was stunned at what I was reading. Certainly, it is not something I know the people in Michigan are going to be very happy to hear about.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. What has happened to our world today? It is almost, if one person says it is white, another person says it is black; if a person says it is up, another person says it is down. Where is common sense? Where is reconciliation? Where is consensus building? Where is bipartisanship?

Take another issue. As I continue to have this dialog with the Senator from Michigan, take another issue, take the issue of the so-called independent commission that has just been appointed to find out what went wrong with intelligence. How can a commission be independent when it is just appointed by one authority, i.e., the President, who is going to be part of the subject of the investigation of the commission? That is not independence. What we need is a commission that is truly independent, that is appointed by the Congress and the President.

Ms. STABENOW. Absolutely.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Both parties. That is not a commentary on the people on the commission because these people seem to be—several of them are personal friends of mine—enormously accomplished people. It is the question of setting up the commission.

If I have been informed correctly, it is hard for my ears to believe what I have heard, which is that in setting up this commission to examine the intelligence that was faulty in Iraq, they are not giving this commission subpoena power.

Then how are they going to get the documents? How are they going to compel the witnesses? Is it all going to be voluntary? Our very existence is on the line in order to have adequate, timely, and accurate intelligence to protect ourselves in this era of terrorism in which we find ourselves.

Where is common sense in this country?

Mr. JEFFORDS. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. NELSON of Florida. I am happy to yield to the distinguished ranking member of this committee, as we consider this transportation bill, even though we are talking about other very timely topics.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Is my understanding correct that the Senator said there will be no authority to be able to get documents or be able to subpoena information?

Mr. NELSON of Florida. This is what I was informed this morning by the leadership of this, that this commission is not going to have the ability to subpoena. If that commission that has just been announced over the weekend doesn't have the ability to subpoena people—witnesses and documents—then how can we get at the truth?

What we want to do is get at the truth. We were told there were weapons of mass destruction and we were told there were unmanned aerial vehicles, pilotless drones, and we were told there was even a potential plan to put those drones on ships off the Atlantic coast to drop those chemical and biological weapons over eastern seaboard American cities, and all of that turned out not to be true.

We were told that was the gospel truth when, in fact, as the Washington Post reported a week ago, there was a huge dispute in the intelligence community, including Air Force intelligence which knows best about unmanned aerial vehicles, and, as reported by the Post, that those UAVs did not exist to drop biological and chemical weapons.

So why were we not told that there was a dispute in the intelligence community? It was presented to us before we voted on that resolution in October of 2002 as if it were the gospel truth.

The long and short of it is the whole point of a commission is to get to the truth so we don't make these mistakes in the future. If the commission—a so-called independent commission—is not given the power to subpoena, how in the world are you going to get to the truth?

Mr. JEFFORDS. Being one of those who never believed there was a threat of any kind and a sufficient level to warrant the war, it shocks me to find out the route being set up to verify what I believed to be the truth will have no power to find the truth. This is very disturbing for me.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. The distinguished 9/11 commission composed of well-respected and very accomplished people, headed by former Governor of New Jersey Kean and so many other distinguished citizens on that panel questioning the intelligence and trying to find out what went wrong on the September 11 attack, has been frustrated over and over again by delays and a lack of willingness to come forth with the information. If they have had that experience in the last year and a half, why are we to think this next so-called independent commission is going to have any different experience? I think, since what is at stake is the security of our homeland, raw election year politics is getting in the way much to the frustration of those members of the panel and certainly to the frustration of this Senator.

Mr. JEFFORDS. I thank the Senator from Florida for enlightening me on this very disturbing news. I will do whatever I can, working with him and with others, to make sure we get the kind of resolution for finding the information which should be ours to be able to make judgments. I thank the Senator very much for his statement.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Mr. President, I yield the floor.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The senior assistant journal clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

INTELLIGENCE COMMUNITY ASSESSMENTS

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I rise to comment on the controversy surrounding the intelligence community's assessments of Iraq's weapons of mass destruction programs and capabilities in the months leading up to the military action in Iraq.

It has been suggested that the intelligence community failed policymakers by presenting a picture of Iraq's WMD capacities that appears to have been far more advanced than the reality on the ground. It has been suggested that, as we have all heard, certain pieces of information were presented as certainties when, in reality, the accuracy of the information was very much in dispute among experts within the intelligence community.

I made a concerted effort to go to every briefing that was offered, and I think I largely succeeded, or maybe had entirely succeeded. I went to briefings for all Members, and I also went, of course, to the special briefings that were held for members of the Foreign Relations Committee. I am not a member of the Intelligence Committee and perhaps that committee had access to information dramatically different from what was put before the rest of us.

What I recall is that the CIA representatives who briefed us were careful and their statements were qualified. As CIA Director George Tenet recently indicated, it was made clear disagreements existed about how to interpret some pieces of information.

What I remember about the CIA is that they played it straight. I wish I could say the same about the political rhetoric that some in the administration used to characterize the content of those briefings.

Of course, I am certainly not saying the CIA is perfect or that the U.S. intelligence community is perfect. No one who reviewed the joint Intelligence Committee's report on 9/11 would make such a claim. And I am not asserting that all of the CIA's information and analysis presented in the lead-up to the Iraq war was correct. But what I am saying is, in the many briefings I attended I simply saw no evidence—no evidence—to support the accusations that the CIA was trying to spin the facts or that they were trying to lead us in one direction or another.

My sense was that they were professionals, and I remember being very grateful for their thorough and candid presentations. In fact, in those briefings, they didn't give us easy answers, and that made our decisions tougher. But the people expect us to make tough decisions.

Time and again, I came away from the briefing room concerned about the unanswered questions related to Iraq's chemical and biological weapons capacities. But I also came away each time with the conclusion that we had no evidence of any imminent threat. Indeed, Director Tenet acknowledged that the CIA never characterized Iraq's WMD programs as an imminent threat when Mr. Tenet made his remarks last week.

When the President of the United States called Iraq "a threat of unique urgency," that sure sounded a lot like imminent to many ears. When senior officials, speaking about Iraq, told us they did not want the smoking gun to be a mushroom cloud, that sure sounded like an imminent threat of nuclear attack to most Americans.

Yet just last week, CIA Director Tenet reminded the country the agency made two judgments that are too often overlooked today. They said:

> Saddam did not have a nuclear weapon and probably would have been unable to make one until 2007 to 2009.

Of course, that is a serious issue certainly but not an imminent threat.

The fact that the briefings we received did not present a picture of an imminent threat certainly did not mean there was no cause for concern or that the right course of action would have been to do nothing. Those who claim the only choices before us were rushing to war or being utterly complacent are quite simply misleading the American people.

I had long supported regime change in Iraq, and I am pleased that Saddam Hussein's regime has fallen. But the facts did not suggest that we had to invade Iraq in March of 2003. That means we could have had more time to build a solid international coalition, to combat some of the most damaging misperceptions of American motives and intentions, and more time to put in place a plan of action that would address our security interests without leaving American troops and American taxpayers holding the bag at the end of the day, bogged down in a risky occupation and mortgaging our children's future to pay for it.

Director Tenet said last week: To understand a difficult topic like Iraq takes patience and care. He is right. The same is true of understanding this debate and this controversy. That is why it is so important to discuss these issues carefully and responsibly. It is important because the stakes are so very high and because the public, especially our men and women in uniform and their families, who take tremendous risks and make tremendous sacrifices to serve this country, has every right to know what happened, what the facts were, what we got right and what we got wrong.

One of the difficulties for those of us who attend classified briefings, of course, is that we have an obligation to protect the content of those briefings. So we are limited in what we can say publicly. We are left to generalize and we run the risk of characterizing the same briefings in very different ways, leading us to debates about one person's interpretation versus another's. For this reason, an independent commission is desperately needed.

I am glad the President has agreed to establish a commission to examine our prewar intelligence. But I am concerned about the specifics of the commission's mandate. It is charged with examining the intelligence community's capacity to collect, process, analyze, produce, and disseminate information concerning the capabilities, intentions, and activities of foreign powers relating to the design, development, manufacture and acquisition, possession, proliferation, transfer, testing, potential or threatened use or use of WMD, related means of delivery, and other related threats of the 21st century. All of this, of course, is useful.

In the wake of the horror of September 11, 2001, we must make every effort to ensure that America's intelligence services are as reliable and effective and accountable as they possibly can be. As I have indicated, I believe a large part of our problem in the runup to the war in Iraq was a problem of how intelligence was used, how it was invoked, sometimes out of context, and how in some cases it was used in powerful and often frightening rhetoric aimed at painting a much more conclusive picture than the actual intelligence revealed.

Intelligence, as all data, can be manipulated. I am concerned about the appearance of a concerted effort to interpret information to justify a seemingly predetermined course of action and to too easily disregard information that could not be used for this purpose. I think such an approach serves no one. I think it actually diminishes American power. I think it risks making this country far less secure.

So we must investigate matters such as the activities of the Office of Special Plans at the Pentagon, which seems to have been charged with sifting through information to assemble only those pieces that bolstered the case for going to war.

We must also address the way that intelligence was alluded to in public settings, in ways that painted a much more decisive picture than actually existed. Obviously, not all Americans could be in the briefing room, but all Americans hear the public debate.

Those of us who receive and act on classified briefings have a vitally important responsibility to ensure that we never abuse their trust. I believe we need to make sure that in our efforts to review intelligence-gathering capacities and analysis capacities we do not fail to take a hard look at how policymakers employ intelligence in public remarks. Our words and our characterizations matter. The context that it is or is not provided matters. Even now some would insist that Iraq was a threat to America because even if Saddam Hussein did not have WMD, he had the capacity to make a weapon. But chemical or biological weapons could be produced in dual-use facilities in almost every country that has any significant domestic, pharmaceutical, or chemical manufacturing capacity.

This is a serious issue to be sure, but it does not make the case for the threat of unique urgency a good case. It does not make for a threat of unique urgency directed at the American people.

Finally, I propose that we need to take a look at how people responded and prepared for things we were warned about in briefings about Iraq, some of which then became public knowledge. Given what we all heard in the briefing room about the possibility that Iraq continued to possess biological and chemical weapons stockpiles and given the administration's clear belief that such stockpiles existed, why was there no better policy planning and execution when it came to rounding up these things?

Former chief weapons inspector David Kay has suggested that we may just all have to live with, as he called it, an unresolved ambiguity about what happened, that he traces to the failure on April 9 to establish immediate physical security in Iraq.

The looting that ensued has introduced a host of alarming unknowns into our consideration of what might have happened to the materiel that may or may not have existed in the first place and, quite frankly, any assertion that the United States would not have anticipated this looting has no credibility whatsoever. From think tanks to military planners to nongovernmental organizations, there were multiple, consistent, and high-level warnings about the risks of chaos and looting in the wake of the regime's fall.

There were plenty of questions about this issue which were never satisfactorily answered in the lead-up to war. In fact, I spent over 6 months, primarily in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, repeatedly asking whatever administration witness I could the same important questions. For example, I remember asking Secretary Powell in 2002: Are you aware of any significant planning for securing weapons of mass destruction sites in Iraq in the event of a military invasion if the Government would be toppled and some degree of chaos were to rein for some period? Is there not a very real risk that WMD and the means to make them will be taken out of the country or sold off to exactly the kind of nonstate actors that the United States is worried about? Do we know enough about where WMD sites are to be confident in our ability to secure them, I asked the Secretary of State?

Secretary Powell could provide no details. He simply assured me that our military planners were making this issue their highest priority. Those military planners never provided any details, either.

In the end, we are left with video footage of the unchecked looting of the country, with unanswered questions, with David Kay's unresolved ambiguity. So we have a case of inadequate follow-up on a vitally important issue presented to us by the intelligence community and that, too, is something we need to review and address in the interest of national security.

We have a lot of work to do. Some of that certainly does involve reforms of the intelligence community. I believe our biggest problems did not come in the briefing room. In the interest of our national security, in the interest of protecting the public's trust in Government, in the interest of this country's global prestige and power to persuade, we have to avoid scapegoating tactics. We have to face some hard truths about the process and the rhetoric that led this country into Iraq in March 2003.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I came to the Chamber to speak about the highway bill, and obviously we hope to be talking about that later on today, but having taken the responsibility of serving on the Intelligence Committee, I thought I might add a few comments to the discussions begun by my colleague from Wisconsin.

Let's be clear; the Senate Intelligence Committee on a bipartisan basis has launched a massive effort to determine whether our intelligence was accurate, where it had holes in it, where are our assessments and our estimates.

In intelligence, they are all estimates. The only time there is absolute confirmation that something has happened is when the World Trade Center comes down or when the Pentagon is hit. Then one knows that terrorists have planned something and have executed it.

We were dealing with an intelligence system that provided estimates throughout the 1990s and no action was taken. The intelligence service provided estimates about the danger of Osama bin Laden. We considered all kinds of actions, and then September 11 happens.

Now, the September 11 commission goes in to try to determine why we did not act on the intelligence we had. The big charge there is that something should have been done about Osama bin Laden. Well, there are now published reports on the intelligence, and I would refer my colleagues to Richard Miniter's book "Losing bin Laden." There were many instances where it was clear that Osama bin Laden was planning to attack the United States. In several instances, it appeared that in the 1990s we might have had an opportunity to deal with Osama bin Laden in one way or another and we chose not to do it. So right after September 11 we are looking backwards and saying, Why did we not act? Now my colleagues, primarily on the other side of the aisle, are saying, Why did we act in Iraq?

Let's be perfectly clear. When people start talking about imminent threat, seeming to imply that the President said there was an imminent threat, I distinctly remember the State of the Union message in which the President said: We cannot wait until there is an imminent threat. In essence, he was saying we cannot wait until we see the second airplane heading for the second tower of the World Trade Center.

Why were we suspicious of Saddam Hussein? The same reason President Clinton, Secretary Albright, Secretary Cohen, Security Council Chief Sandy Berger had? They said Saddam Hussein was a real and great threat. He was in flagrant violation of all the U.N. resolutions which followed on the ceasefire in the first gulf war.

He kicked the inspectors out in 1998. We know he was the only despot alive, the only tyrant ruling a country, who used weapons of mass destruction, and he kicked the inspectors out without ever saying what he had done with them.

Sure, there will be things we can find out about what we should have done differently in intelligence. There has already been public discussion about the lack of human intelligence resources. We may find that. We may find other things when we complete our work in the Intelligence Committee and submit a report to be fully declassified and discussed.

We need to make our intelligence system better. I think we have gone a long way. The PATRIOT Act broke down the walls between the CIA and the FBI, which legislatively prohibited them sharing information. That was a mistake. We have changed that.

Some of my colleagues say we ought to look at the use, look at what people said about that. You don't need to have a commission to do that. You have a Lexis-Nexis search to find out what people said. Are some people making charges? Yes, everybody has a right to make their comments about whether they believed the intelligence. A lot of that intelligence has been laid out in the public.

I was astounded at the degree to which Secretary Powell's discussion before the United Nations in February of 2003 went into so much of the intelligence we had at the time. That was out on the table. That was the best intelligence Secretary Powell had. Published reports indicate he went through that intelligence himself and asked questions and only used those things about which he was personally satisfied the intelligence estimates were accurate.

So, yes, use—we did use it. We did act. Saddam Hussein is no longer ruling a country, murdering hundreds of thousands, if not millions, of people. We pulled him out of a spider hole. He said he was a great ruler of the Iraqi people. He wanted to negotiate. Well, he is in jail.

You know something. Muammar Qadhafi in Libya took a look at what happened to Saddam Hussein and said: "Oh, I don't think I want to wind up like Saddam Hussein did." That is what he told Italian President Berlesconi. "I don't want to see happen to me what happened to Saddam Hussein." So he is coming clean based on the information we had gathered about his weaponry, his participation with Dr. Kahn of Pakistan. We knew he had weapons and was working on a weapons program and he came clean. I think that makes a great deal of sense.

There has been a tremendous change in the Middle East. There has been a change because Saddam Hussein no longer rules. It is a tragedy when we lose American lives. It is a tragedy when Iraqi lives are lost. But the Iraqis are slowly but steadily taking back control of their country.

Let's talk about what David Kay found. David Kay said when all the facts are known, it will appear, I believe, that Saddam Hussein was a far greater danger than our intelligence even knew. Our intelligence was not adequate before the first gulf war. We didn't know how far along he was at that time with his nuclear program. We did not know, apparently, according to Dr. Kay, how far along he was with his long-range missile program. It was a country, Dr. Kay said, which was attracting terrorists like ants to honey, to come to a country busily engaged in pursuing means of getting at the infidels. That means anybody who doesn't agree with them.

It is clear Ansar al-Islam had a ricin factory manufacturing that potent chemical, attempting to weaponize it, in northeast Iraq. It was under the direction of al Zarqawi. Ansar al-Islam is part of the brotherhood with al-Qaida.

By the way, you probably read in the New York Times about what we learned about the memo, from al Zarqawi. He was totally frustrated because he thinks the infidel, i.e., the coalition, our coalition, seems to be winning. We are making progress. We are turning Iraq back to the Iraqis and we have not cut and run. Their effort to conduct jihad is getting more and more difficult as we get more and more Iraqis engaged as police, as soldiers.

Danger still exists, but the danger that Saddam Hussein or the terrorist groups operating out of Iraq will be able to do so with impunity and continue to pursue their weapons of mass destruction programs is much less now that Saddam Hussein is in captivity.

You can talk about what the President said, what the President did, but I believe what we are seeing in the Middle East, what we have heard publicly from Dr. Kay, indicates we have taken a major step toward lessening the likelihood of terrorist attacks on the United States and toward stabilizing the Middle East so it will no longer be a hotbed and a haven for terrorists.

I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Missouri for his remarks. Perhaps they were intended as response to my remarks or perhaps they were general remarks, but my remarks have to do with the fact there is a perception in this country that somehow the briefings the CIA gave us with regard to Iraq were distorted or inappropriate or oversold the case for the war.

My purpose here was to indicate that is not the way I saw it. I was in those briefings. As I have indicated, I felt the CIA was very measured and careful in its presentation.

The Senator from Missouri can talk as much as he wants about whether Iraq worked or not, and what the consequences are. But there are real consequences when Members of both parties decide to tell the public the misinformation or the problems were the fault of the CIA.

I think that is dangerous for the CIA. I think it is dangerous for our country. I think it is dangerous for how we are perceived in the world.

Some of the members of the other party—including the administration, frankly—and some of the members of my own party are pointing their fingers at what we heard in the briefings. I want everyone to know that I went to the briefings. I did not hear a compelling case for the war to be conducted at that time.

Regardless of what has happened since, I would be happy to debate at any point whether it was the right thing to do and whether how we did it was the right thing to do. Regardless of all that, the point is, as one Senator who went to those briefings and did not hear the case made, I give the CIA credit for being measured and careful. And we should thank Mr. Tenet for his leadership.

I yield the floor.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I rise today to talk about a truly bad idea that has been proposed on this floor. I believe an amendment was discussed yesterday when I was not here—I didn't have an opportunity to hear it—to provide stiff sanctions on States which do not have primary seatbelt laws. The goal is to move every State up to 90 percent seatbelt use. It specifically says States would be sanctioned if they did not meet one of the following two conditions within 3 years of the enactment of this bill: Either have a primary seatbelt law which would allow law enforcement to pull over a driver if that officer sees the driver is not wearing a seatbelt without having to arrest them for any other infraction, or the State does not get up to a 90 percent seatbelt use rate.

In other words, it would require a State to achieve a 90 percent seatbelt use, and it left it up to the individual States on how to get there.

The objective of getting to 90 percent seatbelt use is a worthwhile one. As Governor of Missouri, I talked often about the need for seatbelts.

When I was young, the primary entertainment when we weren't listening to Cardinal baseball was to crawl under the fence and go out and watch the stock car races. I watched stock car races every Friday night. Sometimes I paid to get in but not often. There were horrendous wrecks every night. Yet the drivers wore harnesses and seatbelts. I saw one driver taken off. He had severe alcohol poisoning because of fuel he had taken internally. But I never saw anybody hurt.

I have been in two serious crashes in my life. Both times I had on a seatbelt. I was shaken up and scared. In the first one, the other driver was taken to the hospital unconscious. I did not find out until the next day whether he had survived.

I am a believer in seatbelt use. I have sponsored and pushed for seatbelts and for safety seats for infants. I tried to get them on airplanes. But I don't believe taking money away from the 36 States that don't have primary seatbelt laws is a way to get there.

If the State fails to meet either of the conditions—either the 90-percent seatbelt use rate or enactment of a primary seatbelt law—the State would lose 2 percent of its general highway safety funds, and the sanction increases to 4 percent for each successive year. The sanctions approach would decrease the amount of funding available to make the necessary investment in safety for their transportation system. States that do not enact a primary seatbelt law or do not achieve a 90-percent use rate will get less funding and fall behind other States in safety. That is not the way to encourage States to increase safety. That is a way to make some States fall further behind.

I know more lives can be saved with seatbelts. Good friends of mine who are troopers have said they have never unbuckled a dead driver from a seatbelt, although they have taken a lot of dead people out of cars in car accidents. I do not believe, however, the Federal Government should sanction States, trying to get people to use seatbelts. The Federal Government would force enactment of primary seatbelt laws. This approach is essentially Federal blackmail by Congress. It is telling the States we are not going to return the money you pay into the Federal highway trust fund because some of us in Washington, DC, think your State legislature and your Governor need to enact this law. Well, that is the purpose of the folks we elect at the State level to represent us in our general assemblies and to represent us in our Governors' offices.

I held the office of Governor at one point. I spent an awful lot of time looking at federally imposed mandates, many of which did not make any sense. They told us, for example, we had to use our clean water funds to clean up water from our major cities going back into the Missouri and Mississippi Rivers, putting in water that was higher quality than was already in the river. We wanted to use it on the pristine Ozark streams where small communities and septic tanks were seriously downgrading streams which had been fishable, swimmable, and drinkable. The priority did not make sense for Missouri.

I came up here to try to work with the States, not to tell States that we are not going to send back money you send to Washington unless you adopt our idea.

Only 20 States have decided to enact a primary seatbelt law. Other States have decided a primary seatbelt law is not the way to increase seatbelt usage.

Missouri has made great strides in seatbelt use, and this has been done without a primary seatbelt law. As you can see on this chart, the States which have primary seatbelt laws have the bold numbers. You start out with Alabama, California, Connecticut, the District of Columbia—everybody in the District of Columbia knows you get pulled over if you are not wearing a seatbelt—Georgia, Hawaii, Indiana, Iowa, Louisiana, Maryland, and Michigan, to name the lefthand side.

You can see what progress they have made. Alabama has a primary seatbelt law. In 2002, they had 79 percent usage, and it fell back to 77 percent in 2003. They went down. Other States are nowhere near that. Virginia, for example, has no primary seatbelt law, apparently, according to this chart. In 2003 it only had 75 percent seatbelt usage. The good news is, reduction in non-use, from 30 percent to 25 percent, was a 17-percent reduction.

The State of Missouri has gone from 31-percent non-use to 27-percent non-use without the seatbelt law. Why should this body say we are going to take money away from the State of Missouri because we don't like the way you are reducing non-usage of seatbelts?

I think public statements—and I certainly have made them, and will continue to make them—educational campaigns and incentives are the way to go to improve usage.

When you look at this chart, you see a lot of States with seatbelt usage that is definitely below 90 percent. For most of them, the usage is 70 and 80 percent. We are making progress. We ought to continue to do that with incentives. If you give States incentives, they have the flexibility to use their own solutions to increase seatbelt use. That flexibility would be lost. States would be limited in their ability to educate the public with regard to the importance of highway safety. They would lose safety money. That makes no sense.

The enforcement of primary seatbelt laws costs the State a lot of money, from increased law enforcement personnel, hours of work for clerical representation, and prosecutions. Is that the best way to use their law enforcement people? I think that is something that is better left to the authorities in the individual States.

We have to stop this sanctions approach and, I believe, use incentives. Under title I, under the Commerce Committee report, NHTSA would be authorized to use over $3.5 billion in grant funding and approximately $800 million for vehicle safety-related rules. The NHTSA programs would pay strong attention to driver safety and seatbelt use.

Under the National Highway Safety Program, section 104 grants would be administered by NHTSA in three high-visibility areas of safety: to reduce alcohol-impaired driving, drug-impaired driving, and increase seatbelt usage. I believe that is the appropriate way to go.

The amendment that was described yesterday represents a double penalty for States that do not enact primary seatbelt laws. In fiscal year 2005 and thereafter, 10 percent of section 148 funds—those are funds for highway safety improvement—would be transferred to the section 402 program unless the State has a primary safety belt law or has achieved at least a 90-percent safety belt use rate.

Beginning in 2007, 2 percent of the interstate maintenance, surface transportation, and bridge programs would be withheld from States that do not have a primary seatbelt law or a 90-percent usage rate. The percentage withheld would rise to 4 percent in fiscal year 2008 and thereafter. If Congress enacts these sanctions, we are not likely to authorize incentives. The States have used section 157 safety belt incentive grant funding to support national safety belt mobilization and other safety belt enforcement activities. Without the incentives, the States would have drastically reduced resources for those purposes.

I believe enactment of a primary safety belt penalty mandate, forced upon the States, is premature and unwarranted. There has never been a sufficient program to convince the States to enact primary seatbelt laws or to find other means of increasing usage and decreasing nonusage of seatbelts.

Under the Senate Commerce bill, the new safety belt incentive grant program would provide the States with a grant of five times their apportionment if they enact a primary seatbelt law. We need to see if this program works and see if it is effective.

Many Governors and State legislatures oppose penalties and sanctions. There are currently 18 penalties and sanctions, 7 of which are highway safety related. Increasingly, Congress has relied on punishing the States if they do not meet safety performance objectives. As a result, I think there is an understandable revolt and reaction growing to this approach. The "Mother May I" coming to Washington is bad enough, but when "Mama Federal Government" tells us: "You have to do it this way or you don't get your supper," particularly when your voters, your constituents, your taxpayers have been the ones who have paid for that supper, that is, I think, a real problem. Typically, State legislatures being forced to do this are going to rebel, and I think it is very inappropriate.

We have a letter from the executive director of the American Association of State Highway and Transportation Officials; the executive director of the Governors Highway Safety Association; the president and chief executive officer of the American Highway Users Alliance; the executive director of the International Association of Chiefs of Police; the executive director of the Commercial Vehicle Safety Alliance; the chief executive officer of the Associated General Contractors of America; the executive director of the American Traffic Safety Services Association; the executive director of the National Conference of State Legislatures; the executive director of the American Road & Transportation Builders Association; the president of the American Council of Engineering Companies; the vice president of Public Affairs of AAA, and the executive director of the National Governors Association, all saying:

> . . . we oppose the use of penalties and sanctions.
>
> Our organization supports the underlying safety goals. We believe the use of sanctions and penalties reflect an all-or-nothing approach that forces absolute and unconditional compliance with Federal safety requirements or goals while stifling innovation and redirecting funds from highway construction and maintenance projects with tangible safety benefits.

That makes the case very well.

I ask unanimous consent to print this letter in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

JANUARY 30, 2004.

Hon. Senator BOND,
U.S. Senate, Russell Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR BOND: The organization listed below represent a broad array of national, state and local elected leaders, policymakers and transportation and highway safety interests. Our organizations oppose the use of sanctions and penalties. We believe the use of sanctions and penalties reflect an all-or-nothing approach that forces absolute and unconditional compliance with federal safety requirements or goals while stifling innovation and redirecting funds from highway construction and maintenance projects with tangible safety benefits.

Currently states face eight highway safety-related sanctions and penalties that are designed to force compliance with various federal highway safety mandates or goals including enactment, by specified deadlines, of various types of state safety legislation. While our organizations support the underlying safety goals, we oppose the use of penalties and sanctions. In fact, many of our organizations have adopted the new United States Department of Transportation's safety goal of 1.0 fatalities per hundred million vehicle miles of overall highway travel by 2008—a one-third reduction in today's rate. Sanctions and penalties decrease the amount of funding available to the states to make necessary investments to the highway system, compromising the construction, rehabilitation, operation and maintenance of a safe highway system. Fewer resources to invest means delays in roadway and intersection improvements, fewer dollars for upgrading highway signage and markings, and less funding available for investment in safety research.

We urge you to employ incentives and positive strategies to encourage states to accomplish both public safety and transportation-related objectives rather than adopting a negative sanctions approach. Incentives from an increased overall multiyear funding program give states the flexibility and resources to find creative solutions to safety problems that fit their needs while ensuring stable funding for improving, constructing, operating and maintaining safe highways.

As you consider reauthorization of the Transportation Equity Act for the 21st Century (TEA 21), we urge you to reject any changes to current law that would impose new sanctions or penalties on the states for failure to comply with federal highway safety mandates and goals.

Sincerely,

John Horsley, Executive Director, American Association of State Highway and Transportation Officials; Barbara L. Harsha, Executive Director, Governors Highway Safety Association; Diane Steed, President and Chief Executive Officer, The American Highway Users

Alliance; David Rosenblatt, Executive Director, International Association of Chiefs of Police; Stephen Campbell, Executive Director, Commercial Vehicle Safety Alliance; Stephen Sandherr, Chief Executive Officer, Associated General Contractors of America.

Roger Wentz, Executive Director, American Traffic Safety Services Association; William T. Pound, Executive Director, National Conference of State Legislatures; Peter Ruane, Executive Director, American Road & Transportation Builders Association; David A. Raymond, President, American Council of Engineering Companies; Susan Pikrallidas, Vice President, Public Affairs, AAA; Ray Scheppach, Executive Director, National Governors Association.

Mr. BOND. I urge my colleagues to oppose any effort to mandate primary laws or arbitrary usage of seatbelts on the States.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The senior assistant bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I would like to continue my discussion about key provisions of S. 1072. In particular, I would like to discuss some of the bicycle and pedestrian provisions. According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, 5,600 pedestrians and bicyclists were killed in traffic accidents in 2001. Tens of thousands more were injured in traffic accidents.

In that same year, more than one-fifth of the bikers killed in traffic crashes were between the ages of 5 and 15, our Nation's children. Pedestrian and bicyclist fatality numbers have been slowly decreasing over the years, but one death is too many. We must improve our record.

S. 1072 provides resources to help States address this safety problem. Our bill reauthorizes the bicycle/pedestrian provisions found in TEA-21. We recognize the importance of these provisions. More people walking and bicycling means fewer people in cars. It means healthier communities and a cleaner environment. We should promote it. Under our proposal, States may continue to use core program dollars to fund improvements for bicyclists and pedestrians.

However, if we really want to encourage people to walk and bicycle around our communities, we must make these activities safer. Mr. President, 5,600 fatalities is an unacceptable number.

In addition to reauthorizing current programs, our bill directs the Secretary of Transportation to make safety grants to fund an information clearinghouse and educational programs to promote bicycle and pedestrian safety. These provisions will support existing efforts to improve bicycle and pedestrian access to transportation facilities and to enhance safety for all transportation users.

I believe that these provisions in the bill, if taken into use by our States and communities, will do a great deal to protect the children presently in our system and in the future.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

RECESS

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, after conferring with both sides of the aisle, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate stand in recess under the previous order.

There being no objection, the Senate, at 12:19 p.m., recessed until 2:17 p.m. and reassembled when called to order by the Presiding Officer (Mr. VOINOVICH).

Mr. REID. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ORDER OF PROCEDURE

Mr. INHOFE. I ask unanimous consent that the Senator from New York, Mrs. CLINTON, be recognized for up to 5 minutes as in morning business and then for me to reclaim the floor at the conclusion of her remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from New York.

OUTSOURCING AMERICAN JOBS

Mrs. CLINTON. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Oklahoma.

I rise today because I could not believe my eyes when I saw this headline in the Los Angeles Times today: "Bush Supports Shift of Jobs Overseas." If one reads this article, it is clear the concern I feel on behalf of my constituents, who are finding their jobs going to other countries, is not shared in the White House. In fact, Gregory Mankiw, the President's Chair of the Council of Economic Advisers, has this to say:

> Outsourcing is just a new way of doing international trade. More things are tradable than were tradable in the past. And that's a good thing.

I do not think outsourcing American jobs is a new kind of trade. I do not think we should be thinking of our people as commodities, and I certainly do not believe it is a good thing. If the other end of Pennsylvania believes it is a good thing to have companies shift jobs from America to the rest of the world, then maybe they do not have a clue about what it is going to take to bring jobs back to this country and create the kind of economic prosperity that will put our people back to work again.

Of course, this goes hand in hand with the budget the President sent up, which cuts investments and workforce training of dislocated workers, which underscores the failure to push for stricter standards or real enforcement of labor and environmental standards in our trade agreements, has no plans to address rising health care costs or legacy health and pension costs that are strangling American manufacturing companies, and apparently does not care we are now outsourcing radiologists and engineers, people we told to go get a good education, get that college degree, get that advanced degree; there will always be a place for you in the American economy. If this is what the opinion is on the other end of Pennsylvania Avenue—"Bush Supports Shift of Jobs Overseas"—I certainly hope this body will join to pass a resolution repudiating this strategy. This is a strategy for decline. This is a strategy for the destruction of the American job market.

We will be presenting a resolution, a sense of Senate, to stand against this philosophy in the White House that turns a blind eye to the damage that is being done to the American economy: The loss of jobs, the loss of income, the loss of self-confidence and prestige that is now sweeping our land.

I hope both sides of the aisle, Democrats and Republicans, will join in a sense-of-the-Senate resolution saying: We don't know what they are drinking up there in the White House, we don't know what the Council of Economic Advisers is reading, but we in the Senate do not believe shifting jobs overseas is a good economic strategy and we want, once and for all, to not only repudiate that but to come together with real plans and policies that will keep our jobs here and make it possible for us to promise the American workforce that this economy will be creating opportunities for them and they will not be watching the American dream be outsourced as well.

Mr. President, I thank my colleague from Oklahoma for his kindness in letting me express and vent my frustration about this headline and the words coming out of the White House at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CRAPO). Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 2276 WITHDRAWN

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be allowed to withdraw amendment No. 2276 on behalf of Senator DORGAN.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

COMMITTEE AMENDMENT IN THE NATURE OF A SUBSTITUTE WITHDRAWN

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, with the approval of the committee, I now withdraw the committee substitute amendment.

AMENDMENT NO. 2285

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I now send a substitute amendment to the desk and ask for its consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Oklahoma (Mr. INHOFE) proposes an amendment numbered 2285.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The amendment is printed in today's RECORD under "Text of Amendments.")

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

CLOTURE MOTION

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I send a cloture motion on the pending substitute to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The cloture motion having been presented under rule XXII, the Chair directs the clerk to read the motion.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

CLOTURE MOTION

We the undersigned Senators, in accordance with the provisions of Rule XXII of the Standing Rules of the Senate, do hereby move to bring to a close debate on the pending substitute to Calendar No. 426, S. 1072, a bill to authorize funds for Federal-Aid Highways, Highway Safety Programs, and Transit Programs, and for other purposes.

Bill Frist, James Inhofe, Christopher Bond, Gordon Smith, Lamar Alexander, Richard G. Lugar, Pat Roberts, Robert F. Bennett, Mike Crapo, Jim Bunning, Ted Stevens, Conrad Burns, Chuck Hagel, Charles Grassley, Trent Lott, Saxby Chambliss.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I will allow the manager to explain what went on so our colleagues will fully understand, but I wish to make a statement. I encourage colleagues who are interested in bringing amendments to the floor to do that and continue to work in that vein. Again, my whole purpose over the last week and a half we have been on this bill has been to make sure people could come to the floor to discuss the bill, and if there are amendments people feel strongly, we are going to continue to move forward.

The objective of the leadership on both sides of the aisle is to complete this bill this week. I encourage people to come to the floor if they have amendments and to talk to the managers this afternoon.

I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. INHOFE. Since this process started, we have been encouraging people to come to discuss their amendments. We are now in a position where they can actually offer their amendments. We had quite a few Members who worked over the weekend, who also had their staff working. They brought amendments down, and I thank all of those Members.

We visited with them. As the managers, we accepted some. I think now we are at the point where we do encourage our Members to bring their amendments. While we are in this stage right now, let me share a couple of points that I think are very significant.

There has been a lot of discussion that the formulas are unfair to some States. I suggest that in almost every case where there is a donee State that becomes a donor State, it is by a very small amount. On the average, the disparity between donee and donor is far less.

In approaching this, we actually took the average donor and put 4 cents on it and then from the donee took 4 cents off. I think it is a very fair way of doing it. But when people talk about the formulas, let's keep in mind the formulas are real. They have not been real in the past. They were not real in TEA-21. They tried to do it but they ended up with a minimum guarantee, which is a political document.

The formulas include such things as total lane miles on the interstate, on principal arterial routes; vehicle miles traveled; annual contributions to the highway trust fund attributed to commercial vehicles; diesel fuel used on highways; relative share of total cost to repair or replace deficient highway bridges. That is one I am particularly interested in since, as I have said many times, my State of Oklahoma is dead last in terms of the conditions of bridges; weighted nonattainment and maintenance areas; rate of return of donor States. All of those are in the formula.

This is the first time, since we started this process—at least since I have been here in 1991 when ISTEA came out—that we actually are using the formula and staying with it. It has not been easy, because people who do not like the way their State was treated come down and say all kinds of detrimental things about the formula, about our motives, about the bill in general.

The bottom line is, we have been honest with the Senate and honest with all of the States.

I do not think it will shock anyone to hear that there were political considerations in the past. We know that from the other body. The House Member from Pennsylvania was always very aggressive in getting the most he could for his State. I think a lot of them are like that, and we have corrected a lot of those.

I would say this: Of all of the ones who are the big players in TEA 21, and that was 1998, there was Senator Moynihan, whom we loved so much. His State was 1.25. We had Pennsylvania, which was Congressman Shuster, 1.21; Rhode Island, of course, Chairman Chafee, 2.17; the Senator from Montana was not only the ranking on the committee but also on the subcommittee, 2.18. At the same time all of that happened, my State was .9050, so we are way down there.

With SAFETEA, our percentages really do not change that much. We do ultimately bring everybody up to 95 percent and that is what this will do. Some are dissatisfied because they do not get up to 95 percent until the sixth year. It is unfortunate we could not come up with any other way, but it would cost so much money that if we did that, the ones who would be paying for it would be the donee States, and that would not be fair to them.

So I feel very good about where we are today. I think we have a fair bill. Very few people in this Chamber know the hours, the months, and the years that have been involved in this bill. Certainly the managers of the bill do because we have been working on this bill for such a long period of time.

Now that we have cloture filed, after it expires, it is our intention to go ahead and have a vote on cloture and get the bill completed. I believe it can be done this week.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be recognized for up to 7 minutes as if in morning business and then we return immediately to the bill, S. 1072.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator is recognized.

(The remarks of Mr. INHOFE are printed in today's RECORD under "Morning Business.")

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

AMENDMENT NO. 2286 TO AMENDMENT NO. 2285

(Purpose: To provide a highway safety improvement program that includes incentives to States to enact primary safety belt laws)

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Virginia [Mr. WARNER], for himself, Mrs. CLINTON, Mr. DEWINE, and Mrs. MURRAY, proposes an amendment numbered 2286.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The amendment is printed in today's RECORD under "Text of Amendments.")

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, this is an amendment I submitted the other day on behalf of myself, Senator CLINTON, and Senator DEWINE of Ohio. It is an amendment to increase our national seatbelt use rate to 90 percent, a concept that is well known to the Members of the Senate. This amendment is identical to the legislation I introduced last year, S. 1993.

As my colleagues examine the highway bill and what it means to each of our States, our foremost responsibility, in my judgment, and the judgment of many, as well as the judgment of the President of the United States, must be to improve highway safety for the driving public.

I commend the distinguished chairman of the Environment and Public Works Committee because he has a section in the bill on improving highway safety. But I fear that somehow the President's proposal—actually the proposal the President sent up to the Congress regarding the use of seatbelts—was not included in the final markup. It is for that reason I rise to include in this bill a provision that was sought by the President.

Simply by increasing the number of Americans who will buckle up is the most effective—I repeat, the most effective—step that can be taken to save their lives and the lives of others. That is the single most important step.

I am privileged to serve on the Environment and Public Works Committee, which has the primary responsibility for reauthorizing TEA-21. The bill addresses, as it should, highway safety measures such as how to build safer roads and how to use new technologies to improve safety.

But statistics show that the greatest measure of safety, again, to drivers, passengers, and possibly third parties not connected with the vehicle, is through the use of a seatbelt. It is remarkable the lives that have been saved through the use of this simple device. America has about a 79-percent use rate of seatbelts. Now, that is quite a commendation to the drivers all across this country. Seventy-nine percent of Americans, according to reliable statistics, use their seatbelts. That has been translated into the saving of tens of thousands of lives and injuries in automobile accidents. But I believe, as do many in this Chamber, we can do better.

Those are the facts. Are we just going to have a standstill or are we going to move forward? Senator CLINTON, Senator DEWINE, and I think we should move forward with a firmer approach with achievable goals and funding.

We have debated the benefits of seatbelt use on many occasions in this body and elsewhere across America. And whether it is in the town forums we conduct, town meetings, or here on the floor of the Senate, there is always that individual who comes back: Don't tell me what I have to do. What does it matter to you, JOHN WARNER—or to any other colleague with whom I am privileged to serve—what does it matter to you whether I buckle up?

Well, let's take a look. No one disputes that the absence of wearing a seatbelt causes more loss of life and serious injury. The statistics show that the impact associated with the crash, to the extent the driver can maintain control of the vehicle in those fatal seconds, the severity of the crash, and perhaps the loss of life can be reduced by the use of a safety belt—simply said.

Accidents involving unbelted drivers result in a significant cost to your wallet. Many people are rushed from the accident scene to various emergency facilities. All of that has the initial cost of the law enforcement that responds, the rescue squads that respond, and eventually the costs to the emergency room or whatever medical facility you might have the good fortune to be taken to, to hopefully save your life. That isn't free. There is a cost. Regrettably, a number of persons who suffer these types of injuries in automobile accidents are uninsured. Again, the cost often devolves down on the good old hard-working taxpayers—in most instances, the taxpayers who buckle up.

When an accident happens on our roads and highways across this great Nation, we are all impacted. Accidents cause significant congestion, which results in lost time and productivity as we try to get to our work or to our home along the highway where they are engaged in trying to remove the accident.

More often than not, the accident, with the combined slowdown of those passing the accident, causes significant congestion for some considerable portion of time. Either the lane in which we are traveling moves very slowly because of the accident or, indeed, we come to a standstill, as often is the case when a lane is closed to clear an accident. That standstill frequently is necessitated because of the severity of the injuries experienced in that accident. It takes the response team longer to get to the accident. It takes the response team longer in their carefully trained steps to extricate the injured person. All of that requires needed time.

To give the initial treatment and then to carefully transport that individual, if necessary, to a medical facility takes time. That costs money. The road becomes backed up. That is lost time for your mission on the road, be it for business, family, or pleasure. That is lost time and productivity. Behind you often are trucks and other vehicles involved in commerce. That is lost time and delay due to the seriousness occasioned by injuries and accidents where there has been the lack of use of seatbelts. It is as simple is that. Those are the facts. Then, of course, there is the cost to the community for caring for the injured person who, regrettably, frequently doesn't have the insurance to pay for his or her costs. The local people in your communities end up paying the bill.

The legislation we are proposing today will take an important step forward for the States to adopt either a primary safety belt law or take steps of their own devising to meet a 90-percent seatbelt rate—not the Warner amendment or the legislative measure put forth by the administration upon which we draw our concept for certain portions. The States can decide for themselves how they achieve a 90-percent goal of the use of seatbelts in their respective States. That is the purpose of this legislation—to move every State to a 90-percent use rate for safety belts.

In a letter dated November 12, 2003, to Chairman INHOFE of the Committee on Environment and Public Works, on which I am privileged to serve, Secretary Mineta stated:

> President Bush and I believe that increasing safety belt usage rates is the single most effective means to decrease highway fatalities and injuries.

That is explicit and clear. The Secretary goes on to say:

> The surest way for a State to increase safety belt usage is through the passage of a primary safety belt law.

I have had this debate with Governors and former Governors, even in this Chamber with former Governors. I think they would tell you that a primary safety belt law is a tough piece of legislation for the State legislature to pass solely on its own. I mean that. Frankly, it needs the impetus of those of us here in the Congress, of the combined efforts of the executive and the legislative branches of the Federal Government because it is just one of those things that State legislatures have extraordinary difficulty grappling with.

Regrettably, in my own State this law has come down to a single vote defeating it in two consecutive attempts. Stop to think, one vote in the distinguished General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Virginia has stopped our State from adopting this type of law.

I believe the impetus here will make it possible for our State and many others to adopt this statute.

As provided in our amendment, States can increase seatbelt use either by enacting, as I said, a primary seatbelt law. Everybody knows what a primary seatbelt law is and how it works. It means a law enforcement officer can literally stop a vehicle if they observe that the individual is not wearing his or her seatbelt. It is as simple as that. But a State, if they decide not to enact a primary safety belt law, can, by implementing their own strategies, whatever they may be—and there is a lot of innovation out in the States—that would result in a 90-percent safety belt use rate. So that is a challenge to the States.

The current national belt use, as I said, is 79 percent. But many States—those that have the primary law—are sometimes at 90, or even above 90, but those that do not have the primary seatblet law are down sometimes in the 60 percentile. It is the weight of the primary States that carries the percentile and brings it up to 79 from those States that don't have an effective law. States with their primary safety belt law have the greatest success for drivers wearing seatbelts.

On an average, States with the primary seatbelt law have a 10- to 15-percent higher seatbelt use compared to those with a secondary system. This demonstrates that secondary seatbelt laws are far more limited in their effectiveness than a primary law.

Essentially, the secondary laws say that if a law enforcement officer has cause other than a perceived or actual seatbelt violation—namely, the driver didn't have it buckled—if they have cause to stop that car, for example, for a speeding offense or a reckless driving offense or indeed an accident and they observed there has been no use of the seatbelt, then in the course of proceeding to enforce the several laws of the State as regards speeding or reckless driving, or whatever the case may be, they can add a second penalty to address the absence of the use of the seatbelt in that State.

Drivers are gamblers. They say: Oh, well, don't worry, I will not buckle up. State law doesn't require it. Unless they stop me—and they are not going to stop me today. It is that gambling attitude that, more often than not, will cause an accident. Then it is too late.

So we come forward today to build on our national programs. We are building on what we did in TEA-21. I was privileged to be on the committee. I was chairman of the subcommittee 6 years ago. I worked with Senator Chafee, who was chairman of the full committee, and we drove hard to make progress with the seatbelt laws, and we did it. We basically put aside a very considerable sum of money to encourage States—again, using their own devices—to increase uses. As a direct consequence of what we did in TEA-21, there has been an 11-percent increase in these 6 years in the use of seatbelts.

Sadly, traffic deaths in 2002 rose to the highest level in over a decade. It is astonishing. Of the nearly 43,000 people killed on our highways, over half were not wearing their seatbelts. That is according to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. And 9,200 of these deaths might have been prevented if the safety belt had been used.

Those are alarming statistics. Automobile crashes are the leading cause of death for Americans age 2 to 34. Stop to think of that: Age 2, that means a child; that means a parent neglected to buckle up a child. Automobile crashes as the leading cause of death for Americans age 2 to 34. That is our Nation's youth. Do we have a higher calling in the Congress of the United States than to do everything we can to foster the dreams and ambitions and the productivity of our Nation's youth? I think not. And this is one of the ways.

Last year, 6 out of 10 children who died in car crashes did not have the belt on—6 out of 10; that is over half. I plead with colleagues to join with me, join with the President who has taken this initiative.

My primary responsibility in the Senate—and this is one of the reasons I got interested in this subject—is the welfare of the men and women in the Armed Forces. I say to colleagues, again, the statistics are tragic. Traffic fatalities are the leading noncombat cause of death for our soldiers, sailors, airmen, and marines. They are in that high-risk age category, 18 to 35.

Someone even took a look at the statistics, the total of the fatalities least year, and said that represents in deaths approximately the size of the average U.S. Army battalion. That is several companies and maybe a reinforced element. Just think, that is the magnitude in one category of those who serve our United States, the men and women in the Armed Forces.

I cannot think of any reason why we all cannot join behind this effort. That alone is a driving impetus for this Senator.

The time is long overdue for a national policy to strengthen seatbelt use rates. I said a national policy, and that is what this bill represents, either through States enacting a primary seatbelt law or giving far greater attention to public awareness programs that result in more drivers and passengers wearing safety belts. Our goal is 90 percent—90 percent.

I have been privileged to serve on this committee 17 years, and I, together with many others, notably my dear friend and late chairman, Senator Chafee, addressed this issue. Our committee is rich in the history of focusing revenue from the highway trust fund on effective safety programs. It goes back through many chairmen and members of the committee.

With jurisdiction over the largest share of the highway trust fund, our committee has had the vision to tackle important national safety problems. The legislation before us does provide more funding to help build safer roads—that is a step forward—but it does not have, in my judgment, that provision which represents a step up from what we did in TEA-21, that provision that would represent a recognition of the President's initiative.

The President has taken a decidedly strong initiative to increase the use of seatbelts. It is absent from the bill, and this is why we need a provision to strengthen and to move forward the position of the Congress on the issue of increased use of safety belts. That is the purpose of this amendment.

It is just unfortunate, but those with reckless intent quickly disregard responsible behavior and drive unbelted at excessive speeds and many times with the use of alcohol. So no increased dollars for improved road engineering, which is in this bill, can defy in many instances the type of personal conduct that results in reckless behavior. It is as simple as that.

Our automobiles now come equipped with crash avoidance technologies and are more crashworthy than ever before, but these advances are only part of the solution.

In repeated testimony before the Environment and Public Works Committee, from the administration, our States, safety groups, and the highway industry, we are told that three main causes of traffic deaths and injuries are unbelted drivers, speed, and alcohol.

The formula we have devised in this legislation does have a reduction in the amount a State receives under this proposed bill that we will consider next year when they fail to achieve the 90 percent safety belt use rate. It is as simple as that. But the formula is patterned directly after the law that is on the books now with respect to the .08 legal blood alcohol content level.

The net effect of this legislation is simply to recognize we are asking that the same type of sanction policy with regard to one of the three major causes of death—alcohol—be equated to a second cause of death and injury, and that is absence of the use of seatbelts, bringing into parallel two of the three principal causes of death and injury on today's highways.

The administration put forward an innovative safety belt program, as I said, under the leadership of the President that was a major component of their new core transportation program, the Highway Safety Improvement Program. Our amendment incorporates the administration's bill and includes additional incentives for states to increase seat belt use rates.

I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a number of documents that show widespread support for this legislation, from the Virginia Association of Chiefs of Police, the American Medical Association, and the letter to Senator INHOFE from the Secretary of Transportation. One hundred thirty-five organizations across the United States are in support of this legislation.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

AMA APPLAUDS LEGISLATION TO PROMOTE SEAT BELT ENFORCEMENT AND SAFETY

AMA SPEAKS AT CONGRESSIONAL PRESS CONFERENCE TO URGE SEAT BELT AMENDMENT PASSAGE

On behalf of the American Medical Association, I'm proud to stand here with Senator Warner in support of enforcing seat belt use. Preventing deaths and injuries on our nation's roadways has been a priority of the AMA for many years. In fact, over the last seven years the AMA has distributed more than 16 million brochures on protecting children in motor vehicles, and just last year we released a physicians' guide to assess and counsel older drivers. Requiring all states to enact a primary enforcement seat belt law or achieve a seat belt use rate of at least 90 percent will help protect Americans on the road.

We know the wearing seat belts saves lives. Over half of the 43,000 people killed on America's highways in 2002 were not wearing seat belts. Tragically, six out of 10 children who died that year in motor-vehicle collisions were also not wearing seat belts. Just taking one moment to buckle-up could make a life-or-death difference to the thousands who needlessly die on our roadways every year.

For those lucky enough to survive a devastating auto crash, the health care costs can be staggering. On average, hospitalization costs for unbelted traffic crash victims are 50 percent higher than for those who buckled-up. The needless deaths and injuries that result from not wearing seat belts cost society an estimated $26 billion annually in medical care, lost productivity and other injury-related costs.

There deplorable statistics are reversible. We can significantly reduce deaths and serious injuries from motor-vehicle crashes by enforcing seat belt use nationwide through a primary enforcement law like the one Senator Warner is now proposing.

In my home state of Michigan, a primary enforcement law has been in effect for three years. In that time, nearly 200 lives have been saved, and over 1,000 serious collisions have been averted because of this change in the law.

As a physician, it is a rare blessing to be in a situation where we can easily identify the solution to a public health threat. Passage of the primary enforcement seat belt law will saves lives. It's that simple.

AMA Trustee.

VIRGINIA ASSOCIATION OF CHIEFS OF POLICE,
Richmond, VA, February 9, 2004.

The Virginia Association of Chiefs of Police (VACP) endorses S. 1993, a bill to create incentives for the states to enact primary safety belt laws. In 2002 in Virginia, we had 913 automobile fatalities. Of those 913 fatalities, 438 (62.7%) were not wearing a safety belt. In those 913 fatality crashes, 9,912 injuries were sustained by unbuckled occupants.

Under our current secondary enforcement law, Virginia's front seat safety belt use is 74.6%, which includes drivers and front seat passengers. Research tells us that front seat occupants of vehicles involved in potentially fatal crashes in states with primary safety belt laws have a 15 percentage point higher belt use than persons in states without primary laws.

The VACP supports the passage of primary safety belt laws as a proven tool to increase safety belt usage and reduce serious injuries and fatalities in the event of a traffic crash. Public education and enhanced traffic enforcement efforts have failed to increase Virginia's safety belt usage rate much beyond 75%. States with primary safety belt laws consistently experience safety belt usage rates up to 90%. The VACP believes that the passage of a primary safety belt law in Virginia will increase belt usage and save the lives of countless Virginians.

THE SECRETARY OF TRANSPORTATION,
Washington, DC, November 12, 2003.

Hon. JAMES INHOFE,
Chairman, Committee on Environment and Public Works, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: With almost 43,000 people dying every year on our nation's highways, it is imperative that we do everything in our power to promote a safer transportation system. The Bush Administration's proposal to reauthorize surface transportation programs, the Safe, Accountable, Flexible and Efficient Transportation Equity Act of 2003 (SAFETEA), offers several bold and innovative approaches to address this crisis.

President Bush and I believe that increasing safety belt usage rates is the single most effective means to decrease highway fatalities and injuries. As a result, SAFETEA's new core highway safety program provides States with powerful funding incentives to increase the percentage of Americans who buckle up every time they get in an automobile. Every percentage point increase in the national safety belt usage rate saves hundreds of lives and millions of dollars in lost productivity.

Empirical evidence shows that the surest way for a State to increase safety belt usage is through the passage of a primary safety belt law. States with primary belt laws have safety belt usage rates that are on average eight percentage points higher than States with secondary laws. Recognizing that States may have other innovative methods to achieve higher rates of belt use, SAFETEA also rewards States that achieve 90% safety belt usage rates even if a primary safety belt law is not enacted. I urge you to consider these approaches as your Committee marks up reauthorization legislation.

While safety belts are obviously critical to reducing highway fatalities, so too is a data driven approach to providing safety. Every State faces its own unique safety challenges, and every State must be given broad funding flexibility to solve those challenges. This is a central theme of SAFETEA, which aims to provide States the ability to use scarce resources to meet their own highest priority needs. Such flexibility is essential for States to maximize their resources, including the funds available under a new core highway safety program.

I look forward to working with you on these critically important safety issues as development of a surface transportation reauthorization bill progresses.

Sincerely yours,

NORMAN Y. MINETA.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the pending amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

At the moment, there is not a sufficient second.

Mr. WARNER. I thank the Presiding Officer. I see other hands.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There appears to be a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, it is appropriate that the occupant of the Chair at the present time is the Senator from Rhode Island because the amendment being offered by the Senator from Virginia is one that was a favorite of one of my favorite people, his father. I can remember many times he would be talking about this amendment. In fact, I can recall some disagreements.

I would say: John, your son is a mayor of a significant city. I am sure if you call him up he will tell you, if there is one thing they don't want, it is unfunded mandates. I was the mayor of a city for four terms. The biggest, greatest plague we had was unfunded mandates.

I will reluctantly oppose the Warner-Clinton-DeWine-Murray seatbelt sanction amendment at the appropriate time. This amendment makes a significant and damaging change to the core safety program established in the highway reauthorization bill.

The amendment imposes a new sanction on States that fail to achieve a 90-percent seatbelt rate or enact a primary seatbelt law. Currently, only 20 of the 50 States meet the requirements of this proposed new Federal mandate. As a result, if this amendment were to pass, 30 States would be immediately thrust into a status of noncompliance with this mandate and the clock would start ticking against them, threatening a significant penalty through the loss of funding. My State of Oklahoma is already in compliance. Actually it wouldn't affect us. We are in compliance with the requirements proposed by this new sanction. But I fundamentally oppose imposition of new sanctions on the States.

While most agree that seatbelts represent the single greatest factor in saving lives on our Nation's highways, the decision to pass a primary seatbelt law is best made at the State level.

The penalties proposed by Senator WARNER's seatbelt sanction are twofold. The first penalty takes effect in calculating apportionments for fiscal year 2005. This is especially disconcerting because that gives States who do not already have primary seatbelt laws on the books only 8 months from now to enact a primary law. It doesn't affect me. Our State of Oklahoma already has them. This first penalty would require States in noncompliance to spend 10 percent of the funds apportioned to them under the new core safety programs on safety behavioral projects. Under section 405 of title 23, any funds subject to this transfer cannot be recovered in future years by a State's subsequent compliance with the seatbelt sanction.

A second penalty would be imposed if States had still not enacted a primary seatbelt law or brought their seatbelt rate up to 90 percent by the beginning of fiscal year 2007. States still in noncompliance by this time would lose up to 4 percent of their apportionments under each of the National Highway System programs: The Surface Transportation Program, Interstate Maintenance Program, and the Highway Bridge Replacement and Rehabilitation Program. That one is significant to me. These funds would be completely lost to the States in noncompliance and redistributed among other States.

You could argue that my position in Oklahoma could be enhanced by the passage of this amendment because we know there will be some States that are not in compliance. Certainly our bridges in Oklahoma need as much help as they can get.

The amendment proposes instituting a huge penalty for States without a primary seatbelt law. Although I support the increased use of seatbelts across the United States and would encourage States to enact primary seatbelt laws to reach this objective, I believe threatening States with the loss of needed Federal dollars for surface transportation is not the right approach.

I admire so much the Senator from Virginia and his dedication. I never appreciated what he had to go through 6 years ago as chairman of the Environment and Public Works Committee during the last reauthorization until I became the chairman and am going through it. I am sure he did a far better job than I. But I disagree with this particular amendment.

Mr. WARNER. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. INHOFE. I am happy to yield.

Mr. WARNER. He is always so courteous about matters such as this, and particularly with reference to our dear friend, John Chafee, who felt very strongly about this legislation. It is more than a technicality, but this is not a sanction in the sense that we simply say each State should achieve 90 percent. Now, there may be ways by which States can achieve that other than following this path which, as the Senator correctly points out, has a certain sequence of penalties. They would meet the law and completely avoid the other path, where there are penalties.

My question is this: When America was faced with the problems of alcohol, which is still prevalent on the roads in our Nation, we, the Congress, enacted what we call the famous .08 law; am I correct?

Mr. INHOFE. That is correct.

Mr. WARNER. Didn't we have an identical series of steps in that law that I have put into this law?

Mr. INHOFE. I know there are similar steps. If you say they are identical, I am sure they are.

Mr. WARNER. I assure the Senator it is almost identical. You can come down to where it has worked in the case of alcohol, and now 47 States out of the 50 have adopted the alcohol legislation. I think, quite frankly, that we can see a similar number of States quickly adopt this legislation—a primary seatbelt law to avoid the penalties. So it is not without precedent, and it also gives the State the alternative of doing it by some other means than going down the path I have outlined.

Mr. INHOFE. I agree with the Senator from Virginia. I only say, if your State were to devise a way to get to the 90-percent mark that they have to get to to keep from being penalized, it would have to take some reasonable period of time. They would have to establish some criteria and then try to get there.

I cannot imagine it could be done within 8 months, and these people would already be subjected to the penalties imposed in the year 2005. That would be a concern.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I say to my distinguished colleague that we selected that time period because of the language the Secretary of Transportation forwarded to the Congress. If there could be a means, if you would be willing to help me devise a formula by which you think a greater degree of fairness can be achieved, I am open to that.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I look forward to working with the Senator from Virginia, as I always do. I think many of us who came to serve in the Senate who were either Governors or mayors in major cities somehow have this obstacle or obstruction in our minds on any kind of mandates. I plead guilty to that. I think other Members might oppose the amendment, such as the Senator from Missouri who was a Governor. That is primarily the reason.

I would be happy to work with the Senator from Virginia, and I think he has an excellent point. I know his heart is right and he is trying to save lives. That is why we all love him so much.

Mr. WARNER. Well, Mr. President, I will take into consideration the views of my distinguished chairman and see what we might do to make that accommodation. I thank the chairman.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, while we are waiting for people to come with their amendments, I will make a few comments relative to statements that were made on the Senate floor yesterday concerning the bill.

Comments were made by one Senator who said he would just suggest that we swap formulas between Oklahoma and Arizona. That was the senior Senator from Arizona, a very distinguished Senator. I only say that Arizona and Oklahoma and all other 48 States have exactly the same formula. You don't have to swap formulas. They are the same.

I also suggest in the case of Arizona, it gets more money than Oklahoma does under this bill—by about $60 million. So if a swap were taking place, I think I would go along with that.

I am concerned a little about the statements made that more States will become donor States. That is true under this bill. Right now, the disparity between donor and donee is far greater than it will be after this bill is passed. So if you have a State that goes from a $1.01 down to 99 cents, that is a small amount, but because it goes below the threshold of a dollar, then it is now in donor status. So the way we try to accomplish this is, if you take the average, the average donor State increased by 4 cents; the average donee State decreased by 4 cents. I don't see that anything could be more fair than that.

Third, I think if you look at the individuals who were driving this legislation 6 years ago—TEA-21—you found that there were some parts of the State that were perhaps treated better than other parts. Certainly, we had three of the most powerful people from the northeastern seaboard—Senators Moynihan, Congressman Shuster, and Senator Chafee. When you look at the amounts that they, under TEA-21, achieved, New York was $1.25; Pennsylvania, $1.21; Rhode Island, $1.26; and Oklahoma, 90.5 cents, which was the minimum. A critic of this bill said we should do what we did 6 years ago and immediately go to 90.5 cents as a floor instead of waiting until the sixth year.

The problem with that is there is not enough money. And if we did that, that would have to come out of the donee State. The other problem is we are actually much more ambitious in this bill in reaching that point.

If you look at this State by State—and several times on this Senate floor we have been challenged by Members from States who felt their State was not getting a fair shake—keep in mind that every State is going to increase by at least 10 percent under this bill, and every State is going to have a donor status of nothing less than 95 percent at the conclusion of this bill, at the sixth year.

Mr. REID. Will the chairman of the committee yield for a question?

Mr. INHOFE. I am happy to yield.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, on the issue now before the Senate, propounded by the senior Senator from Virginia, a unique situation has arisen in Nevada. In Nevada, the State legislature, last session, had a debate on whether or not they would have primary seatbelt requirements for the people of Nevada. They did something interesting. The State now has a law that requires seatbelts for children but not for adults. I think this is pretty compromising.

The Senator from Virginia is not on the Senate floor, but I could go for something like that—that there could be a requirement that States have a mandate that children have to wear seatbelts. The State of Nevada debated this and, as far as adults, it failed. So I ask you and the Senator from Virginia to consider amending the matter now before the Senate to have a requirement for children. I think that is something that would be accepted. I think the debate would be very short and to the point.

I think if he proceeds on his requirement to have seatbelts mandated for everyone, States that are individualistic, such as Nevada—the State of Nevada doesn't like to be told what to do. They believe they are a sovereign State and the legislature meets and debates these issues. On this issue about primary seatbelts, that was brought before the legislature just last session. I think it would be very difficult for this Senator to say that I know more than the Nevada State Legislature, which not only held hearings on this issue but had a long debate and turned down this mandate. While I personally may disagree with that, the point is that the people of the State of Nevada, through its elected legislature, have spoken.

I hope—I repeat for the third time—that the Senator from Virginia would consider modifying the amendment now before the Senate and have this apply just to children.

The question is, through the Chair to the Senator from Oklahoma, how he feels about this. Before he answers, I wish to compliment the Chair and his wonderful father who was one of my role models in this body. It is true he brought this amendment up on a number of occasions, but it never passed. We are now in the same situation as in years previous.

It seems to me we would be well off if we made incremental improvement, and I think that improvement would be to make sure this covers all children.

I again ask the question of my friend from Oklahoma, does he think that is a reasonable compromise?

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I say to my friend from Nevada, the argument I recall against the amendment was that the driver himself or herself would be in a position where they could lose control of a vehicle by not having a seatbelt on and, obviously, the children would be safer than if nobody had on a seatbelt.

The Senator makes a very good point. It is one at which I would certainly like to look.

I can assure the Senator from Nevada, I learned the hard way what our law was in Oklahoma when we started cranking out grandbabies. We have 11 of them now. I did not realize the seriousness of this bill and I did not have one of the young ones in a seatbelt, and I had to pay the penalties. I learned the hard way they really meant business.

Our law has teeth. I would certainly like to look and see what kind of results the State of Nevada has had.

Mr. REID. If I could, Mr. President, I try very rarely to boast on the floor of the Senate, but this is an opportunity I can do so because I noted a sense of pride with the Senator from Oklahoma talking about his 11 grandchildren. A week ago last Sunday, I had born into my family my 14th grandchild. So is it OK if I am a little boastful about that?

Mr. INHOFE. Of course.

Mr. REID. Eleven is OK, but the Senator from Oklahoma still has a way to go.

Mr. INHOFE. We haven't quit.

Mr. REID. What is that?

Mr. INHOFE. We haven't quit.

Mr. REID. Neither have we. In fact, we have just begun to propagate.

Mr. INHOFE. In terms of population of the State of Nevada and the percentage my grandchildren constitute in my State, the Senator from Nevada is way ahead of me.

Mr. President, there are other points about which I could be talking that were brought up, but I don't think it serves any useful purpose. We made great progress on this bill. People have said nothing happened last week. Something did happen last week. We had a chance to bring up the bill, go over the bill, talk to people, and line up votes, quite frankly.

We have the vast majority of people believing this is the right bill. I only regret there are those who try to say it is not fair for one reason or another. There is no question, if you take this and the last two 6-year reauthorizations, that this bill is far more fair than any other authorization we have done.

All these points were kept in mind as to donee States and donor States. Now that we get up to 95 percent, we are going to forget about what it was like to be a 70-percent donor State, but I can remember. This will be an issue that will go away because you figure you are high enough. This bill got us there.

At the same time, we have donee States, States that have done very well in the past. I mentioned a minute ago, partially because the former chairman of the House Transportation Committee, Congressman BUD SHUSTER—and I served with him for 8 years in the House on that committee—perhaps his State got a little higher than it should have through his anxious approach. However, when you compare that to the State of Oklahoma—this is an interesting comparison—you can look at a chart and see you are not getting as much as last year and, therefore, it is unfair.

That is just not true. My State has roughly the same road miles as the State of Pennsylvania. If you look at the next 6 years, the State of Pennsylvania is getting three times as much money as we are getting in our State of Oklahoma. It doesn't sound like I did a very good job for Oklahoma.

There are other factors involved. It was called to my attention by one of the Senators from that State that it is a pass-through State. Everyone goes through Pennsylvania to get someplace. How do you put that into an equation? How do you put down how many people stop to buy products or services in your State? Some of these factors can't be done.

I will say this: The old bill turned out to be a minimum guarantee. That was wrong. That was a political document that merely said we will make 60 percent of the people in this Chamber happy, and we don't care what happens to the other 40 percent. That was not an appropriate way to approach that bill.

With the factors of donee, donor, total lane miles, vehicle miles traveled, annual contributions to the highway trust fund from commercial vehicles, diesel fuel just on highways, relative share of the total cost of repair and replacement of deficient highways and bridges, weighted nonattainment in maintenance areas, and rate of return for donor States, this formula has worked, and I am very proud of it.

We have gone through the last 2 weeks complimenting each other and the leadership. I certainly compliment my friend from Vermont, the ranking member, Senator JEFFORDS, as well as Senator REID, the ranking member on the subcommittee, and, of course, KIT BOND, the chairman of the subcommittee under my committee. But I also compliment the staff.

I can promise you, Mr. President, that the staff worked many more hours than we did. They were down there all this last weekend. All I was doing was sitting on the phone calling for votes. It was a lot of hard work, a lot of dedication. I want all the staff members of the majority and the minority to know how much I personally appreciate them.

I think it is necessary to have this bill. I can't think of anything worse than going on these short extensions and no one can plan in advance. With the bill we have today, we have it set up so we can plan in advance.

The IPAM part of this bill will allow those projects which are ready to go to start working, to start those projects going, to hire the people.

We had a chart a while ago as to the number of people this bill puts to work. We are talking about almost 3 million people, 3 million jobs that will be filled as a result of having this bill pass.

I look forward to talking about the amendments, working toward cloture, and getting this bill passed in the Senate and sent to conference so we can all go to work in conference and come up with a good solution to our Nation's highways, roads, and infrastructure problems, as well as jobs in America.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I, first, commend my good friend from Oklahoma, and then I will give my synopsis of some of the areas of this bill. I have just never worked with someone who has been more cooperative—and our staffs—to bring about a consensus in a very difficult bill. A little change here and a little change there will change millions of dollars and who it goes to and will bring about a consensus that will at least make enough people happy to vote for the bill, which is the ultimate goal.

We have made great progress. I think we are now in a position where we are going to be able to move forward.

TEA-21 provided record funding levels for transportation, which allowed States and local governments to make greater investments in our transportation systems than ever before. S. 1072 will continue that trend.

In crafting this bill, Chairman INHOFE, Senator BOND, Senator REID, and I wanted to ensure the resources available under this bill would be spent wisely and responsibly.

During our hearings, we learned of challenges facing communities and transportation agencies trying to manage a full load of increasingly complex transportation projects. In response, we crafted a bill that will improve the delivery and stewardship of the Federal aid highway program.

First, we have expanded the scope of a program called "value engineering." Value engineering provides States and local governments an additional approach to examining transportation projects before they are finalized. It promotes improved design, construction, and funding of transportation projects.

Second, we have included provisions to address issues that arise when State and local governments develop large-scale projects, so-called mega projects that cost over $1 billion.

To ensure these projects are developed and managed efficiently, S. 1072 requires project management and financial plans.

Finally, to ensure that money received by the States is properly accounted for, we direct the Secretary to annually review States' financial management systems.

As my colleagues can see, S. 1072 provides record levels of funding for transportation investment and the provisions to ensure we are good stewards of the public funds.

I look forward to going into the amendment process and making sure we work, hopefully, efficiently and effectively and quickly to get this bill before us in final form before too long.

I yield the floor, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, the transportation planning process is a critical component of any surface transportation program or project. Poor planning may lead to cost overruns, project delays, and even project cancellations. An early and comprehensive planning process can help stakeholders and project sponsors to identify and overcome potential problems so transportation projects proceed smoothly.

Our bill includes several provisions to encourage better planning practices at both the State and metropolitan levels. We make some additions to current law to encourage transportation planning agencies to consider our environmental, natural resource, and community health issues early in the planning process.

The bill directs transportation planners to consult with relevant resource agencies when developing long-range transportation plans.

Improved coordination will promote long-range plans and project proposals that adequately consider and address the diverse implications of transportation projects. Improved interagency consultation and coordination is only one component of a successful plan.

As I have said before, transportation investment is about people and communities. It is about making life better for our citizens by providing an efficient, safe, and comprehensive transportation system.

A successful transportation program is one that considers the needs and the wishes of the people it serves. Our bill will enhance public participation in the planning process, encouraging projects that meet our infrastructure needs without sacrificing the environment or quality of life.

Finally, our bill emphasizes the role of new and emerging technologies in transportation planning. Geospatial mapping technologies have inspired innovative and successful planning processes in many States around the country. We encourage States to continue to develop and implement those technologies and to integrate them into the transportation planning process.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I have a couple of issues I will address as in morning business. I ask consent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

A PREMATURE BSE DECISION

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, yesterday the Bush administration called to end the short-term investigation into the recent mad cow scare. While many of us believe Secretary Veneman and her staff have done a good job on many fronts, the decision to suspend the investigation is extremely premature. Despite the high safety standards met by cattle producers, consumers still have questions about the safety of America's meat supply. By curtailing its investigation, the Bush administration has chosen not to do all it can to settle the questions raised by the discovery of a single Canadian-born cow infected with BSE.

In 2001, a herd of 81 cattle came into the United States from Canada. One of those animals turned out to have BSE. USDA, through its investigation, has managed to locate 28 of the remaining 80 Canadian-born animals. We are grateful for these efforts, but there is a lot more work to do. Twenty-eight is not 80.

Last year, USDA Chief Veterinarian Ron DeHaven said:

> We feel confident that we are going to be able to determine the whereabouts of most if not all of these animals within the next several days.

Six weeks later, those early hopes have been disappointed. Consumers have a right to know why those other cattle were not found and what more, if anything, can be done.

If we assume the Canadian index herd were all fed the same bovine byproduct known to cause BSE, it is possible the other animals currently in the United States may also have the disease.

An international panel convened by USDA announced last week they believe some cattle in the U.S. may actually have BSE. While the likelihood an American consumer would come into contact with the meat from one of the infected cows is low, Government has the responsibility to do all it can to instill consumer confidence in the safety and quality of our food system and the food we feed our families.

That work has not been completed because the investigation has not been adequately ended. While the risk to human health may be remote, the Bush administration is doing a disservice to consumers by short-circuiting the good work USDA has done to locate the Canadian-born animals in question.

In the face of so many doubts and questions, it makes no sense to cut this investigation short. Some suggest pressure from the hugely concentrated meatpacking industry is responsible. A small handful of meatpackers controls 80 percent of the beef in the United States. In fact, this is such a significant problem that the Senate approved legislation as part of its last farm bill to address problematic concentration in the meatpacking industry. Unfortunately, that provision was stripped during the conference and was not included in the final farm bill.

Along with this growing concentration comes greater influence within the administration itself. I am not suggesting the packers did something unlawful, but the fact remains they wanted to end this investigation because it cast a cloud over their products. Evidently, these are the interests the Bush administration has chosen to advance above others.

Others have suggested the Bush administration took this step in its zeal for a single American trading continent—no borders with the Canadians or the Mexicans whatsoever. In fact, after the farm bill was passed, the Secretary suggested we should have a continent-of-origin label for certain agricultural products. If that had been pursued, we would never be able to differentiate between our highest quality products and those from Canada and Mexico. As it is, Americans today, still, do not have the option of knowing where our food comes from.

This is particularly important with regard to beef in light of the BSE scare. American consumers are simply asking for a label with basic information about the food they eat. In fact, 80 percent of Americans have said they would like to know where their meat comes from. That is why Senators on both sides of the aisle fought for and won approval of the country-of-origin labeling law. It is why many of us have charged those opposed to COOL with acting irresponsibly. In a backroom deal before the BSE scare, Republicans met in private and delayed the COOL law for 2 years.

The Senate has shown time and time again that we support this important consumer law and that we want to see it back in law, to ensure implementation this fall. In fact, the law still requires USDA to develop the regulations by this fall. So, when we change the date of implementation back to September of this year, there should be no delay whatsoever in USDA implementing it on time as the law originally required. But we should not even have to wait for that. USDA has the authority to immediately provide this information to consumers, to tell them where their food and, in particular, where their meat originated. If we have that, consumers can stay away from Canadian-born cattle, at least until the animals in question that have not been located in the United States are actually found.

But to date the administration will have none of it. They will not help inform U.S. consumers, even though our major export markets have requested we certify that our exports are born and raised and processed in our country. I don't understand why the administration will not provide U.S. consumers the information they want and our foreign trading partners the information they now demand.

The only answer that keeps coming back to many of us is while COOL is good for average Americans, it is inconvenient for the large meatpacking cartel since they would be required to affix a simple label to their products and track the meat from the stockyard to the store shelf. So, despite the support of 167 consumer groups representing over 50 million Americans, the administration denies Americans this basic information.

USDA should reopen the investigation and try to locate all of the cattle from the Canadian index herd. They should also assist American consumers and American farmers and ranchers by immediately implementing a "Product of the USA" labeling program under emergency regulations. Instead of bowing to pressure and cutting short a valuable investigation, the administration should take a step back and rethink its priorities. The BSE scare is now hurting all of our ranchers, as over 40 countries have banned imports from the United States. The American livestock industry is being tarnished and ranchers are suffering because of one Canadian cow. The industry should not be further tarnished by inappropriate Government action. The administration should reopen the investigation, drop its opposition to labeling, and implement COOL immediately.

For the sake of America's farmers and ranchers, for consumer confidence in the safety of our food supply, the administration needs to do the right thing. Though it might upset a few special interests, the American people will overwhelmingly support such an action because it is in their interest. I, for one, will commend the President for his thoughtful reversal of this misplaced policy priority.

WHITE HOUSE SAYS EXPORTING U.S. JOBS IS "GOOD FOR THE ECONOMY"

Mr. President, the other issue I wanted to discuss briefly is a new position taken by the administration, reflected in this newspaper. The article appeared this morning in the Los Angeles Times. The headline reads, "Bush Supports Shift of Jobs Overseas."

I ask unanimous consent the article be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

[From the Los Angeles Times, Feb. 10, 2004]

BUSH SUPPORTS SHIFT OF JOBS OVERSEAS

(By Warren Vieth and Edwin Chen)

WASHINGTON.—The movement of American factory jobs and white-collar work to other countries is part of a positive transformation that will enrich the U.S. economy over time, even if it causes short-term pain and dislocation, the Bush administration said Monday.

The embrace of foreign out-sourcing, an accelerating trend that has contributed to U.S. job losses in recent years and has become an issue in the 2004 elections, is contained in the president's annual report to Congress on the health of the economy.

"Outsourcing is just a new way of doing international trade," said N. Gregory Mankiw, chairman of Bush's Council of Economic Advisors, which prepared the report. "More things are tradable than were tradable in the past. And that's good thing."

The report, which predicts that the nation will reverse a three-year employment slide by creating 2.6 million jobs in 2004, is part of a weeklong effort by the administration to highlight signs that the recovery is picking up speed. Bush's economic stewardship has become a central issue in the presidential campaign, and the White House is eager to demonstrate that his policies are producing results.

In his message to Congress on Monday, Bush said the economy " is strong and getting stronger," thanks in part to his tax cuts and other economic programs. He said the nation had survived a stock market meltdown, recession, terrorist attacks, corporate scandals and war in Afghanistan and Iraq, and was finally beginning to enjoy "a mounting prosperity that will reach every corner of America."

The president repeated that message during an afternoon discussion about the economy at SRC Automotive, an engine-rebuilding plant in Springfield, Mo., where he lashed out at lawmakers who oppose making his tax cuts permanent.

"When they say, 'We're going to repeal Bush's tax cuts,' that means they're going to raise you taxes, and that's wrong. And that's bad economics," he said.

Democrats who want Bush's job were quick to challenge his claims.

Sen. John F. Kerry of Massachusetts, the front-runner for the Democratic presidential nomination, supports a rollback of Bush's tax cuts for the wealthiest Americans and backs the creation of tax incentives for companies that keep jobs in the United States—although he supported the North American Free Trade Agreement, which many union members say is responsible for the migration of U.S. jobs, particularly in the auto industry, to Mexico.

Campaigning Monday in Roanoke, Va., Kerry questioned the credibility of the administration's job-creation forecast.

"I've got a feeling this report was prepared by the same people who brought us the intelligence on Iraq," Kerry said. "I don't think we need a new report about jobs in America. I think we need a new president who's going to create jobs in America and put Americans back to work."

In an evening appearance at George Mason University in Fairfax, Va., Sen. John Edwards of North Carolina mocked the Bush administration's economic report.

Edwards, who also supports repealing tax cuts for the richest Americans and offering incentives to corporation that create new jobs in the United States, said it would come as a "news bulletin" to the American people that the economy was improving and that the outsourcing of jobs was good for America.

"These people," he said of the Bush administration, "what planet do they live on? They are so out of touch."

The president's 411-page report contains a detailed diagnosis of the forces the White House says are contributing to America's economic slowdown and a wide-ranging defense of the policies Bush has pursued to combat it.

It asserts that the last recession actually began in late 2000, before the president took office, instead of March 2001, as certified by the official recession-dating panel of the National Bureau of Economic Research.

Much of the report repeats the administration's previous economic prescriptions.

For instance, it says the Bush tax cuts must be made permanent to have their full effect on the economy.

Social Security also must be restructured to let workers put part of their retirement funds in private accounts, the report argues. Doing so could add nearly $5 trillion to the national debt by 2036, the president's advisors note, but the additional borrowing would be repaid 20 years later and the program's longterm health would be more secure.

The report devotes an entire chapter to an issue that has become increasingly troublesome for the administration: the loss of 2.8 million manufacturing jobs since Bush took office, and critics' claims that his trade policies are partly to blame.

His advisors acknowledge that international trade and foreign outsourcing have contributed to the job slump. But the report argues that technological progress and rising productivity—the ability to produce more goods with fewer workers—have played a bigger role than the flight of production to China and other low-wage countries.

Although trade expansion inevitably hurts some domestic workers, the benefits eventually will outweigh the costs as Americans are able to buy cheaper goods and services and as new jobs are created in growing sectors of the economy, the report said.

The president's report endorses the relatively new phenomenon of outsourcing high-end, white-collar work to India and other countries, a trend that has stirred concern within such affected occupations as computer programming and medical diagnostics.

"Maybe we will outsource a few radiologists," Mankiw told reporters. "What does that mean? Well, maybe the next generation of doctors will train fewer radiologists and will train more general practitioners or surgeons. . . . Maybe we've learned that we don't have a comparative advantage in radiologist."

Government should try to salve the short-term disruption by helping displaced workers obtain the training they need to enter new fields, such as healthcare, Mankiw said, not by erecting protectionist barriers on behalf of vulnerable industries or professions. "The market is the best determinant of where the jobs should be," he said.

Bush's quick visit to Missouri—his 15th to a state considered a critical election battleground—was the first of several events this week intended to underscore recent economic gains. Although U.S. job creation remains relatively sluggish, the nation's unemployment rate fell from 6.4% in June to 5.6% in January, and the economy grew at the fastest pace in 20 years during the last half of 2003.

The format of his visit to SRC Automotive—one that he particularly likes—involved several employees and local business owners sharing the stage with the president to discuss their perspectives on the economy, with Bush elaborating on their stories to emphasize particular aspects of his economic program.

Today, Bush is scheduled to meet with economic leaders at the White House. On Thursday, he goes to Pennsylvania's capital, Harrisburg—in another swing state that he has already visited more than two dozen times since becoming president.

Mr. DASCHLE. When I saw the headline, I had to read it twice.

I actually could not believe what I was reading. Again the quote is from the headline, "Bush Supports Shift of Jobs Overseas."

Our economy has already lost 2.6 million jobs in the last 3 years. We have 9 million Americans who are unemployed. Long-term unemployment is at a 20-year high, and 80,000 workers are exhausting their unemployment benefits every week because our Republican colleagues refuse to extend temporary Federal unemployment benefits.

What does the White House say? The President's top economic advisers tell us not to worry. They say shipping American jobs to China, India, and other countries is actually good for the economy. Those comments are actually in this article. It is a direct quote, that these American jobs shipped abroad are good for the economy. They say exporting computer programming jobs and other white-collar jobs is actually good for the economy.

The White House acknowledges some workers will be hurt. But then they say the "benefits" of exporting American jobs "eventually will outweigh the costs as Americans are able to buy cheaper goods and services and new jobs are created in growing sectors of the economy."

How are people without jobs supposed to buy all of these goods and services? How do you keep a consumer economy going when you export the jobs? What are they thinking?

The chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, the office that wrote the report, says the "government should try to salve the short-term disruption by helping displaced workers obtain the training they need to enter new fields, such as health care." That sounds like a cruel joke.

The President's proposed budget for next year cuts money for Federal job training.

You have on the one hand the President's council arguing we ought to train displaced workers but then have the budget presented to Congress as one which actually cuts the very training the administration is advocating.

How do people know what fields to train for? How do they know the jobs they are training for won't be the next jobs targeted to be shipped overseas with the encouragement of the White House?

Maybe exporting American jobs sounds like a good idea if you are sitting in some think tank, or behind a desk at the White House, or here on the Hill. But out in the real world, it is creating real hardship and anxiety.

I have seen what happens when plants ship their jobs overseas. It happened in my hometown 2 years ago. Midcom, Incorporated makes electronic transformers for high-tech companies. They used to employ 200 people in Aberdeen. One Tuesday morning in March of 2001, those workers showed up for work and were told their jobs were going to be gone in 3 months, many of them to Mexico and China.

I have met with many of those workers. A lot of them are women in their 40s and 50s, and their families depended on their incomes to make ends meet. They don't see how exporting their jobs was a good idea for the economy, and neither do most Americans.

The chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers is quoted as saying, "Out-sourcing is just a new way of doing international trade." "More things are tradable than were tradable in the past. "

Not everything is tradable. The dignity that comes from earning an honest dollar and providing for your family is not tradable. The security that comes from knowing you can pay the bills and you are not going to lose your home is not tradable. The sense of patriotism and community that says we are all in this together is not a tradable commodity.

The White House report predicts a miraculous economic recovery this year. They say we could see the creation of 3.8 million jobs. The White House has said the economy will create millions of jobs every year now for the last 3 years. And they have been wrong. They are wrong now when they say exporting American jobs is good for the economy. The White House has lost more jobs on President Bush's watch than the last 11 administrations put together. They have cut job training in education. They are blocking Federal unemployment benefits. And now, incredibly, they are saying that exporting middle-class, white-collar jobs is good for the economy.

Instead of policies that reward companies for shifting jobs overseas, instead of letting companies open a post office box in some island nation and call it their corporate headquarters so they skip out on paying taxes, America needs a real plan to keep the good jobs we have here and create many more of them.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HAGEL). The Senator from Missouri.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I understand there is an amendment of the Senator from Virginia and the Senator from New York pending. Is that the pending business?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I spoke about this amendment this morning. For those who may not have been fortunate enough to hear it, let me reiterate just a few of the important points.

This is a mandate. This is very clearly a mandate with a very severe penalty on any State that doesn't either have 90-percent usage of seatbelts or a primary seatbelt law.

I came to this body as a former Governor who has seen so much of the big brother influence telling State Governors and State legislators what they have to do, and I said we need to find a better way of doing things. I also said I happen to be a strong believer in seatbelts. I have been in a couple of serious accidents. Because I had a seatbelt on and the shoulder harness, I came away with only a good fright, and, fortunately, with no serious injuries. I have seen many other people who were not so fortunate. I believe in encouraging seatbelt usage. I believe the proper way to do it is through incentives and encouragement.

Under this proposed amendment, in fiscal year 2005 and thereafter, 10 percent of the funds under the Highway Safety Improvement Program would be transferred to the section 402 program, and beginning in 2007, 2 percent of the Interstate Maintenance, Surface Transportation and Bridge Programs would be withheld from States that didn't have a primary seatbelt law or achieve at least a 90-percent safety belt use rate. The percentage withheld would rise to 4 percent in fiscal year 2008 and thereafter.

Why do I object to that? That is telling the people who pay the money into the Federal highway trust fund through their taxes on the fuel they buy that their legislature has to do what we say they should or we are going to withhold the money from them. I believe we cannot continue to usurp the activities and the roles of State legislatures and State chief executive officers.

I introduced a letter from a number of organizations saying:

> Currently States face 8 highway safety-related sanctions and penalties that are designed to force compliance with various Federal highway safety mandates or goals, including enactment, by specified deadlines, of various types of State safety legislation. While our organizations support the underlying safety goals, we oppose the use of penalties and sanctions.

They go on to say:

> Fewer resources to invest means delays in roadway and intersection improvements, fewer dollars for upgrading signage and markings, and less funding available for investment and safety research.

Also signing this letter are the executive director of the American Association of State Highway and Transportation Officials, the executive director of the Governors Highway Safety Association, the president and chief executive officer of the American Highway Users Alliance, the executive director of the International Association of Chiefs of Police, the executive director of the Commercial Vehicle Safety Alliance, the executive director of the National Conference of State Legislators, the president of the American Council of Engineering Companies, and the vice president of Public Affairs of the AAA, as well, I might say not surprisingly, as the executive director of the National Governors Association.

I hope we may be able to have a vote on that very shortly. But I would defer to the principal sponsor of the amendment to speak in opposition to the arguments I have made.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I thank my colleague for his courtesy, and that of the distinguished chairman of the committee, Senator INHOFE.

I say to my dear friends: What price do you put on life? No one disputes this legislation will save lives. I don't know of anyone in this Chamber who wouldn't put the highest possible priority on saving lives.

This legislation follows, in many respects, what this Chamber did not too many years ago when it was faced with the problem of trying to reduce the actions and loss of life or injury occasioned by the abuse of alcohol and then driving the automobile.

As a consequence of that, 47 States now have complied with that statute. It is a success in terms of the limited goals that could be set realistically by the .08 drinking level. It achieved the goals in 47 States.

We are asking the average American, about 79 percent of our constituents in the 50 States—it varies from State to State but overall average, nationally, 79 percent—who use the seatbelt, we are just trying to take it from 79 percent up to 90 percent.

That is the purpose, to save lives, very often innocent lives. It is a well-known, documented fact that in a collision, those who have safety belts on have a higher degree of physical control over the vehicle with the hope of trying to reduce the consequences of the inevitable accident. Without a seatbelt, the driver is often jostled in such a way that he or she loses total control of the car and often an innocent individual is injured.

It is the youth of this Nation who will be the principal beneficiaries of this legislation because, regrettably, it is the young people who are so often involved in these frightful accidents. For whatever reason, macho or otherwise, they do not wear their seatbelts.

This law would simply say that law enforcement in the several States, when they observe a car passing and the driver does not utilize their safety belt, can pull that driver over. In my State today, that driver cannot be pulled over unless he or she is committing an offense other than not wearing their safety belt. Law enforcement can then pull that driver over if he or she is not wearing their safety belt and levy whatever penalties are appropriate. But it is that fear of being pulled over, particularly among those young people, who always seem to be fighting accumulated points for driving infractions, who will be the principal beneficiaries.

The men and women of the Armed Forces, regrettably—so many of them, again, ages 18 to 30—are involved in these accidents. So we are helping our military because they will comply with this law of the several States if there is a mandatory seatbelt law.

When my colleagues cast their vote momentarily, stop to think, what price do you put on a life? I bet if you go back—perhaps I can resurrect how you voted on the .08 legislation for alcohol; this is a direct parallel in almost every way.

This is not mandated because the State, on its own initiative, can devise a program to go to 90 percent. It does not have to follow this track. Go ahead, there might be a better idea in your State to reach 90 percent. Then there is no problem under this law; you have met the criteria.

As that bell rings and you approach the Chamber, just ask yourself the question, What price do I put on a life? Because no one in this Chamber can stand up and say this law would not save lives, would not save injuries, would not save money now expended by your local community to care for those in an accident, many of whom do not have insurance. And the bill stops at your local hospital, unpaid. We did it for .08; we can do it for this.

I thank my colleagues for patiently listening to me. My distinguished colleagues from Missouri read off a list of endorsements and I have 135 groups here. The American Medical Association—I listened very carefully yesterday at a press conference when this was addressed by their representative—is strongly in favor of this. My colleague from Missouri mentioned the chiefs of police. I am proud to say my State, the Virginia Chiefs, endorse this statute. As I say, the President, through his Secretary of Transportation, while not directly addressing this specific piece of legislation, said:

> I believe that increasing safety belt usage rates is the single most effective means to decrease highway fatalities and injuries.

I have two cosponsors on this bill. I wonder if the distinguished manager would enable me just to contact them?

Mr. INHOFE. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. WARNER. Yes.

Mr. INHOFE. In fairness to the Senator's cosponsors and in fairness to others who may not be easily retrievable at this time, I believe it would be a good idea to defer the vote. I will move to table and ask for the yeas and nays but ask the leadership to maybe put it tomorrow morning sometime. That will give the Senator ample time and provide time for them to be heard on the bill. Is that acceptable?

Mr. WARNER. That is a reasonable request. I think the distinguished Senator from New York, Mrs. CLINTON, would require, say, 10 minutes and the distinguished Senator from Ohio, Mr. DEWINE, and the distinguished Senator from Washington, 10; I will take 5 more minutes; maybe 40 minutes on this side prior to the vote.

Mr. INHOFE. I do not have a problem with that and 40 minutes on this side at all. Why not plan to do that?

Now I have been told we cannot lock in time agreements on a tabling motion, so I will withhold.

Let me be sure we all understand: In my State of Oklahoma, it perhaps makes no difference. We are one of the 20 States that has mandatory seatbelt laws. In fact, it could be argued we could be benefited by this because if other States do not comply and are punished, then that amount of money could go to the States that already comply. So I could actually benefit.

My problem has always been, as the distinguished Senator from Virginia knows, it is a mandate. I would prefer not to do it this way.

I know the Senator's heart is right. I know there is another great person who served in here by the name of John Chafee who felt as strongly about this as the distinguished Senator from Virginia.

Mr. WARNER. Also, Mr. President, we discussed the possibility that I could amend this because I think the distinguished chairman pointed out that 8 months is a short time. So if we could have a gentlemen's understanding that perhaps I could amend it in such a way to take that clause and revise it to enable States to have more time.

Mr. INHOFE. Yes.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, we are accommodating the desires of the managers of this bill. Certainly as the chief proponents of this amendment, as long as my cosponsors have an opportunity to speak to it, this matter will be handled fairly.

I yield the floor.

MOTORCYCLE SAFETY

Ms. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, the Bureau of Transportation Statistics tells us that almost 5 million motorcycles are registered to operate on America's roadways, covering almost 17 million miles per year. Many more are used off-road, and some estimates put the actual number of riders at up to 20 million.

All these Americans choose to ride motorcycles either for recreation or for their primary means of transportation, and every year the number of Americans on motorcycles increases. As that number increases, so does the number of accidents, including fata accidents. Yet we are falling tragically behind in training these individuals to ride safely.

The single best way to avoid injuries, fatalities, high insurance costs, lawsuits, medical costs and all the other factors that come into play is by avoiding the accidents in the first place.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, in its Motorcycle Safety Program issued in January 2003, said: "Crash prevention . . . offers the greatest potential safety benefit for motorcyclists."

And the single best way to avoid accidents is to provide safety training.

Training works.

Untrained riders have accidents, and trained riders do not. It is really as simple as that.

A study of the California Motorcyclist Safety Program designed by Dr. John Billheimer and completed in 1996 found that rider training dramatically reduces accidents, and thus eliminates injuries and fatalities. Specifically, the study stated, "Analyses of statewide accident trends show that total motorcycle accidents have dropped 67 percent since the introduction of the California Motorcyclist Safety Program, with a drop of 88 percent among the under-18 riders. . . . If accident trends in California had paralleled those in the rest of the U.S. over this period, the State would have experienced an additional 124 fatalities per year. By any measure, the California Motorcyclist Safety Program is a cost-effective program that pays for itself many times over in saved lives and reduced accident rates."

Even more recent statistics from the Commonwealth of Virginia are equally telling. Virginia has approximately 110,000 registered motorcycle. Since 1998, there have been 7,099 motorcycle crashes in Virginia and 222 of those crashes have been fatal. Yet out of all those accidents, the number involving riders with formal training is less than 4 percent of the total, and the number of fatal accidents involving trained riders is just 1.8 percent. The vast majority of all accidents—over 96 percent—are riders without training.

The most far-reaching document yet completed on motorcyclist safety is the "National Agenda for Motorcycle Safety," a cooperative effort by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, the Motorcycle Safety Foundation, the National Association of State Motorcycle Safety Administrators, and a host of others representing the insurance industry, law enforcement, riders, traffic safety experts and others.

The National Agenda identified a number of steps needed to reduce the tragic rate of motorcycle accidents. Uppermost among them is the need for better training.

Where does motorcyclist training come from? Who does it? How is it funded?

The truth is, training, and funding for training, is a mixed bag. And that, is exactly the problem. Most States provide at least moral support, but there is no uniform process for ensuring that training is provided, or that the facilities and funding is made available.

In most cases, training is funded almost entirely by the students themselves, who pay up to $300 per person for the privilege. Many States also collect money—often a nominal charge of $5.00 for a motorcycle operator's license. Both these efforts to raise funds are strongly supported by and promoted by the motorcycling community—but they want to ensure that the funds are actually used for things that enhance motorcyclist safety.

As for the curriculum itself, far and away the most frequent choice is the material created by the Motorcycle Safety Foundation (MSF), a group supported by the major motorcycle manufacturers.

The MSF course material for beginning motorcyclists is extremely comprehensive. It focuses on teaching the skills and knowledge needed for safe riding—beginning with the use of proper equipment such as gloves, boots and helmets, goes on to teach students how to predict and avoid hazardous situations, and graduates to teaching the physical skills needed for crash avoidance. This is precisely the course material that has produced such outstanding results in California, Virginia and many other States.

You may well ask, "If training is so successful, why do we still have so many accidents? The answer is as simple as can be: training availability lags far behind the demand.

Throughout the country, the waiting list to join a training class ranges from several weeks to several months.

In California, which has one of the oldest and strongest programs, it may take as long as 3 months.

In Wisconsin, one of the States where training dollars were totally eliminated, motorcyclist groups have stepped up to the plate to self-fund training, but the waiting list may be as large as 7,000 people.

Illinois trained 8,500 people in 2000, but had to turn away nearly 3,000 more for lack of space. Course capacity increased in 2001 and 2002, but the number of people turned away increased faster. In 2003, almost 11,000 students completed training, but almost 4,000 were told "Sorry, there's no room for you."

And that's the story in State after State.

Unfortunately, what that means is that untrained riders are increasing in number all the time. If you can pass your State's test, you can ride. And if you just spent thousands of dollars on a new motorcycle, the chances are you won't be letting that new motorcycle license go to waste. But a licensed rider isn't necessarily a trained rider, nor is he or she necessarily a safe rider. It takes training—or years of experience—to make a safe rider. The statistics from California and Virginia confirm that for all to see.

At the appropriate time, it is my intention to seek action to encourage the State to provide more and better support for these vital training efforts.

Now, let me turn to another concern of the motorcycling community. A large part of the training needed to produce safe riders consists of teaching them how to avoid road hazards that simply should not exist in the first place. In many cases, highway engineering practices focus on four wheels, not two.

The average driver cruises past such things as bridge expansion joints, loose manhole covers, the slick sealants used to fill cracks in asphalt pavement, rough asphalt patches, rumble strips and lane-dividing buttons that keep drivers awake, and the steel or steel cable barriers along the side of the road. Yet any or all of these things may be hazardous to a rider.

The motorcycling community has long sought ways to let engineers and designers know about those hazards, and work with them to design better systems. I have seriously contemplated offering an amendment that would address this issue, but I am happy to report that such an amendment may not be needed.

That concludes my statement for the movement, but at this time I would like to engage in a colloquy with the chairman of the Environment and Public Works Committee on this matter.

I have been working in several areas to address the issue of motorcyclist safety. As part of this effort, I have been working to establish an Advisory Council to assist the Secretary of Transportation in developing the appropriate safety specifications for highways and motorcycles. Fatalities among motorcyclists have gone up dramatically, rising from 2,112 in 1997 to 3,244 in 2002. Because motorcyclists have special needs and concerns, I have long been concerned that the Department of Transportation has not had adequate input from either riders or experts outside the Department itself. Thus, I proposed establishing a council of riders and experts to advise the Secretary on their unique safety needs.

Chairman INHOFE has been very helpful in trying to find the most appropriate way to get this accomplished. He suggested and I agreed to work with the American Association of State Highway and Transportation Officials—AASHTO, which is the organization that actually develops guidelines for highway safety engineering.

I recently received from AASHTO a letter describing a task force it has developed to identify strategies that can be used to reduce motorcycle fatalities and injuries. I believe this task force may be able to accomplish my goal of elevating the unique safety needs of motorcyclists to greater attention by including both riders and outside experts in its deliberations. As a result, I have decided not to offer an amendment to establish an advisory council at this time.

I believe that Chairman INHOFE has had an opportunity to look over the AASHTO letter and I am wondering if he agrees with me that this will accomplish what we have been working towards.

Mr. INHOFE. I have read the AASHTO letter to Senator MURKOWSKI and agree with her that the task force proposed by AASHTO will indeed accomplish what she seeks to achieve.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the letter from AASHTO dated February 3, 2004 to Senator MURKOWSKI be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF STATE HIGHWAY AND TRANSPORTATION
OFFICIALS,
Washington, DC, February 3, 2004.

Hon. LISA A. MURKOWSKI,
U.S. Senate, Hart Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR MURKOWSKI: It has been brought to our attention that motorcycle safety issues are of great concern to you and your constituents. As you know, motorcycle fatalities have gone up dramatically in the past several years, rising from 2,112 fatalities in 1997 to 3,244 in 2002. The State transportation agencies share your commitment to addressing this public safety problem.

Motorcycle riding has special needs and concerns. Currently, the American Association of State Highway and Transportation Officials (AASHTO), through the National Cooperative Highway Research Program (NCHRP), is developing guidance for the State transportation departments on motorcycle issues as part of the implementation of our Strategic Highway Safety Plan. Part of this multi-million-dollar research effort is focused on improving motorcycle safety and increasing motorcycle awareness. Targeted areas in which I understand you may share a strong interest include:

Increasing the awareness of motorcycles on the road through a "share-the-road with motorcycles" campaign and stressing the importance of motorcycle awareness information in driver training courses, driver handbooks or manuals, and licensing tests;

Expanding comprehensive motorcycle rider education and skill testing in all States for novice riders; and Reducing drinking and driving by motorcyclists through alcohol awareness messages and targeted enforcement.

As part of this effort, a workshop is being planned for June 2004 to identify strategies that can be used to reduce motorcycle fatalities and injuries. You and/or your constituents are welcome to participate in, and contribute to, this workshop. The result of this research project will be the development of a guide for highway officials on practices than can improve safety for motorcyclists throughout the transportation system.

Also as part of the implementation of our Strategic Highway Safety Plan, ASSHTO has committed to the creation of a joint task force to identify hazards/areas of concern to motorcyclists, as well as highway practices that can help minimize these concerns. Examples include the longitudinal expansion joints on bridges, the slickness of material used to fill asphalt pavement cracks, and the safety of various types of guardrail including traditional steel W-beam guardrail and the newer cable barriers. This joint task force will consist of members from the State transportation departments, the American Motorcyclist Association, the Motorcycle Riders Foundation, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, and the Federal Highway Administration. Additional input may also be sought from other noted experts in the areas of motorcycle and highway safety both here and abroad. The information developed by this special committee will be used as input into the revision and update of the various AASHTO manuals and guides.

We are very pleased that you have an interest in this area and we are committed to working with you over the next year to ensure that these issues are addressed and that the resulting recommendations are successfully implemented. Please contact my office at (202) 624-5800 if you have any questions regarding this information.

Sincerely,

JOHN C. HORSLEY,
Executive Director.

Mr. INHOFE. I understand that the Senator has also proposed creating a new program to encourage improvements in the States' motorcycle safety programs. I believe this amendment would be very valuable. I also believe it would be most appropriate offered as part of the Commerce Committee title, and would like to be added as an original cosponsor of the amendment when that happens.

Ms. MURKOWSKI. I thank the Chairman for his assistance and will add him as an original cosponsor when that amendment is offered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who seeks recognition?

Mr. INHOFE. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. FRIST. I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

CLOTURE MOTION

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I now send a cloture motion on the bill to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The cloture motion having been presented under rule XXII, the Chair lays before the Senate the cloture motion, which the clerk will state.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

CLOTURE MOTION

> We the undersigned Senators, in accordance with the provisions of rule XXII of the Standing Rules of the Senate, do hereby move to bring to a close debate on Calendar No. 426, S. 1072, a bill to authorize funds for Federal-aid highways, highway safety programs, and transit programs, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

HONORING OUR ARMED FORCES

SECOND LIEUTENANT LUKE S. JAMES

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I rise today to honor the memory of a brave young American who gave his life defending our Nation. I went to the ceremony out at Arlington this morning for this young man. It was one of the most moving experiences I have ever had. This man felt a call to serve his country, to be a part of something bigger than himself. For that call, he paid the highest price.

2LT Luke James of Hooker, OK, was a platoon leader in the 82nd Airborne's B Company, 2nd Battalion, 505th Parachute Infantry Regiment, stationed at Fort Bragg, NC. He is survived by his wife Molly and their little son Bradley who was born just 6 months ago. His parents Brad and Arleen James live in Hooker, OK, where Luke played football at Hooker High School and graduated near the top of his class. Luke later attended and graduated from Oklahoma State University where he participated in the ROTC program and earned a degree in animal science.

While on a dismounted patrol, Luke was killed by a roadside bomb during an ambush on January 27. He gave his life for the freedom of millions of Americans and for the peace and future of the Iraqi people.

Lieutenant James had long imagined a life of service in the Army. He was going to be career. These aspirations were realized culminating with his commissioning into the airborne infantry on December of 2002. His parents have described how Luke embodied the selfless attitude toward service to country that is so evident in all of our military men and women.

On February 10, I had the opportunity to attend Lieutenant James' funeral at Arlington National Cemetery. The ceremony honored Luke, and deservedly so. In the words of Lieutenant James's mother, speaking of her son, she said:

> We are very proud as his parents that he had the attitude he had, and wanted to serve. . . . It wouldn't have been this mother's choice, but you have to have young men and women willing to preserve the freedom we have. We are glad he was willing.

He was willing. We as a nation are grateful. The loss of 2LT Luke S. James is grievous to all of us. Our thoughts are with his wife and son, as well as his family in Oklahoma.

Today we recognize his valor and commitment. It is for men like Luke James I am proud to be a part of this great Nation. He was a special soldier, a real Oklahoman, and a true American.

As we tour over there, and see these young warriors and their attitude and commitment and patriotism, it is so heartwarming. I am sure at one time or another I saw Luke, but I don't remember when that was. But he is certainly typical, and his family, recognizing that he made the supreme sacrifice, but he made it for us. He knew that risk was there when he took on the position he held.

THE CASE OF MAHER ARAR

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I rise to speak about a very troubling case of rendition and alleged torture that became public last fall. This is the case of Maher Arar, a Canadian and Syrian citizen, who was deported from the United States to Syria last year, who was held and interrogated for months by the Syrians at the Bush administration's request, and who claims to have suffered torture while in custody there.

Mr. Arar was stopped by immigration officers at John F. Kennedy International Airport in September 2002 as he attempted to change planes on his way home to Canada from Tunisia. He claims that he was interrogated by an FBI agent and a New York City police officer, and that he was denied access to a lawyer. He further claims that he repeatedly told U.S. officials that he feared he would be tortured if deported to Syria. After being held for nearly two weeks in a federal detention center in New York, Mr. Arar was transferred by U.S. authorities to Syria. Arar claims that he was physically tortured during the first two weeks of his detention in Syria, and that he was subjected to severe psychological abuse over the following ten months, including being held in a grave-like cell and being forced to undergo interrogation while hearing the screams of other prisoners.

Syria has a well-documented history of state-sponsored torture. In fact, President Bush stated on November 7, 2003, that Syria has left "a legacy of torture, oppression, misery, and ruin" to its people. Stories like Mr. Arar's are appalling and, if true, seriously damage our credibility as a responsible member of the international community.

When unrelated allegations of rendition and possible breaches of the Convention Against Torture ("Torture Convention") surfaced in the summer of 2003, I wrote to administration officials asking for guarantees that the United States is complying with its obligations under this Convention. I received a response from the General Counsel of the Department of Defense, William J. Haynes. His letter contained a welcome commitment by the administration that it is the policy of the United States to comply with all of its legal obligations under the Torture Convention. I wrote to Mr. Haynes again for clarification on a number of points, such as how the administration reconciled this statement of policy with reported acts of rendition and accusations of the use of interrogation techniques rising to or near the level of torture. After 2 months with no response, another letter, this one not from Haynes himself but from a subordinate, was delivered late at night on the eve of Mr. Haynes' November 19, 2003 confirmation hearing for a seat on the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals. That letter was totally unresponsive to my questions.

Because Mr. Arar claims that he was interrogated by an FBI agent, I wrote to FBI Director Mueller on November 17, 2003 for more information on the case. Later that week, when press accounts indicated that the deportation of Mr. Arar was approved by the Department of Justice ("DOJ"), I wrote to Attorney General Ashcroft to ask a number of additional questions. Neither of these letters has been answered.

Administration officials claim that the CIA received assurances from Syria that it would not torture Mr. Arar, and yet, spokesmen for DOJ have not explained why they believed the Syrian assurances to be credible. Nor have they explained inconsistencies in statements coming from officials at different agencies. Although the administration has officially welcomed statements by the Syrian government that Mr. Arar was not tortured, other unnamed officials have been quoted in the press as saying that, while in captivity in Syria, Mr. Arar confessed under torture that he had gone to Afghanistan for terrorist training. I have asked DOJ to address that shocking contradiction and also to explain whether the United States has investigated Syria's alleged non-compliance with any assurances it provided to the U.S. government.

Whether or not Mr. Arar had ties to terrorist organizations, as is alleged by U.S. officials, or whether his confession was a false one produced by coercion, as he claims, he was subject to the legal protections provided by the Torture Convention, which the United States has ratified.

Recently, the Canadian government announced a full inquiry into the deportation of Mr. Arar to Syria and his alleged torture there. This inquiry will also examine the role played by Canadian officials in the case to determine whether the Canadian government was complicit in the rendition of Mr. Arar. And just weeks ago, a non-profit organization, the Center for Constitutional Rights, filed a constitutional and human rights case on behalf of Mr. Arar with the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of New York challenging the decision by federal officials to deport him to Syria. As the Washington Post editorialized on February 2, 2004, "The government should be obliged to spell out how this decision came to be made and why."

I urge my colleagues to follow this Federal court case the Canadian inquiry closely. If the allegations by Mr. Arar are true, then our government has much to answer for. The case has already damaged our standing with foreign governments, many of which we have criticized in the past for relying on torture in interrogations. If the U.S. is "subcontracting" interrogation of terrorism suspects to nations that bend the rules on torture, it undermines our reputation as a Nation of laws, it hurts our credibility in seeking to uphold human rights, and it invites others to use the same tactics.

I ask unanimous consent to print the letters I mentioned and the Washington Post editorial in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Washington Post, February 2, 2004]

MR. ARAR'S LAWSUIT

The Federal lawsuit filed last week by Maher Arar—the Syrian-born Canadian whom the federal government deported to Syria—offers a good opportunity to shed some light on one of the more peculiar civil liberties cases to arise during the war on terrorism. Mr. Arar and the U.S. government agree on the barest outlines of his story: He was flying home from Tunisia to Canada in the fall of 2002 on a path that took him through New York. He had, however, been placed on the terrorist watch list. When he presented his Canadian passport, he was detained for more than a week and—despite his pleas to be sent to Canada—was sent to Syria. There he was held for 10 months until intervention by the Canadian government secured his release.

That is where agreement ends. Mr. Arar denies any connection to al Qaeda. He claims to have been savagely tortured in his country of birth. And he alleges that he was sent to Syria, rather than to Canada, precisely so that he would be tortured—to be precise, "so that Syrian authorities would interrogate him in ways that [American officials] believed themselves unable to do directly." All of which, if true, would violate this country's international treaty obligations, which prohibit turning someone over to a government likely to mistreat that person. In Canada, Mr. Arar's case has become a cause, cited as an example of American arrogance and contempt for Canada's interests and citizens.

The American government firmly—if vaguely—denies any wrongdoing. It still claims that its information on Mr. Arar was solid, though it refuses to release any of what it terms "sensitive national security information." Mr. Arar is a member of al Qaeda, the Justice Department alleged in a recent statement. Anonymous officials have been quoted in press accounts saying that he was carrying a list of al Qaeda operatives and that then-Deputy Attorney General Larry D. Thompson signed an order certifying that returning Mr. Arar to Canada would be "prejudicial to the interests of the United States." The department says that Mr. Arar's deportation to Syria was "fully within the law and applicable international treaties and conventions." Far from intending that Syria would torture him, in fact, the department claims that it was "provided with reliable assurances that Mr. Arar would be treated humanely."

There are two questions that we hope this litigation would shed light upon. The first is whether Mr. Arar was, in fact, a would-be-terrorist. The second is why he was sent to a country known for abusing human rights, instead of being sent to Canada or detained here as an enemy combatant. What was the goal, if not to delegate to the Syrians torture that American authorities cannot engage in? At the least, the government should be obliged to spell out how this decision came to be made and why.

U.S. SENATE,
Washington, DC, June 2, 2003.

Hon. CONDOLEEZZA RICE,
National Security Adviser, The White House, Washington, DC.

DEAR DR. RICE: Over the past several months, unnamed Administration officials have suggested in several press accounts that detainees held by the United States in the war on terrorism have been subjected to "stress and duress" interrogation techniques, including beatings, lengthy sleep and food deprivation, and being shackled in painful positions for extended periods of time. Our understanding is that these statements pertain in particular to interrogations conducted by the Central Intelligence Agency in Afghanistan and other locations outside the United States. Officials have also stated that detainees have been transferred for interrogation to governments that routinely torture prisoners.

These assertions have been reported extensively in the international media in ways that could undermine the credibility of American efforts to combat torture and promote the rule of law, particularly in the Islamic world.

I appreciate President Bush's statement, during his recent meeting with U.N. High Commissioner for Human Rights Sergio De Mello, that the United States does not, as a matter of policy, practice torture. I also commend the Administration for its willingness to meet with and respond to the concerns of leading human rights organizations about reports of mistreatment of detainees. At the same time, I believe the Administration's response thus far, including in a recent letter to Human Rights Watch from Department of Defense General Counsel William Haynes, while helpful, leaves important questions unanswered.

The Administration understandably does not wish to catalogue the interrogation techniques used by U.S. personnel in fighting international terrorism. But it should affirm with clarity that America upholds in practice the laws that prohibit the specific forms of mistreatment reported in recent months. The need for a clear and thorough response from the Administration is all the greater because reports of mistreatment initially arose not from outside complaints, but from statements made by administration officials themselves.

With that in mind, I would appreciate your answers to the following questions:

First, Mr. Haynes' letter states that when questioning enemy combatants, U.S. personnel are required to follow, "applicable laws prohibiting torture." What are those laws? Given that the United States has ratified the Convention Against Torture and Other Forms of Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (CAT), is this Convention one of those laws, and does it bind U.S. personnel both inside and outside the United States?

Second, does the Administration accept that the United States has a specific obligation under the CAT not to engage in cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment?

Third, when the United States ratified the CAT, it entered a reservation regarding its prohibition on cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment, stating that it interprets this term to mean "the cruel, unusual and inhumane treatment or punishment prohibited by the 5th, 8th, and/or 14th amendments to the Constitution." Are all U.S. interrogations of enemy combatants conducted in a manner consistent with this reservation?

Fourth, in its annual Country Reports on Human Rights Practices, the State Department has repeatedly condemned many of the same "stress and duress" interrogation techniques that U.S. personnel are alleged to have used in Afghanistan. Can you confirm that the United States is not employing the specific methods of interrogation that the State Department has condemned in countries such as Egypt, Iran, Eritrea, Libya, Jordan and Burma?

Fifth, the Defense Department acknowledged in March that it was investigating the deaths from blunt force injury of two detainees who were held at a Bagram air base in Afghanistan. What is the status of that investigation and when do you expect it to be completed? Has the Defense Department or the CIA investigated any other allegations of torture or mistreatment of detainees, and if so, with what result? What steps would be taken if any U.S. personnel were found to have engaged in unlawful conduct?

Finally, Mr. Haynes' letter offers a welcome clarification that when detainees are transferred to other countries, "U.S. Government instructions are to seek and obtain appropriate assurances that such enemy combatants are not tortured." How does the administration follow up to determine if these pledges of humane treatment are honored in practice, particularly when the governments in question are known to practice torture?

I believe these questions can be answered without revealing sensitive information or in any way undermining the fight against international terrorism. Defeating terrorism is a national security priority, and no one questions the imperative of subjecting captured terrorists to thorough and aggressive interrogations consistent with the law.

The challenge is to carry on this fight while upholding the values and laws that distinguish us from the enemy we are fighting. As President Bush has said, America is not merely struggling to defeat a terrible evil, but to uphold "the permanent rights and the hopes of mankind." I hope you agree that clarity on this fundamental question of human rights and human dignity is vital to that larger struggle.

Thank you for your assistance.

Sincerely,

PATRICK LEAHY,
U.S. Senator.

GENERAL COUNSEL OF THE
DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE,
Washington, DC, June 25, 2003.

Hon. PATRICK J. LEAHY,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR LEAHY: I am writing in response to your June 2, 2003, letter to Dr. Rice raising a number of legal questions regarding the treatment of detainees held by the United States in the wake of the September 11, 2001, attacks on the United States and in this Nation's war on terrorists of global reach. We appreciate and fully share your concern for ensuring that in the conduct of this war against a ruthless and unprincipled foe, the United States does not compromise its commitment to human rights in accordance with the law.

In response to your specific inquiries, we can assure you that it is the policy of the United States to comply with all of its legal obligations in its treatment of detainees, and in particular with legal obligations prohibiting torture. Its obligations include conducting interrogations in a manner that is consistent with the Convention Against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman, or Degrading Treatment or Punishment ("CAT") as ratified by the United States in 1994. And it includes compliance with the Federal anti-torture statute, 18 U.S.C., §§2340–2340A, which Congress enacted to fulfill U.S. obligations under the CAT. The United States does not permit, tolerate or condone any such torture by its employees under any circumstances.

Under Article 16 of the CAT, the United States also has an obligation to "undertake . . . to prevent other acts of cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment or punishment which do not amount to torture." As you noted, because the terms in Article 16 are not defined, the United States ratified the CAT with a reservation to this provision. This reservation supplies an important definition for the term "cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment or punishment." Specifically, this reservation provides that "the United States considers itself bound by the obligation under article 16 to prevent, 'cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment' only in so far as the term 'cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment' means the cruel, unusual and inhumane treatment or punishment prohibited by the Fifth, Eighth, and/or Fourteenth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States." United States policy is to treat all detainees and conduct all interrogations, wherever they may occur, in a manner consistent with this commitment.

As your letter stated, it would not be appropriate to catalogue the interrogation techniques used by U.S. personnel in fighting international terrorism, and thus we cannot comment on specific cases or practices. We can assure you, however, that credible allegations of illegal conduct by U.S. personnel will be investigated and, as appropriate, reported to proper authorities. In this connection, the Department of Defense investigation into the deaths at Bagram, Afghanistan, is still in progress. Should any investigation indicate that illegal conduct has occurred, the appropriate authorities would have a duty to take action to ensure that any individuals responsible are held accountable in accordance with the law.

With respect to Article 3 of the CAT, the United States does not "expel, return ('refouler') or extradite" individuals to other countries where the U.S. believes it is "more likely than not" that they will be tortured. Should an individual be transferred to another country to be held on behalf of the United States, or should we otherwise deem it appropriate, United States policy is to obtain specific assurances from the receiving country that it will not torture the individual being transferred to that country. We can assure you that the United States would take steps to investigate credible allegations of torture and take appropriate action if there were reason to believe that those assurances were not being honored.

In closing, I want to express my appreciation for your thoughtful questions. We are committed to protecting the people of this Nation as well as to upholding its fundamental values under the law.

Sincerely,

WILLIAM J. HAYNES II.

U.S. SENATE,
Washington, DC, September 9, 2003.

WILLIAM J. HAYNES II,
General Counsel, Department of Defense,
Defense Pentagon, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. HAYNES: Thank you for your June 25, 2003, letter concerning U.S. policy with regard to the treatment of detainees held by the United States.

I very much appreciate your clear statement that it is the policy of the United States to comply with all of its legal obligations under the Convention Against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman, or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (CAT). I also welcome your statement that it is United States policy to treat all detainees and conduct all interrogations, wherever they may occur, in a manner consistent with our government's obligation, under Article 16 of the CAT, "to prevent other acts of cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment or punishment" as prohibited under the Fifth, Eighth, and Fourteenth Amendments to the U.S. Constitution.

This statement of policy rules out the use of many of the "stress and duress" interrogation techniques that have been alleged in press reports over the last several months, including beatings, lengthy sleep and food deprivation, and shackling detainees in painful positions for extended periods of time. It should also go a long way towards answering concerns that have been expressed by our friends overseas about the treatment of detainees in U.S. custody. It should strengthen our nation's ability to lead by example in the protection of human rights around the world, and our ability to protect Americans, including our service members, should they be detained abroad.

At the same time, the ultimate credibility of this policy will depend on its implementation by U.S. personnel around the world. In that spirit, I would appreciate it if you could clarify how the administration's policy to comply with the CAT is communicated to those personnel directly involved in detention and interrogation? As you note in your letter, the U.S. obligation under Article 16 of the CAT is to "undertake . . . to prevent" cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment. What is the administration doing to prevent violations? Have any recent directives regulations or general orders been issued to implement the policy your June 25 letter describes? If so, I would appreciate receiving a copy.

I understand that interrogations conducted by the U.S. military are governed at least in part by Field Manual 34-52, which prohibits "the use of force, mental torture, threats, insults, or exposure to unpleasant and inhumane treatment of any kind." This field manual rightly stresses that "the use of force is a poor technique, as it yields unreliable results, may damage subsequent collection efforts, and can induce the source to say whatever he thinks the interrogator wants to hear." Are there further guidelines that in any way add to, define, or limit the prohibitions contained in this field manual? What mechanisms exist for ensuring compliance with these guidelines?

Most important, I hope you can assure me that interrogators working for other agencies, including the CIA, operate from the same guidelines as the Department of Defense. If CIA or other interrogation guidelines in use by any person working for or on behalf of the U.S. government differ, could you clarify how, and why?

I am pleased that before handing over detainees for interrogation to third countries, the United States obtains specific assurances that they will not be tortured. I remain concerned, however, that mere assurances from countries that are known to practice torture systematically are not sufficient. While you state that the United States would follow up on any credible information that such detainees have been mistreated, how would such information emerge if no outsiders have access to these detainees? Has the administration considered seeking assurances that an organization such as the International Committee for the Red Cross have access to detainees after they have been turned over? If not, I urge you to do so.

Finally, has the administration followed up on specific allegations reported in the press that such detainees may have been tortured, including claims regarding a German citizen sent to Syria in 2001, and statements by former CIA official Vincent Cannistrano concerning an al-Qaeda detainee sent from Guantanamo to Egypt (see enclosed articles)?

Thank you again for your response to my last letter.

With best regards,

PATRICK LEAHY,
U.S. Senator.

DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE,
OFFICE OF GENERAL COUNSEL,
Washington, DC, November 18, 2003.

Hon. PATRICK J. LEAHY,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR LEAHY: I am responding to your September 9, 2003 letter, which follows up on the June 25, 2003 letter from Mr. Haynes concerning U.S. policy on the treatment of detainees held by the United States in the war on terrorism. The earlier letter to you and an April 2, 2003 letter to the Executive Director of Human Rights Watch (enclosed) contain precise statements of U.S. policy. As statements of U.S. policy, they reflect the policy applicable to the Executive Branch.

Your letter inquired about Department of Defense (DoD) implementation of the policy described in the June 25 letter. The Department takes its compliance with U.S. obligations very seriously. For that reason, the Department has a Law of War Program, which is governed by DoD directive 5100.77 (December 9, 1998), a copy of which is enclosed. That Directive, among other things, provides that it is DoD policy to ensure that DoD components observe the law of war obligations of the United States, and that those components implement an effective program to prevent violations of the law of war. Through the Law of War Program, the Department seeks to prevent law of war violations through training and by instructing DoD personnel about U.S. obligations, and ensuring that qualified legal advisers are available at all levels of command to provide advice on compliance with the law of war.

Moreover, DoD personnel are instructed to report allegations of mistreatment of or injuries to detained enemy combatants through normal command channels for ultimate transmission to appropriate authorities. Individual military personnel bear a responsibility to ensure their compliance. Commanding officers carry the additional responsibility to be aware of and to direct the conduct of the men and women under their command in order to, among other things, ensure their compliance with U.S. obligations in matters such as the treatment of those detained in an armed conflict. Although our principal institutional focus is, as it should be, on compliance with the law of war and avoiding and preventing violations of it, DoD also has an effective military criminal justice system for detecting, investigating, prosecuting, and punishing misconduct by military personnel should it occur.

Your letter also asked whether follow-up had occurred regarding allegations appearing in stories in the Washington Post on January 31, 2003, in Newsday on February 6, 2003, and in the Los Angeles Times on March 3, 2003. With respect to the first story, it does not allege unlawful activity by any U.S. official because participation in questioning abroad and knowledge of transfers to third countries, without more, do not contravene the law. With respect to the second story, the allegations of improper treatment it contains are by an individual who has not been a Central Intelligence Agency employee since well before 2001. With respect to the final story, the unnamed sources are quoted as saying that they did not know details, but they nevertheless then speculated about what was happening. To the extent that it might be possible to construe the latter two stories as containing allegations about the treatment of individuals while outside military control, I understand that the Office of the Director of Central Intelligence (DCI) has copies of these articles and is responsible for appropriate action.

Please allow me to emphasize that press stories often contain allegations that are untrue, and that my mention of the office of the DCI indicates nothing concerning the merits of those allegations and it does not express a view concerning what action might be appropriate.

I appreciate very much the opportunity to address your concerns. The Administration is committed to carrying out the law as we continue our dedicated efforts to protect Americans from terrorism.

Sincerely,

DANIEL J. DELL'ORTO,
Principal Deputy General Counsel.

U.S. SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY,
Washington, DC, November 17, 2003.

Hon. ROBERT S. MUELLER,
Director, Federal Bureau of Investigation,
Washington, DC.

DEAR DIRECTOR MUELLER: I am writing to inquire about the role the FBI may have played in the extraordinary rendition of Maher Arar, a Canadian and Syrian citizen, from the United States to Syria last year.

Press reports indicate that Mr. Arar was stopped by immigration officers at John F. Kennedy International Airport as he attempted to change planes on his way home to Canada from Tunisia. Mr. Arar claims that he was then interrogated by an FBI agent and a New York City police officer. He further claims that, "They told me I had no right to a lawyer because I was not an American citizen," and that he repeatedly told U.S. officials that he feared he would be tortured if returned to Syria. "Deported Terror Suspect Details Torture in Syria," Washington Post, November 5, 2003. After being held for nearly two weeks in a federal detention center, Mr. Arar alleges that he was then handed over to U.S. intelligence officials who flew him to Jordan and turned him over to Jordanian authorities, who beat him. He was then taken to Syria, where he was detained and allegedly tortured over a period of ten months.

While the Bush administration officially denies engaging in extraordinary renditions of this sort, numerous unnamed intelligence officials have admitted to the press that renditions have occurred, purportedly under a "secret rendition policy." Id. This policy was described as "a secret presidential 'finding' authorizing the CIA to place suspects in foreign hands without due process." Id.

I find Mr. Arar's claims and the underlying rendition policy deeply troubling and would like information on the role of the FBI, if any, in this case.

1. Under what specific authority was Mr. Arar detained, first at the airport and then at the federal detention center in Brooklyn?

2. Is it true that one or more FBI agents interrogated Mr. Arar after he was detained by immigration officers at JFK airport?

3. If so, is it true that Mr. Arar was denied access to counsel?

4. Did the FBI participate in any manner in the transfer of Mr. Arar to Washington, D.C., Jordan, Syria, or to any other location?

5. An intelligence official is quoted in the Washington Post story as saying, "The Justice Department did not have enough evidence to detain him when he landed in the United States." If this is true and if, as has also been reported in the press, U.S. officials were in contact with Canadian authorities, why did the FBI and/or other officials choose not to turn Arar over to Canadian authorities?

6. In a June 25, 2003, letter to me on the subject of rendition and other matters, the U.S. Defense Department General Counsel, William Haynes, stated that the "United States policy is to obtain specific assurances from the receiving country that it will not torture the individual being transferred to that country." Did the United States seek assurances from Jordan and/or Syria that Mr. Arar would not be subject to torture, or to cruel, or inhuman, or degrading treatment or punishment while in the custody of either nation? If so, what steps did the United States take after his rendition to assess compliance with such assurances in this case? Were the assurances provided in writing? If so, please provide a copy to the Committee. If such a document is classified, please arrange for cleared staff to view it. If no assurances were obtained, please explain why not.

7. Under U.S. law, non-citizens who express concerns about torture if removed are entitled to an evaluation of their claim before being removed. Under the specific regulations that were likely applied to Mr. Arar's removal, there is an explicit prohibition against returning someone to a country where there are substantial grounds for believing he would be subjected to torture. What process was used, if any, to evaluate the likelihood that Mr. Arar would be subjected to torture before removing him to Syria?

8. Are you aware of a "secret presidential 'finding' authorizing the CIA to place suspects in foreign hands without due process"? If so, please provide a copy to the Committee. If such a document is classified, please arrange for cleared staff to view it.

9. Has the FBI participated in any other alleged renditions, including interviewing and then handing suspects over to intelligence officers for transfer to another country?

Thank you for your prompt answers to these questions.

Sincerely,

PATRICK LEAHY,
U.S. Senator.

U.S. SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY,
Washington, DC, November 21, 2003.

Hon. JOHN ASHCROFT,
Attorney General, Department of Justice,
Washington, DC.

DEAR ATTORNEY GENERAL ASHCROFT: I am writing to inquire about the rendition of Maher Arar, a Canadian and Syrian citizen, from the United States to Syria last year.

I wrote to FBI Director Robert Mueller about this case on Monday, November 17. (See attached). Since that time, additional information on this case has been provided to the press, mainly in statements by unnamed administration officials, but also by Department of Justice (DOJ) spokespersons.

Washington Post articles indicate that the deportation of Mr. Arar was approved on October 7, 2002, by then-Deputy Attorney General Larry Thompson, who signed the order in his capacity as Acting Attorney General. "Man Was Deported After Syrian Assurances," Washington Post, November 20, 2003 [hereinafter Washington Post, Nov. 20. 2003]; "Top Justice Aide Approved Sending Suspect to Syria," Washington Post, November 19, 2003. The same story states that U.S. officials "decided to send [Arar] to Syria last year only after the CIA received assurances from Syria that it would not torture the man." Washington Post, Nov. 20, 2003. And yet, "spokesmen at the Department of Justice declined to comment on why they believed the Syrian assurances to be credible." Id.

Mr. Arar claims that he was, in fact, tortured while in Syrian custody. The Syrian government has denied that Arar was subjected to torture, but statements from U.S. officials contradict that assertion. In a November 15 New York Times article, "American officials who spoke on condition of anonymity," were quoted as saying that Arar "confessed under torture in Syria that he had gone to Afghanistan for terrorist training, named his instructors and gave other intimate details." "Qaeda Pawn, U.S. Calls Him. Victim, He Calls Himself." New York Times, November 15, 2003 (emphasis added). I find this statement to be shocking in light of the administration's assertions that it acted within the scope of its international treaty obligations.

Mr. Arar claims to have stated repeatedly to his U.S. interrogators that he feared torture at the hands of the Syrian government. Whether or not Mr. Arar had ties to terrorist organizations, as is alleged by U.S. officials, or whether his confession was a false one produced by coercion, as he claims, he was subject to the legal protections provided by the Convention Against Torture, which the United States has ratified.

The statements by Mr. Arar and the unnamed sources in the New York Times article cited above beg the question of whether the United States has investigated Syria's alleged non-compliance with any assurances it provided to the U.S. government. This question is especially critical in light of President Bush's statement on November 7, 2003, that Syria has left "a legacy of torture, oppression, misery, and ruin" to its people.

In light of the above facts and assertions, I request that you provide detailed answers to the following questions:

1. Under what specific authority was Mr. Arar detained, first at John F. Kennedy Airport and then at the federal detention center in Brooklyn, New York?

2. Is it true that Mr. Arar was denied access to counsel, as he claims?

3. An intelligence official is quoted in a November 5 Washington Post story as saying, "The Justice Department did not have enough evidence to detain him when he landed in the United States." "Deported Terror Suspect Details Torture in Syria," Washington Post, November 5, 2003. It has also been reported that U.S. officials were in contact with Canadian authorities regarding this case. Given that Mr. Arar, a Canadian citizen, resides in Canada and was traveling home to Canada when he was detained at the airport, why did the officials choose not to turn Arar over to Canadian authorities?

4. Did you become aware of Mr. Arar's case at any point between his detention on September 26, 2002, and October 7, 2002, the date the deportation order was signed by Mr. Thompson? Did Mr. Thompson, who was serving as Acting Attorney General when he signed the order, consult with you before signing the order? Did you approve this action?

5. In a June 25, 2003, letter to me on the subject of rendition and other matters, the U.S. Defense Department General Counsel, William Haynes, stated that the "United States policy is to obtain specific assurances from the receiving country that it will not torture the individual being transferred to that country." The November 20 Washington Post article cited above confirms that assurances were obtained from Syria. What was the scope of such assurances? Were they provided to the U.S. government in writing? If so, please provide a copy to the Committee. If such a document is classified, please arrange for cleared staff to view it. If the assurances were not provided in writing, please explain why written assurances were not sought or provided.

6. What steps did the United States after Arar's rendition to assess compliance with the assurances provided by Syria in this case?

7. Is the statement of an unnamed official above that Arar "confessed under torture" accurate? If so, then Syria's actions violated the assurances provided to the U.S. before Arar's rendition. What has the U.S. done (a) to investigate such non-compliance and (b) to hold Syria accountable for such violations.

8. Under U.S. law, non-citizens who express concerns about torture if removed are entitled to an evaluation of their claim before being removed. Under the specific regulations that were likely applied to Mr. Arar's removal, there is an explicit prohibition against returning someone to a country where there are substantial grounds for believing he would be subject to torture. What process was used, if any, to evaluate the likelihood that Mr. Arar would be subjected to torture before removing him to Syria?

9. According to the November 5 Washington Post article cited in question 3, numerous unnamed intelligence officials have admitted to the press that renditions have occurred, purportedly under a "secret rendition policy." This policy was described as "a secret presidential 'finding' authorizing the CIA to place suspects in foreign hands without due process." Are you aware of a "secret presidential 'finding' authorizing the CIA to place suspects in foreign hands without due process"? If so, please provide a copy to the Committee. If such a document is classified, please arrange for cleared staff to view it.

10. Has the FBI or DOJ authorized or participated in any other alleged renditions, including interviewing and then handing suspects over to intelligence officers for transfer to another country?

11. In its effort to fight terrorism, the administration has focused on individuals who have connections to Al Qaeda that need to be further explored, and has argued that it has the right to detain and interrogate prisoners in Guantanamo Bay, perhaps as unlawful combatants or enemy combatants, as long "as it is necessary to help win the war against the Al Qaeda network and its allies." Washington Post, '"High Court Will Hear Appeals From Guantanamo Prisoners," November 11, 2003. Notwithstanding my concerns about the legal status of those detained at Guantanamo, and the administration's treatment of enemy combatants in general, it would seem that Mr. Arar fit the classic administration profile for someone who should be detained in Guantanamo. Presumably, Mr. Arar would have been safer in detention at Guantanamo Bay than in Syria.

a. Was the option to detain Arar as an enemy combatant in Guantanamo Bay considered and rejected in favor of rendition to Syria? If so, on what basis was the decision made to send him to Syria?

b. Where there is more than one destination country to which detainees may be rendered, do you believe there should be a policy to render detainees to the country where torture is least likely (e.g., a country that does not have a history of documented humanitarian abuses)?

c. What is the standard applied by the administration in determining whether to deport an individual, transfer the individual to custody at Guantanamo Bay, or to charge the individual with a crime?

Thank you for your prompt answers to these questions.

Sincerely,

PATRICK LEAHY,
U.S. Senator.

LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT ACT OF 2003

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I rise today to speak about the need for hate crimes legislation. On May 1, 2003, Senator KENNEDY and I introduced the Local Law Enforcement Enhancement Act, a bill that would add new categories to current hate crimes law, sending a signal that violence of any kind is unacceptable in our society.

One such crime occurred in Passaic, NJ, in August, 1999. Kareem Washington, a gay man who sometimes dressed in women's clothing, was stabbed multiple times and left to die in an industrial area in Passaic. Police were unsure of the motive for the murder, however, the victim's wallet was found on his body. The victim was wearing a skirt, high-heeled shoes and stockings at the time he was killed.

I believe that Government's first duty is to defend its citizens, to defend them against the harms that come out of hate. The Local Law Enforcement Enhancement Act is a symbol that can become substance. I believe that by passing this legislation and changing current law, we can change hearts and minds as well.

TRIBUTE TO GOVERNOR LOUIE B. NUNN

Mr. BUNNING. Mr. President, I would like to take a moment today to remember Gov. Louie B. Nunn of Versailles, KY, who passed away Thursday, February 5, 2004. Louie was elected Governor of Kentucky in 1967 and was a pillar of strength in the Republican Party for half a century.

Looking back through the history of the Commonwealth, I can say that he was truly the education Governor. Louie was a champion of the education system in Kentucky. He raised the standards of education for all, but focused his efforts on those people who too often fell through the cracks in the system.

He also was an advocate for mental health issues. People used to put anyone with a mental health problem in a shoebox and write them off, but Louie saw that was wrong and got in there to fix the problem. He made it a priority and he cleaned it up.

He earned the title of Governor with a quick wit, a sharp political eye, and a gift for speaking. Louie could tell these fantastic stories and everyone would love them, captured by his words.

I have always admired his love of politics and that he always stayed committed to the Republican Party. I know he was proud to see the Republican Party win back the governorship, ending the 32-year drought since he held office in 1971. But I remember Louie for supporting his party in Kentucky through its successes and through its failures. Even when there was no one around to join him, he carried the Republican banner proudly.

And through his perseverance, he left a lasting legacy in Kentucky politics. More than any other person, he taught the people in Kentucky how to win elections and with that, he taught Republicans how to win statewide. He used to tell the story about his father, who was a precinct captain in Kentucky. Every election, his father would work as hard as he could and talk with voters one by one. And every election, they would win his precinct. Louie taught us that is how you won an election, one precinct at a time.

Gov. Louie Nunn was respected by his friends and colleagues on both sides of the aisle. All in the Commonwealth of Kentucky will miss him.

FREE TRADE AGREEMENT STRATEGY SHOULD PRIORITIZE JOBS

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I rise today to talk about our international trade policy—specifically this administration's selection of free trade agreements.

A year-and-a-half ago, many of us stood on this floor arguing that we should grant the President trade negotiating authority, or fast track. We did so because we believe that good trade agreements can create jobs for American workers and farmers.

I still believe that. And I believe we must move ahead with an aggressive trade agenda—even in an election year.

So what does that mean? Of course, our first priorities should be moving ahead with negotiations in the World Trade Organization and completing the Free Trade Area of the Americas. Those agreements provide—by far—the best opportunities for American workers and farmers.

Unfortunately, both of those agreements are languishing. WTO negotiations broke down last fall in Cancun. And the FTAA has been watered down so much that many are starting to question its value.

The administration, rightly, has chosen not to put all of its eggs in one basket. They have, over the last several years, initiated a number of new free trade agreements.

Now generally, I support this approach. We cannot allow the intransigence of some countries to hold us back from seeking new markets.

But the process by which we select new FTAs is deeply flawed. Initially, there was no process at all. There was no consultation with Congress, no public process, no criteria. To be fair, there's been some improvement—but not much, and only after serious criticism from Congress and the business community.

Mr. President, as a way to try to understand the administration's trade policy, Congressman CAL DOOLEY and I asked the General Accounting Office to assess the criteria and processes that drive the selection of our free trade agreement partners.

Today, GAO is releasing their report, and its findings confirm a number of serious concerns.

First, the criteria themselves are so broad I question whether they are meaningful. GAO finds that the criteria used within the administration to justify the selection of FTA partners have been a moving target. Different sets of criteria were used, for example, when deciding to go forward with the Central American and Australian FTAs than were used for some of the most recently announced FTAs, such as Thailand, the Andeans, and Panama.

Whatever the criteria considered, they are not weighted by importance. Moreover, the criteria are so broad—and their consideration so open-ended—it is hard to imagine any country in the world that couldn't meet them.

Second, to the extent that the existing criteria and review process set priorities, I question whether they are the right ones. GAO finds that strategic and foreign policy goals dominate the FTA selection process.

In my view, this takes our trade policy down the wrong path. I have long believed that trade agreements should be pursued on their own merits—because they create commercial opportunities for our farmers and businesses, and most critically, because they hold out the prospect of more and better-paying jobs for American workers.

These paramount concerns seem largely lost in the selection process, which looks like more of a throw-back to the Cold War—when trade policy was treated primarily as an instrument of foreign policy.

Third, the entire selection process is woefully lacking in transparency and public participation. GAO finds that, at the time this report was requested, there was virtually no formal process at all for selecting FTAs.

The attention focused on this situation by this investigation has clearly contributed to the development of a more formal interagency process for considering potential FTAs. But the process is still a closed one.

There is no notice of countries under consideration for future FTAs until the choice has already been made. There is no formal process for soliciting the views of Congress, the business community, or the general public. There is no formal public discussion of how to prioritize negotiating resources.

To my surprise, in fact, the administration has insisted until recently that the selection criteria themselves are classified. Important trade policy decisions like these should not be made in secret based on secret criteria.

Mr. President, at a time when manufacturing and other jobs are increasingly moving offshore, we need a trade policy that helps U.S. companies create and keep good jobs in this country. We need to bring the focus of our trade agenda back to commercial benefits and, most importantly, to jobs. We need to have a public dialogue on how choices are made and how resources are allocated. I urge the administration to engage with Congress to address the issues raised by this report.

I yield the floor.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

RECOGNITION OF ANNIE LEE COONEY ON HER 100TH BIRTHDAY

• Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I rise today with the distinct privilege of recognizing one of St. Louis's most outstanding citizens, Mrs. Annie Lee Cooney on the occasion of her 100th birthday February 25, 2004.

Mrs. Cooney was born in Indianola, MS, as the third youngest of seven girls and two brothers. As the granddaughter of slaves and the daughter of active participants in the African-American community, Annie Lee was instilled at an early age with values and character that remain strong to this day. Her parents, Indiana and Oliver Jarman were active in the African-American community in her home town. Her father, Oliver Jarman, was a high ranking official in the Prince Hall Masons in Mississippi and was also instrumental in founding a Penny Bank in Greenville, MS.

In 1922, after attending the Tuskeegee Institute, in Tuskeegee, AL, Annie Lee moved to St. Louis to live with her sister and helped with her new baby. But it was in St. Louis where Annie Lee's life changed when she met and fell in love with Roy Cooney. The young couple were married in 1924 and Roy and Annie Lee Cooney soon became the loving parents to thirteen children—seven girls and six boys, all of whom went on to attend college.

Mrs. Cooney has been very active in the Black Catholic Community in St. Louis since the early 1930s. Some of Mrs. Cooney's professional achievements include being named President of the Sisters of the Blessed Sacrament alumni in the 1960s and Sigma Gamma Rho Sorority Mother of the Year in 1980. Mrs. Cooney has been an active member of the National Council of Negro Women, the Council of Catholic Women, the Legion of Mary, the Catholic Knights of America, the Cairo Social Club, charitable works and scholarships to Black youth, and the Seminarians Club, spiritual and financial aid to Black Catholic Seminarians. She was also a member of the Cook Avenue Block Unit Association, and a strong force in her neighborhood—with her home often serving as a gathering place for youth and young adults. Perhaps Mrs. Cooney's greatest display of goodwill was in her frequent visits to Homer G. Phillips Hospital with the Helpers of the Holy Souls. For over forty years Mrs. Cooney visited the sick and hospitalized and would provide them with candy, toiletries, and prayer.

Mrs. Cooney has traveled the world extensively, and has brought goodwill to wherever she has been. She has remained true to her motto: "If I can help somebody as I travel on, then my living will not be in vain." On behalf of the people of St. Louis and the State of Missouri, I extend my most sincere gratitude to Mrs. Annie Lee Cooney for her years of dedicated community service and the goodwill. I wish her all the best on this most important occasion, her one-hundredth birthday.•

REMEMBERING ELROY "CRAZY LEGS" HIRSCH

• Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, today I honor an incredible athlete and a hero of University of Wisconsin athletics, Elroy "Crazy Legs" Hirsch.

Not many Wisconsin Badger fans can forget the 1942 football season, the only season "Crazy Legs" spent playing for the University of Wisconsin football team. By running, passing, and catching for over 1,400 yards, the Wausau-born Hirsch led the Badgers to a second-place finish in the Big Ten with an 8-1-1 record and a No. 3 ranking in the final Associated Press poll.

Hirsch's football career at Wisconsin was cut short when he joined the Marines and was ordered to Michigan for basic training in 1943. Hirsch continued his illustrious career at the University of Michigan and then professionally with the Chicago Rockets of the All-American Football Conference and then the Los Angeles Rams of the NFL. Hirsch was instrumental in the Rams' 1951 championship season by leading the league in catches, receiving yards and receiving touchdowns. Hirsch was inducted into the NFL Hall of Fame in 1968.

Hirsch's on-field legacy will forever be remembered, as his number 40 is one of only 4 numbers that has been retired by the Badgers. But his legacy off the field at the University of Wisconsin was just as important. He served as athletic director from 1969 to 1987. His tenure saw a rise in football attendance and a hockey program that reached national prominence.

The University of Wisconsin and fans from all over the State will be forever grateful for Elroy's devotion to UW athletics. My thoughts go out to his wife Ruth and his family. "Crazy Legs" was a tremendous asset to the University of Wisconsin, both on and off the field, and he will be greatly missed.•

ELLEN KAY YORK, U.S. ARMY CORPS OF ENGINEERS

• Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I rise today to honor the exemplary career of Ellen Kay York, who retired in January after 28 years of public service and returning to her home in St. Robert, MO.

Since November 2000, Ellen has served as the executive secretary to the Army's Chief of Engineers and Commander of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. As the senior office manager for the Executive Office, Ellen has been a valuable member of the Corps' team. In addition to her outstanding management of the Chief of Engineers' schedule, correspondence, and daily office operations, Ellen responded to a variety of requests for information from the public and the Congress, providing answers and information on behalf of the Chief of Engineers. Her skill and sensitivity have gained the respect, gratitude, and confidence of the senior leaders throughout the worldwide, 36,000-person organization.

Throughout her tenure with the Corps, Ellen Kay York has been a mentor to junior employees, spending countless hours and personal time to advise and counsel them. She has been active as well with Toastmasters International, as the Area 13 governor and as the president of the Corps' chapter, the Castle Toastmasters.

I know that the team at the Corps will miss her, particularly the so-called superior officers. I am sure that she managed and protected on too many occasions to site. But we are delighted that she is returning to God's country were she will be rewarded for and liberated from her dedicated public service. Today I congratulate this outstanding public servant for her many years of selfless and faithful service to the Nation.•

RECOGNITION OF COLONEL ROBERT C. KING

• Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I would like to take a moment to commend a remarkable Iowan. COL Robert C. King retired from his duties as Public Affairs Officer for the Iowa National Guard in December 2003 and will retire from the National Guard at the end of the year. Colonel King has been a member of the Iowa National Guard since 1968 and has worked tirelessly to break new ground in the area of communication between the Iowa National Guard and outside media outlets. It goes without saying, his service is appreciated beyond words.

In his job as Public Affairs Officer, Colonel King cultivated a media relationship with the National Guard when none existed before. He served during some of the highest profile activities since World War II including the crash of United Flight 232, Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm, the floods of 1993, as well as Operation Enduring Freedom and Operation Iraqi Freedom. Colonel King has represented the Iowa National Guard and its thousands of members at a variety of functions throughout the State. He has held several command-directed assignments and served as the commander of the State Area Readiness Command in addition to his role as Public Affairs Officer. He handled this dual assignment with remarkable ease and showed his dedication through his willingness to take on such a committed role. While under his command, the Iowa National Guard Headquarters received Superior Unit Awards every year. Colonel King served as the 34th Rear Area Operations Center training administrator and executive officer. Colonel King also served as the administrative-supply technician for the 186th Military Police Company. He has been a valuable connection for me personally, providing information for me to stay abreast of what is going on with the Iowa National Guard. I am proud of Colonel King and the contributions he has made to Iowa. He tapped previously underutilized or noticeably absent avenues within the media relations field for the Iowa National Guard. His devotion to the soldier, the National Guard, Iowa and this country is beyond reproach.

Again, I would like to congratulate Colonel King on his retirement as Public Affairs Officer for the Iowa National Guard. He has proven to be a remarkable officer and I thank him for his inexhaustible dedication to Iowa and to America.•

The town has a wonderful history as a playground for outdoor enthusiasts of all types, and draws visitors from many places. I look forward to watching this burgeoning Idaho community as it embarks on a new chapter in its history.•

IN MEMORIAM OF JOHN "JACK" BURRIS

• Mr. CARPER. Mr. President, I would like to set aside a moment to reflect on the life of Mr. John "Jack" Burris upon his passing late last month. Jack was a good friend and a man who made remarkable contributions to our State. He was a truly selfless man with a kind heart, diverse interests, great abilities and boundless energy.

Jack was born in Lincoln City, now part of Milford, DE, to the late John W. and Edna Vaughn Burris. After graduating from the Peddie School in Hightstown, NJ in 1938, he went on to study at the University of Pennsylvania in 1942.

After serving his country in World War II as a member of the United States Marine Corps, Jack returned to Delaware and began farming for several years. He then founded the Burris Poultry Business, which operated from 1948 until it was sold in 1971, at which time he founded Burris Logistics, a frozen-food warehousing and distribution company, which he ran until last year.

Jack was an uncommonly active member of his community, serving on countless boards and committees. He was a member of the Executive Committee of the Wilmington Trust Co. and was chairman of its Kent County Advisory Board. For 19 years, Jack was director of the Brandywine Fund. He contributed generously of his time and energies to community, educational and service organizations.

For 35 years, he served on the Milford Memorial Hospital Board. During a portion of that time, he was the board's chairman. More recently, Jack was a member of the Bayhealth Foundation board. Annually for 37 years, he and his family cooked the chicken dinners for the Milford Hospital Fair to help support the community's hospital. For 19 years, he served as chairman of the State Integrity Commission and in 2000, he co-chaired—at my request—the committee that raised funds to remodel the State Archives Building and transform in into a state-of-the-art facility.

One of Jack's greatest joys, however, was supporting the efforts of the United Way in our State. For more than 20 years, he actively participated in Kent and Sussex Counties' United Way campaigns, serving as chairman for many years. Jack and his wife, Lillian, were honored as exceptional volunteers, receiving the United Way's Alexis de Tocqueville Society Award. He was also a charter member of the Milford Lions Club.

From 1976 to 1992, Jack was a trustee of the University of Delaware and co-chair of the search committee that recommended Dr. David Roselle as president. In 1992, he received a Doctor of Humane Letters from the University of Delaware and also served that same year on the Agriculture Advisory Committee of the University of Delaware Board of Trustees, as well as a trustees emeritus.

For more than 30 years, he was an active member of the Avenue United Methodist Church in Milford, where he served on the administrative board and was the Pastor-Parish Committee chairman for 18 years.

In 1998, Jack was inducted into the National Frozen Food Industries Hall of Fame. The Baltimore and Washington Frozen Food Association in 1993 and 1994 honored him as Man of the Year. He was inducted into the Delaware Business Leaders Hall of Fame and twice, with his wife, Lillian Marshall Burris, was named as Outstanding Citizen of the Year by the Milford Chamber of Commerce. One of his greatest honors was receiving the Josiah Marvel Cup award from the Delaware State Chamber of Commerce in 1993.

Jack Burris also has received many prestigious awards for his dedication and service. Among them are the Dover Colonial Rotary's Paul Harris Service Award, the Lions International Melvin Jones Award for Dedicated Humanitarian Services, the Delmarva Poultry Citizen of the Year and Del-Mar-Va Boy Scout Council's Citizen of the Year.

Jack leaves behind his wife of 61 years Lillian, a remarkable woman in her own right, as well as four children, twelve grandchildren, three step-grandchildren, and twelve great-grandchildren. He also leaves behind a legion of friends, colleagues and several generations of Delawareans who are living more fulfilling, satisfying lives today because of Jack's extraordinary contributions.

Jack Burris' legacy will live on in the lives of those he helped to shape and in the hearts of those who were lucky enough to call him their friend. I rise today to commemorate Jack's life, to celebrate his life, and to offer his family our heartfelt thanks for sharing this remarkable human being with all of us. Jack embodied the best of Delaware. He was one of a kind. He will be sorely missed.•

HOUSE MEMORIAL NO. 1669

Whereas, through the Water Resources Act of 1990, the United States Congress deauthorized the Cross Florida Barge Canal project located between the Gulf of Mexico and the Atlantic Ocean, and

Whereas, said act also transferred to the State of Florida all lands and interest in lands acquired and facilities completed for the project, and

Resolved, That copies of this memorial be dispatched to the President of the United States, the President of the United States Senate, to the Speaker of the United States House of Representatives, and to each member of the Florida delegation to the United States Congress.

POM–339. A resolution adopted by the House of Representatives of the Legislature of the State of Texas relative to the enforcement of food import restrictions on seafood imports; to the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry.

House Concurrent Resolution No. 103

Whereas, imports of seafood from countries that use substances in aquaculture such as chloramphenicol, nitrofurans, and other veterinary drugs banned for such use in the United States pose potential threats to United States consumers; and

Whereas, the State of Texas is concerned about the use of certain antibiotics and other banned veterinary drugs in shrimp imported from outside of the United States for consumption in the State of Texas; chloramphenicol, a potent antibiotic, can cause severe toxic effects in humans, including hypoplastic anemia, which is usually irreversible and fatal; and

Whereas, because of such human health impacts, chloramphenicol, nitrofurans, and similar veterinary drugs are not approved for use in food-producing animals in the United States; and

Whereas, other countries, including Thailand, Vietnam, and China, have been found to use these drugs in the aquaculture of shrimp and other seafood; and

Whereas, the United States imports over 400,000 metric tons of shrimp annually, and Thailand, Vietnam, and China are the largest, second largest, and fifth largest exporters of shrimp to the United States, respectively; and

Whereas, on detection of chloramphenicol in certain shipments of seafood from China and other countries through the use of testing protocols that can detect such substances to 0.3 parts per billion, the European Union and Canada severely restricted imports of shrimp and other food from these countries in 2002; and

Whereas, the federal Food and Drug Administration inspects only two percent of all seafood imports into the United States and uses a testing procedure that cannot detect the presence of chloramphenicol below one part per billion; and

Whereas, United States-based companies involved in the importing and processing of shrimp are opposed to the use of chloramphenicol and are working with the domestic shrimp industry and the FDA to develop effective protocols to detect banned antibiotics and to exclude all tainted products from the United States market; and

Whereas, although the federal Food and Drug Administration tests of imported food did not detect chloramphenicol in shrimp imported from China and other countries in 2002, independent testing performed by or for Alabama, Florida, Louisiana, Mississippi, and Texas detected chloramphenicol in samples of imported shrimp from those countries at levels harmful to human health; and

Whereas, The denial of entry to the European Union and Canada of contaminated shrimp and other products will likely redirect those contaminated products to the United States: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the 78th Legislature of the State of Texas hereby express concern about the presence of chloramphenicol, nitrofurans, and other banned veterinary drugs in imported shrimp, the potential adverse impact on the safety of the food supply, and the resultant risk to importers and domestic stakeholders to develop effective methods to detect and exclude seafood imports containing chloramphenicol, nitrofurans, and other banned veterinary drugs; and, be it further

Resolved, That the 78th Legislature of the State of Texas hereby call for immediate and focused actions by the United States government to improve the enforcement of food import restrictions on seafood imports containing chloramphenicol, nitrofurans, and other banned veterinary drugs in order to ensure the safety of the food supply and to protect consumers in the United States and, in particular, in Texas.

POM–340. A memorial adopted by the Legislature of the State of Florida relative to federal funding for a full accounting of those missing from our nation's wars; to the Committee on Armed Services.

House Memorial No. 209

Whereas, the men and women of the United States Armed Forces are trained and dedicated to protect the security of our nation, and

Whereas, these men and women have devoted themselves to the task of protecting our lives and liberty as United States citizens, and

Whereas, all Americans derive inspiration from the sacrifices endured by members of the armed services during captivity as prisoners of war, and

Whereas, the courage of the families of those members of the Armed Services who remain missing or unaccounted for continues to be a great source of inspiration and admiration for all Americans, and

Whereas, Americans recognize the special debt of gratitude owed to those who have sacrificed their freedom in the service of our country, and

Whereas, as a reaffirmation of our commitment to the courageous families of these military personnel, the State of Florida pledges support to the Defense Prisoner of War/Missing Personnel Office within the Department of Defense, which is the federal agency charged to deal with the POW/MIA issue, and

Whereas, the State of Florida hopes to ensure that those who served and sacrificed for our nation are not forgotten and left on faraway shores by urging the Congress to continue their support of the Defense Prisoner of War/Missing Personnel Office of the Department of Defense and its activities: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Legislature of the State of Florida, That the Congress of the United States is requested to provide the funds necessary for the Defense Prisoner of War/Missing Personnel Office of the Department of Defense and other Department of Defense agencies that play critical roles in achieving the fullest possible accounting of POW/MIA's to continue their work unimpeded from budgetary constraints or reductions. Be it further

Resolved, That the State of Florida, through the Florida Department of Veterans' Affairs, will continue working with the Defense Prisoner of War/Missing Personnel Office to assist in the identification of unlocated family members of any Florida resident classified as a United States POW/MIA, thereby enabling the Defense Prisoner of War/Missing Personnel Office to request that eligible family members provide a blood sample to keep on file in the event it is needed in the identification process. Be it further

Resolved, That copies of this memorial be dispatched to the President of the United States, to the President of the United States Senate, to the Speaker of the United States House of Representatives, and to each member of the Florida delegation to the United States Congress.

POM–341. A memorial adopted by the Legislature of the State of Florida urging Congress to take all actions necessary to resolve the fate of Captain M. Scott Speicher; to the Committee on Armed Services.

House Memorial No. 429

Whereas, the Armed Forces of the United States fought admirably, bravely, and successfully during Operation Desert Storm, and

Whereas, M. Scott Speicher, then a lieutenant commander and now a captain in the United States Navy, flew a Navy FA 18 in a bombing mission over Iraq on January 17, 1991, and

Whereas, then-Lieutenant Commander Speicher failed to return to his carrier following that mission and was erroneously declared killed in action, and

Whereas, since that time, intelligence has determined that Captain Speicher ejected from his aircraft, and

Whereas, in January 2001, in an unprecedented action, Captain Speicher's designation was changed from "Killed in Action" to "Missing in Action," and

Whereas, the former executive chairman of the United Nations Special Commission, a renowned expert on Iraq, testified before the United States Senate in July 2002 that "we should not give up" on Captain Speicher, and

Whereas, in October 2002, based upon intelligence confirming that he had been taken captive by the Iraqi government, Captain Speicher's designation was changed from "MIA" to "MIA-Captured," and further intelligence reports make it clear that Iraq is in a position to resolve questions regarding Captain Speicher's fate, and

Whereas, this nation has pledged to the members of our armed services that they will not be abandoned, and the State of Florida renews that pledge to Captain Speicher: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Legislature of the State of Florida, That the Congress of the United States is requested to take all actions necessary to resolve the fate of Captain M. Scott Speicher, United States Navy, MIA-Captured. Be it further

Resolved, That copies of this memorial be dispatched to the President of the United States, to the President of the United States Senate, to the Speaker of the United States House of Representatives, and to each member of the Florida delegation to the United States Congress.

POM-342. A resolution adopted by the Senate of the Legislature of the State of Michigan relative to the Fair Credit Reporting Act; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

SENATE RESOLUTION NO. 183

Whereas, while the advantages of technology have brought consumers and businesses numerous benefits, our information age has also greatly increased the threat of identity theft. Although this issue is clearly not a new concern, the extent to which people are vulnerable to this crime has multiplied in recent years; and

Whereas, in many ways, protections for consumers have not kept pace. Public and private institutions have taken strong actions to try to safeguard their customers, but identity theft continues to increase. Identity theft is widely acknowledged to be one of the country's fastest-growing types of crime; and

Whereas, in November 2001, the United States Supreme Court rules that the two-year statute of limitations during which an identity theft victim could take action against a credit reporting agency under the Federal Fair Credit Reporting Act is based on when the identity theft took place; and

Whereas, given the unique nature of identity theft, which can easily take place without the victim's knowledge and which often takes a long time to unravel, the Fair Credit Reporting Act needs to be amended. This legislation must ensure that a victim of identity theft can take legal action based on when the fraud is discovered. Clearly, the law should not further penalize the victim of identity theft crime: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate, That we memorialize the Congress of the United States to amend the Fair Credit Reporting Act to provide that the statute of limitations for an identity theft suit is two years from the time the fraud was discovered; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be transmitted to the President of the United States Senate, the Speaker of the United States House of Representatives, and the members of the Michigan congressional delegation.

POM-343. A resolution adopted by the Senate of the Legislature of the State of Michigan relative to enacting legislation to prohibit the use of a person's Social Security number as an identification beyond its original purpose; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

SENATE RESOLUTION NO. 186

Whereas, Social Security numbers are unique to each individual and are invaluable for administering and policing the safety net for millions of Americans who qualify for the benefit programs administered by the Social Security Administration. Over the decades since Social Security was enacted, government agencies increasingly based their personal records on the Social Security number. This number began to assume the status of a virtual national identification number; and

Whereas, concerns over the proliferation of uses for the Social Security number outside of the Social Security Administration led to the enactment by Congress of the Privacy Act in 1974. This act was intended to limit further government use of the Social Security number. Nonetheless, congressional actions in the following years allowed the use of the Social Security number for additional non-Social Security purposes; and

Whereas, despite the federal Privacy Act, numerous governmental and even private organizations use the unique Social Security number as a basis for identifying individuals. With so many public and private organizations using a single identification number for an individual, it is possible to gather enormous amounts of information about a single person; and

Whereas, the Internet has made this explosion of information a danger to our people. Identity theft is now easy. The enormous financial and personal damage that identity theft inflicts on innocent people and the difficulty of correcting that damage is well documented. Congress must take stronger actions to prevent Social Security numbers from being used as general personal identification numbers: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate, That we memorialize the United States Congress to enact legislation to prohibit the use of a person's Social Security number as an identification number beyond its original purpose; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be transmitted to the President of the United States Senate, the Speaker of the United States House of Representatives, and the members of the Michigan congressional delegation.

POM-344. A resolution adopted by the Senate of the Legislature of the State of Michigan relative to enacting legislation to provide greater protections against identity theft; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

SENATE RESOLUTION NO. 182

Whereas, identity theft has become a significant and growing problem in twenty-first century America. The advantages of instant communications and extensive records, which are facilitated by the technology of the digital age, have also brought misuses of these tools for criminal purposes. With frightening speed and ease, an innocent person can face great problems or even financial ruin through identity theft; and

Whereas, much stronger protections need to be created to deal with identity theft. In addition to the steps of increasing penalties and trying to prevent this crime from occurring, there are legislative measures that should be enacted to try to make sure that people who are victims of this crime can recover with a minimum of time, cost, and disruption to their lives; and

Whereas, Michigan is taking numerous steps to fight identity theft, but federal actions are clearly vital to the ultimate success of this initiative. Specific measures that should be enacted into federal law include restricting the commercial use of Social Security numbers as identification numbers and allowing consumers to freeze their credit reports to minimize losses. Clearly, stronger protections against identity theft are long overdue: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate, That we memorialize the Congress of the United States to enact legislation to provide greater protections against identity theft. We urge that measures be enacted to restrict the commercial use of Social Security numbers as identification numbers and to allow consumers to freeze their credit reports to minimize losses; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be transmitted to the President of the United States Senate, the Speaker of the United States House of Representatives, and the members of the Michigan congressional delegation.

POM-345. A resolution adopted by the House of Representatives of the Legislature of the State of Michigan relative to enacting legislation to provide Michigan a more equitable share of federal transit funding and increased funding for bus projects; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

HOUSE RESOLUTION NO. 135

Whereas, the United States Congress reauthorizes transportation expenditures every five years, and the current authorizing legislation, TEA 21 (Transportation Efficiency for the 21st Century), will expire with Fiscal Year 2002–2003; and

Whereas, Federal public transportation funding is appropriated by Congress as part of this appropriations process; and

Whereas, the state of Michigan historically receives no greater than 45% to 50% of the tax dollars it sends to Washington as part of the national transit trust fund; and

Whereas, as part of TEA 21, states have been guaranteed a minimum of 90% return of all tax dollars in the highway trust fund; but no guarantee was granted to transit projects; and

Whereas, currently, only 20% of federal discretionary funding for transit projects may be allocated to bus or bus facilities, while 65% of all public transportation ridership is provided on buses in this country; and

Whereas, SMART, the public transit provider in southeastern Michigan, is working to secure increased federal transportation funding and a more appropriate percentage of discretionary funding for transit projects: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives, That we memorialize the Congress of the United States to enact legislation to provide Michigan a more equitable share of federal transit funding and urge the Michigan congressional delegation to support all measures that would guarantee that a minimum of 90% of all transit trust funds be returned to the state of origin. We also call on Congress to increase funding for bus projects and urge that a minimum if 33% of federal transit discretionary funds be allocated to bus and bus facility projects; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be transmitted to the President of the United States Senate, the Speaker of the United States House of Representatives, and the members of the Michigan congressional delegation. Adopted by the House of Representatives, November 5, 2003.

POM-346. A resolution adopted by the House of Representatives of the Legislature of the State of Michigan relative to developing economic incentives and other programs to aid in the recovery and stabilization of the manufacturing industry in the United States; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

HOUSE RESOLUTION NO. 165

Whereas, historically, manufacturing has been a base industry for the national economy, steadily comprising approximately 17 percent of the Gross Domestic Product since 1947; and

Whereas, the manufacturing industry has experienced a rapid decline and economic losses over the last three years. After a peak in July 2000 of 17.3 million people employed by the manufacturing sector, employment declined by more than 2.7 million jobs over the next 38 consecutive months; and

Whereas, lowered demand due to troubled economic conditions, coupled with unfair foreign competition, has greatly hindered the economic prosperity of the manufacturing industry. There is substantial concern over the continuation of manufacturing in the United States if the unfair trade practices of other nations on our domestic market are not addressed; and

Whereas, the restoration and revival of the manufacturing sector are vital to the economic recovery of the United States, as manufacturing has consistently led the economic recovery from previous down-turns; and

Whereas, maintaining a strong and vibrant manufacturing industry is crucial to sustaining or enhancing our national security. Recent bankruptcies and other losses in the manufacturing industry could put the United States in the unprecedented position where it must purchase defense technology from other countries, as foreign companies currently produce such items as a key guidance chip for smart bombs. Most recently, a foreign company purchased a bankrupt domestic manufacturer that retained the rights to the stealth fighter technology; and

Whereas, developing a package of economic incentives to help foster additional growth in the manufacturing industry and assist in keeping domestic manufacturers competitive with their foreign counterparts will greatly benefit not only the manufacturing industry, but will also provide great economic benefits to Michigan and the entire country: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives, That we memorialize the Congress of the United States to develop economic incentives and other programs to aid in the recovery and stabilization of the manufacturing industry in the United States; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be transmitted to the President of the United States, the President of the United States Senate, the Speaker of the United States House of Representatives, the United States Secretary of Commerce, and the members of the Michigan congressional delegation.

POM–347. A resolution adopted by the Senate of the Legislature of the State of Michigan relative to accelerated highway investments in any short-term economic stimulus package; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

SENATE RESOLUTION NO. 124

Whereas, since the events of September 11, 2001, a much sharper focus has been placed on ways to address America's economic stimulus needs and generate American jobs; and

Whereas, every $1 billion of increased investment in highway infrastructure generates 42,000 jobs and $2.1 billion in economic activity; and

Whereas, the Michigan Department of Transportation, working with their partners in the private sector, can provide an immediate stimulus to the economy, while at the same time addressing high priority infrastructure needs; and

Whereas, the Congress of the United States should provide $5 billion in obligation authority in fiscal year 2002 to the state Department of Transportation, consistent with the funding formulas included in the Transportation Equity Act for the 21st Century (TEA–21); and

Whereas, the Highway Account of the Highway Trust Fund (HTF) has a sufficient balance to allow for this investment; and

Whereas, Michigan's share of this investment would be $160.7 million; and

Whereas, this investment would create 5,804 jobs in Michigan; and

Whereas, there are considerable needs across the state for road and bridge improvement projects to warrant this additional investment: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate, That the members of this legislative body memorialize the Congress of the United States to include accelerated highway investments in any short-term economic stimulus package that is passed in Washington, D.C.; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be transmitted to the President of the United States Senate, the Speaker of the United States House of Representatives, and the members of the Michigan congressional delegation.

POM–348. A resolution adopted by the Senate of the Legislature of the State of Michigan relative to enacting Great Lakes environmental restoration legislation; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

SENATE RESOLUTION NO. 141

Whereas, although the Great Lakes network is a cornerstone of our nation's health and economic prosperity, many threats jeopardize this fresh water treasure. The invasion of nonnative species, pollution from numerous sources, damage to wetlands, and many other forces have damaged the lakes. Efforts to address these problems in the past have generally sought to reduce the damage rather than offering an opportunity to restore the lakes; and

Whereas, the proposed Great Lakes Environmental Restoration Act presently before the United States Senate holds great promise to address long-term issues facing the Great Lakes. This legislation would provide $6 billion over a ten-year span—in addition to existing programs—for a wide range of initiatives to restore the Great Lakes and put in place mechanisms to ensure better coordination of efforts and standards far into the future. Developing improved monitoring indicators is a major part of the act, with requirements for ongoing gathering and review of critical information; and

Whereas, the Great Lakes Restoration Financing Act, a similar House proposal, through $4 billion in funding over a five-year period, would provide a greater coordination of efforts through involvement by Great Lakes governors and elected officials as well as key federal agencies. There would also be an emphasis on implementing individual state management plans; and

Whereas, clearly, the Great Lakes network is one of the world's greatest natural assets. Investing in its restoration is paramount to the quality of the future we will share: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate, That we memorialize the Congress of the United States to enact Great Lakes environmental restoration act; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be transmitted to the President of the United States Senate, the Speaker of the United States House of Representatives, and the members of the Michigan congressional delegation.

POM–349. A resolution adopted by the House of Representatives of the Legislature of the State of Michigan relative to enacting legislation to give states the authority to ban out-of-state solid waste; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

HOUSE RESOLUTION NO. 85

Whereas, in 1992, the United States Supreme Court, in Fort Gratiot Sanitary Landfill v. Michigan Department of Natural Resources, ruled that states could not regulate or ban the importation of solid waste because only Congress has the authority to regulate interstate commerce. Since that time, Michigan has become the dumping ground for increasing amounts of solid waste from outside of our state and, with large amounts of trash from Canada, from outside the country; and

Whereas, Michigan has become one of the largest recipients of imported solid waste in the country. Approximately 15 percent of all trash dumped in landfills in Michigan now originates elsewhere. The amounts have increased significantly in the past several years, and recent reports of a major contract with Ontario and of the closing of the nation's largest landfill in New York seem to indicate this situation will only become a bigger issue in the future; and

Whereas, accepting unlimited volumes of trash from outside our state is a serious long-term commitment. Long after the money from the contract has been spent, there is a threat to the environment and an obligation to monitor sites to protect water and health. Clearly, any state accepting these long-term risks should be able to regulate what comes across state lines for disposal: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives, That we memorialize the Congress of the United States to enact legislation to give states the authority to ban out-of-state solid waste; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be transmitted to the President of the United States Senate, the Speaker of the United States House of Representative, and the members of the Michigan congressional delegation.

POM–350. A concurrent resolution adopted by the Senate of the Legislature of the State of Michigan relative to regulations under the Clean Water Act; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION NO. 11

Whereas, one of the most frustrating issues facing the Great Lakes is the threat from nonindigenous species. Invaders like the zebra mussle, the round goby, and the ruffe damage the ecology of the Great Lakes and connecting waterways in many ways. The impact of exotic species on municipal water systems, fishing, and aquatic plant life exacts a terrible toll on the nation's most important freshwater resource; and

Whereas, Michigan has exercised consistent leadership in the effort to prevent the arrival of more nonnative species. Out state has put incentives in place in an effort to curb the release of untreated ballast water from the ships that traverse the lakes, which is the primary source of these foreign species. As a state that has suffered significantly because of organisms released into the lakes through the discharge of ballast water, Michigan has repeatedly called for stronger steps to prevent this from happening; and

Whereas, the effort to halt the introduction and spread of nonindigenous species through ballast water discharges continues to be frustrated by federal regulations under the Clean Water Act. Although this key federal act requires permits through the National Pollution Discharge Elimination System for discharges, 40 C.F.R. §122.3(a) provides that discharges from vessels that are incidental to normal operations are exempt from the permit requirement. Although efforts to repeal this exemption recently failed, removing the exemption remains a vitally important step to take to safeguard the Great Lakes: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That we memorializing the Congress of the United States and the Environmental Protection Agency to repeal 40 C.F.R. §122.3(a), which provides for an exemption for ballast water discharges from permit requirements under the federal Clean Water Act; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be transmitted to the Environmental Protection Agency, the United States Coast Guard, the President of the United States Senate, the Speaker of the United States House of Representatives, and the members of the Michigan congressional delegation.

POM–351. A concurrent resolution adopted by the Senate of the Legislature of the State of Michigan relative to funding the Great Lakes Legacy Act and to expediting cleanup efforts in Michigan's designated Areas of Concern; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION NO. 13

Whereas, the United States-Canada Great Lakes Water Quality Agreement of 1972, as amended, provided for the designation of Areas of Concern in need of remedial actions to address documented pollution problems; and

Whereas, fourteen Areas of Concern (AOC) have been designated in Michigan under the Great Lakes Water Quality Agreement, each with a Remedial Action Plan that coordinates and focuses the efforts of multiple levels of government and other stakeholders; and

Whereas, substantial progress has been made in characterizing the sources and causes of beneficial use impairments, identifying necessary remediation activities, and generating broad stakeholder involvement in and support for the Remedial Action Plan process; and

Whereas, substantial resources are needed to remediate contaminated sediments, which are a persistent source of toxic pollution to the Great Lakes from each AOC and contribute to 11 of the 14 beneficial use impairments identified in the Great Lakes Water Quality Agreement; and

Whereas, Congress has enacted the Great Lakes Legacy Act, authorizing $270 million for monitoring, assessing, and cleaning up contaminated sediments in Great Lakes Areas of Concern; and

Whereas, substantial funds under the Clean Michigan Initiative environment bond program remain earmarked for cleanup efforts in Michigan's 14 Areas of Concern; and

Whereas, the United States Environmental Protection Agency is reorienting its programs to expedite progress in restoring the Areas of Concern, has finalized guidelines for removing communities from the list of toxic hot spots and has committed to a new Great Lakes Strategy that calls for completing restoration and "delisting" of 10 Areas of Concern by 2010; and

Whereas, the Senate Great Lakes Conservation Task Force has called for a more aggressive state role in supporting Area of Concern cleanup efforts and greater use of federal resources toward this end: Now, therefore, but it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That we memorialize the Congress of the United States to fund the Great Lakes Legacy Act at its authorized level of $54 million in Fiscal Year 2004; and be it further

Resolved, That we urge the Department of Environmental Quality, in collaboration with local advisory councils in the Areas of Concern, to utilize funds remaining in the Clean Michigan Initiative to leverage funding under the Great Lakes Legacy Act to implement sediment cleanup projects in the state's Areas of Concern; and be it further

Resolved, That we urge the United States Environmental Protection Agency and the Department of Environmental Quality to monitor and report on progress in achieving cleanup goals in the Areas of Concern, including the documentation needed to remove the affected communities from the list of Areas of Concern and to consult with and empower local advisory groups established to represent the Area of Concern communities in the development and implementation of cleanup plans; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be transmitted to the Administrator of the United States Environmental Protection Agency, the EPA Region 5 office, the EPA Great Lakes National Program Office, the International Joint Commission, the President of the United States Senate, the Speaker of the United States House of Representatives, the members of the Michigan congressional delegation, and the director of the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mrs. BOXER:

S. 2058. A bill to direct the Secretary of the Interior to cancel certain Bureau of Land Management leases that authorize extraction of sand and gravel from the Federal mineral estate in land in Soledad Canyon, California, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I am introducing a bill today that would terminate two Bureau of Land Management mining leases in Soledad Canyon, an area that is adjacent to the city of Santa Clarita in Los Angeles County, CA.

The bill would also prohibit the issuance of any future mining leases for sand and gravel in the Soledad Canyon area that exceed the historical level of mining, which is estimated to be 285,000 tons of sand and gravel per year. Before issuing any future leases in this area, the Secretary of the Interior would be required to consult with the city of Santa Clarita and take into consideration the environmental and traffic impacts of mining. Congressman BUCK MCKEON introduced this legislation in the House of Representatives in November 2003.

Here is the problem. These two leases in Soledad Canyon would allow mining of approximately 56 million tons of sand and gravel over the next 20 years. That will mean more dust and air pollution, as well as more traffic congestion.

The residents of the city of Santa Clarita suffer from some of the worst air quality in the Nation. The mining in Soledad Canyon would occur in an area where State standards for particulate matter are already exceeded. Development of these mining leases will worsen air pollution by increasing dust and particulate matter emissions. This will lead to more respiratory problems, increased doctor and emergency room visits, more hospitalizations for cardiac and pulmonary disease, and premature deaths for area residents.

Increased traffic congestion will also result from these mining leases. Interstate 5 and State Route 14 are located in the vicinity of the mining leases, and State Route 14 is already plagued with serious traffic problems. Development of these leases would tremendously increase truck traffic in the area, causing further congestion. It is estimated that the proposed expansion of mining in Soledad Canyon would result in 347 trucks making round trips to and from the site each day in the first 10 years, increasing to 582 trucks in the second 10 years of operation.

Due to these serious concerns over impacts on air quality and traffic congestion, there is very strong opposition to the two leases by the people of Santa Clarita and over 80 organizations in California. We need this legislation.

I believe that local health and safety concerns should not be overridden by the Federal Government. Development of these leases should not occur to the detriment of the people of Santa Clarita. I share Congressman BUCK McKEON's interest in working with TMC/Cemex—the company that currently holds the leases—the city of Santa Clarita, and the Bureau of Land Management to find a resolution that is acceptable to all parties and that protects the health and safety of the city and its residents.

By Mr. FITZGERALD (for himself, Mr. LEVIN, and Ms. COLLINS):

S. 2059. A bill to improve the governance and regulation of mutual funds under the securities laws, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. President, today I rise to introduce the Mutual Fund Reform Act of 2004. This legislation would make fund governance truly accountable, require genuinely transparent total fund costs, enhance comprehension and comparison of fund fees, confront trading abuses, create a culture of compliance, eliminate hidden transactions that mislead investors and drive up costs, and save billions of dollars for the 95 million Americans who invest in mutual funds. Above all, the Mutual Fund Reform Act strives to preserve the attraction of mutual funds as a flexible and investor-friendly vehicle for long-term, diversified investment.

I am pleased to be joined today by my distinguished colleagues on the Committee on Governmental Affairs, Senator CARL LEVIN and Senator SUSAN COLLINS, the committee's chairman, who are original cosponsors of this legislation. I am grateful for the extensive and important input both Senators provided in the drafting of this bill, and appreciate the invaluable perspective Senator COLLINS provided based on her first-hand experience as Maine's Commissioner of Professional and Financial Regulation.

I would like to take this opportunity to recognize the work of a number of our colleagues in this area. Last year, I was pleased to cosponsor S. 1822, introduced by Senator DANIEL AKAKA, the Ranking Member of the Senate Governmental Affairs Subcommittee on Financial Management, the Budget, and International Security, which I chair, to address mutual fund trading abuses. Senators CORZINE, DODD, and KERRY also have sponsored mutual fund bills from which I drew, as well as legislation introduced by Congressman RICHARD BAKER last summer and overwhelmingly passed by the House of Representatives at the end of the last session.

I also would like to acknowledge the ongoing work of the Senate Committee on Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs, the authorizing committee which will ultimately decide questions of mutual fund industry reform. The committee is conducting a series of legislative hearings to examine the mutual fund scandal and the merits of various reform proposals. I commend the leadership of Chairman RICHARD SHELBY and Ranking Member PAUL SARBANES, and look forward to continuing to work with them and the other members of the Banking Committee on this issue in the coming months.

The bill I am introducing today reflects extensive testimony that was presented during oversight hearings of the Financial Management Subcommittee that I chaired on November 3, 2003, and January 27, 2004. The general consensus of the panelists at the November hearing was that illegal late trading and illicit market timing were indeed very serious threats to investors but that excessive fees and inadequate disclosure of those fees were an even more serious threat to American investors. Witnesses at our hearing last month testified regarding the propriety and the adequacy of the disclosure of mutual fund fees, specifically hidden fees such as revenue sharing, directed brokerage, soft money arrangements, and hidden loads such as 12b-1 fees. The subcommittee also heard from two whistleblowers who were responsible for the initial revelations regarding Putnam Investments and Canary Capital Partners, LLC.

The bill also reflects the constructive input from a number of key organizations and leaders of mutual fund reform. I especially appreciate the extensive contributions of Mr. John Bogle, the founder and former CEO of the Vanguard Group, who has been a champion of reforms in the mutual fund industry for many years.

I ask unanimous consent that letters from Mr. Bogle, Massachusetts Secretary of State William Galvin, and organizations representing investors and consumers endorsing this bill be printed in the RECORD.

In 1980 only a small percentage of Americans invested in mutual funds and the assets of the industry were only $115 billion. Today, roughly 95 million Americans own shares in mutual funds and the assets of all the funds combined are now more than $7 trillion. Mutual funds have grown in popularity in part because Congress has sanctioned or expanded a variety of tax-sheltered savings vehicles such as 401(k)s, Keoghs, traditional IRAs, Roth IRAs, Rollover IRAs, and college savings plans. Given that mutual funds are now the repository of such a large share of so many Americans' savings, few issues we confront are as important as protecting the money invested in mutual funds.

I want to commend the many recent regulatory initiatives from the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC). They are collectively a step in the right direction and a demonstration of our seriousness in Washington about putting the interests of America's mutual investors first. But the SEC does not have the statutory authority to take all of the needed steps to restore integrity and health to the mutual fund industry. The current scandals demand that Congress take a comprehensive look at an industry still governed by a 64-year old law.

Therefore, the Mutual Fund Reform Act of 2004 puts the interests of investors first by: ensuring independent and empowered boards of directors, clarifying and making specific fund directors' foremost fiduciary duty to shareholders; strengthening the fund advisers' fiduciary duty regarding negotiating fees and providing fund information, and instituting Sarbanes-Oxley-style provisions for independent accounting and auditing, codes of ethics, chief compliance officers, compliance certifications, and whistleblower protections.

The Mutual Reform Act of 2004 empowers both investors and free markets with clear, comprehensible fund transaction information by: standardizing computation and disclosure of (i) fund expenses and (ii) transaction costs, which yield a total investment cost ratio, and tell investors actual dollar costs; providing disclosure and definitions of all types of costs and requiring that the SEC approve imposition of any new types of costs; disclosing portfolio managers' compensation and stake in fund; disclosing broker compensation at the point of sale; disclosing and explaining portfolio turnover ratios to investors, and disclosing proxy voting policies and record.

The Mutual Fund Reform Act of 2004 vastly simplifies the disclosure regime by: eliminating asset-based distribution fees (Rule 12b-1 fees), the original purpose of which has been lost and the current use of which is confusing and misleading—and amending the Investment Company Act of 1940 to permit the use of the adviser's fee for distribution expenses, which locates the incentive to keep distribution expenses reasonable exactly where it belongs—with the fund adviser; prohibiting shadow transactions—such as revenue sharing, directed brokerage, and soft-dollar arrangements—that are riddled with conflicts of interest, serve no reasonable business purpose, and drive up costs; "Unbundling" commissions, such that research and other services, heretofore covered by hidden soft-dollar arrangements, will be the subject of separate negotiation and a freer and fairer market; requiring enforceable market timing policies and mandatory redemption fees—as well as provision by omnibus account intermediaries of basic customer information to funds to enable funds to enforce their market timing, redemption fee, and breakpoint discount policies; and requiring fair value pricing and strengthening late trading rules.

The Mutual Fund Reform Act also would perpetuate the dialogue and preserve the wisdom gathered from hard experience. The Act directs the SEC and the General Accounting Office to conduct several studies, including a study of ways to minimize conflicts of interest and incentivize internal management of mutual funds; a study on coordination of enforcement efforts between SEC headquarters, SEC regional offices, and state regulatory and law enforcement entities; and a study to enhance the role of the internet in educating investors and providing timely information about laws, regulations, enforcement proceedings and individual funds, possibly by mandating disclosures on websites.

Enactment of the Mutual Fund Reform Act would help restore the integrity of the mutual fund industry and would dramatically enhance the amount of retirement savings for many long term investors. Shareholders would be the big winners under this legislation, and the losers would be high cost mutual funds. I therefore urge my colleagues to support passage of this legislation.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill, as well as a one-page summary and white paper describing the legislation, be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the materials were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE VANGUARD GROUP,
Valley Forge, PA, February 6, 2004.

I salute Senator Fitzgerald for the bill he has drafted to improve the governance and regulation of mutual funds. I've spent the greater part of my career speaking out on nearly all of the important legislative issues that Senator Fitzgerald's Mutual Fund Reform Act of 2004 addresses. While nothing can solve the industry's problems overnight, I view of the bill as the gold standard in putting mutual fund shareholders back in the driver's seat, and endorse it in its entirety.

JOHN C. BOGLE,
Founder.

SECRETARY OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS,
Boston, MA, January 23, 2004.

Re Mutual Fund Reform act of 2004.

Hon. PETER FITZGERALD,
Chairman, Subcommittee of Financial Management, the Budget, and International Security, Senate Committee of Governmental Affairs, Hart Senate Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR FITZGERALD: As the chief securities regulator in Massachusetts, I write in support of the Mutual Fund Reform Act of 2004. The recently-exposed abuses relating to mutual funds show the need for this legislation. Small investors are particularly vulnerable to these abusive practices, since nearly half of U.S. households own mutual funds—often through their retirement plans.

The bill increases the independence of fund directors and obliges them to act as fiduciaries on behalf of shareholders; it makes the costs of mutual funds more transparent; and it curtails many abusive mutual fund sales practices.

We particularly support the provisions to prohibit directed brokerage and soft dollar arrangements by mutual funds. These practices, at best, mask the true costs of fund operations; at worst, they are kick back-type payments in the securities industry.

I also encourage you to add a provision that will give investors the ability to choose the forum where they may arbitrate disputes with their brokers. Under the current system, investors are forced to arbitrate their claims in a forum chosen by the brokerage.

Please contact me if I can assist you in working for the adoption of this important legislation.

Sincerely,

WILLIAM F. GALVIN,
Secretary of the Commonwealth.

FEBRUARY 5, 2004.

Hon. PETER G. FITZGERALD,
Dirksen Building, U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR FITZGERALD: We are writing to express our enthusiastic support for your draft "Mutual Fund Reform Act." More than any other legislation that has yet to be introduced since the mutual fund scandals erupted last year, this bill recognizes the need to fundamentally transform the way in which mutual funds are governed, operated, and sold to ensure that they live up to their statutory obligation to operate in their shareholders' best interests.

This legislation offers a thoughtful and far-reaching agenda for reform. It addresses significant gaps in the SEC's proposals to improve fund governance, dramatically enhances the quality of mutual fund cost disclosures, and prohibits distribution practices that create unacceptable and poorly understood conflicts of interest. It also takes the necessary step of banning hidden "soft dollar" arrangements that boost shareholder costs and create additional conflicts of interest. We look forward to working with you to win passage of these essential reforms.

Our support for this bill is based on the firm belief that mutual funds have been and will continue to be the best way for average, middle-income investors to participate in our nation's securities markets. Individuals with only modest amounts to invest have benefited greatly from the opportunity mutual funds offer to achieve broad diversification. While wealthy investors have other options that provide similar benefits, average, middle-class investors do not. The resulting influx of money into mutual funds has in turn produced generous profits for fund companies.

This long record or mutual success had caused some in the industry and among its regulators to become complacent, taking for granted that all was well. By revealing the extent to which some fund managers had abandoned their obligation to operate in fund shareholders' best interests, the trading scandals uncovered last fall provided sudden and compelling evidence that such complacency was ill-founded. The closer scrutiny of fund operations that resulted quickly uncovered evidence of other similar failings: Management fees that had failed to drop significantly, or in some cases at all, despite a massive growth in assets; use of portfolio transaction commissions, which are not incorporated in the fund expense ratio, to pay for services whose costs would otherwise have to be disclosed; use of portfolio transaction commissions borne by shareholders to pay for services whose benefits flowed in part or in whole to the fund manager; use of poorly disclosed or misunderstood compensation methods, including 12b-1 fees, directed brokerage, and payments for shelf space to induce brokers to recommend particular funds; and broker recommendation of mutual funds based on the financial incentives received rather than on which funds offer the best quality at the most reasonable price.

By driving up costs to investors and undermining competition based on cost and quality, these practices inflict far greater financial harm on their victims than the trading scandals appear to have done.

Since it became clear that mutual fund sales and trading abuses were widespread throughout the industry, the Securities and Exchange Commission has responded with an ambitious enforcement, investigation, and rule-making agenda. In addition to developing reforms targeted specifically at excessive and late trading, the Commission has issued proposals to strengthen mutual fund governance, sought suggestions on how to improve disclosure of portfolio transaction costs, and proposed rules to improve disclosure of distribution-related costs and conflicts of interest.

Despite this important progress, there are serious gaps in the SEC's regulatory agenda. Some result from the agency's lack of authority to effect change. Others result from the SEC's lack of a vision of how mutual fund regulation must be transformed. This legislation fills those gaps. If it is adopted, it will dramatically improve fund governance, eliminate practices that create unacceptable conflicts of interest, and save mutual fund investors potentially tens of billions of dollars a year by wringing out excess costs.

Our specific comments in support of some of the bill's most important pro-investor provisions follow.

1. The legislation's fund governance reforms address significant gaps in the SEC's rule proposal.

The Securities and Exchange Commission has made a promising start on the issue of fund governance. In January, it issued a rule proposal that would require that three-quarters of mutual fund board members, including the chairman, be independent. It would further require that independent members meet at least quarterly without any interested parties present. It authorizes the board to hire staff to help it fulfill its responsibilities. And it requires boards to retain copies of the written documents considered as part of the board's annual review of the advisory contract.

Although the Commission certainly deserves credit for this important first step, there is more that must be done to achieve the goal of improved fund governance. First and foremost, the Commission lacks the authority to strengthen the definition of independent director. So, even if it adopts its independent governance requirements without weakening amendments over the already announced objections of two commissioners, non-immediate family members, individuals associated with significant service providers of the fund, and recently retired fund company employees would all be eligible to serve as "independent" directors. Furthermore, the SEC proposal does not require that independent directors have sole authority to nominate new directors and set director compensation, potentially leaving significant issues in the hands of fund managers.

This bill addresses all those concerns. It includes an excellent definition of independence, which both specifically addresses the issue of significant service providers and authorizes the SEC to exclude from the definition of independent director any set of individuals who for business, family, or other reasons are unlikely to demonstrate the appropriate degree of independence. It requires both that independent directors determine director compensation and that a committee of independent directors nominate new directors. And it directs the SEC to study whether any limit should be placed on the aggregate amount of director compensation an individual could receive from a single fund family and still be considered independent.

The bill further recognizes that lack if independence is not the only concern about mutual fund governance. Also problematic is the failure of many mutual fund boards to act as fiduciaries, with a broad responsibility to protect shareholder interests. The bill attacks this problem by broadening the scope of directors' fiduciary duty. As defined in the legislation, that duty would include, among other things, a responsibility to: take quality of management as well as actual costs and economies of scale into account when negotiating management contracts; evaluate the quality, comprehensiveness, and clarity of disclosures to fund shareholders regarding costs; assess any distribution and marketing plan with regard to its costs and benefits; and monitor enforcement of policies and procedures to ensure compliance with applicable securities laws. The SEC would be responsible for detailing how the board's fiduciary duty applies in each instance.

By shoring up the independence of fund boards and expanding and clarifying their fiduciary duty to shareholders, this bill would increase the likelihood that fund boards would serve their intended function as the first line of defense against a variety of abusive practices.

One element missing from the bill, however, is any consideration of creating an independent board to oversee mutual funds. In testimony late last year, SEC Chairman William Donaldson suggested that the Commission was exploring ways in which funds could "assume greater responsibilities for compliance with the federal securities laws, including whether funds and advisers should periodically undergo an independent third-party compliance audit." "These compliance audits could be a useful supplement to our own examination program and could ensure more frequent examination of funds and advisers," he said.

Recent accounting scandals should have taught us the risks of relying on audits that are paid for by the entity being audited. If the SEC needs a supplement to its own examination program, a far better approach would be to create an independent board, subject to SEC oversight, to conduct such audits. The board could be modeled on the Public Company Accounting Oversight Board, with similar authority to set standards, conduct inspections, and bring enforcement actions and similar (or, better yet, stronger) requirements for board member independence. Your bill would require a GAO study of the SEC's current organizational structure with respect to mutual fund regulation. We urge you, at a minimum, to include an assessment of the benefits of establishing an independent oversight board as part of that study.

2. The legislation would dramatically enhance the quality of mutual fund cost disclosures.

A major shortcoming in the SEC's regulation of mutual funds have been its failure to take effective action to bring down excessive costs. Not only has the agency not used its own enforcement authority to bring cases against fund managers who charge and fund boards who approve unreasonable fees, it has criticized the New York Attorney General for negotiating fee reduction agreements as part of his settlement with fund companies that engaged in abusive trading. In criticizing those fee reduction agreements, Commission officials have suggested that they prefer to rely on independent fund boards and the market to discipline costs.

While the Commission can show some progress on the issue of fund governance, its proposals on cost disclosure are extremely disappointing. They fall far short of the bare minimum needed to introduce meaningful cost competition in the mutual fund marketplace. This legislation attacks to excessive costs both through strengthened governance requirements that do beyond those in the SEC rule proposal and through improved disclosures that will be more effective in raising investor awareness of costs than those proposed so far by the SEC.

One important area where the bill improves on SEC proposals is in disclosure of portfolio transaction costs. These costs vary greatly from fund to fund, may be the highest cost for an actively managed stock fund, and in some cases exceed all others costs combined. A recent study found that, on average, funds spend $0.43 on portfolio transactions for every $1.00 of expenses that are disclosed in the current expense ratio, and that in some cases fund transaction costs can exceed three or four times the current expense ratio. (Jason Karceski, Miles Livingston, Edward O'Neal, Mutual Fund Brokerage Commissions, Jan. 2004, available at http://www.zeroalphagroup.com/headlines/ZAG mutual fund true cost study.pdf.)

Yet, the SEC has long resisted incorporating these costs in the expense ratio. In response to congressional pressure, the agency has recently issued a concept release seeking suggestions for improving transaction cost disclosure, but it is not at all clear that the agency will come out in support of an approach that goes much beyond its previously stated preference for giving greater prominence to disclosure of the portfolio turnover rate. Such an approach makes not distinction between those funds that get good execution for their trades and those that do not. Furthermore, it continues to make it possible for funds to hide costs that would otherwise have to be disclosed by paying for them through soft dollar arrangements.

The bill would bring these costs out into the open where they belong. It would do so by requiring a separate computation of portfolio transaction costs that includes, at a minimum, brokerage commissions and bid-ask spread costs. And it would require this transaction cost ratio to be disclosed both separately and as part of a total investment cost ratio in the prospectus fee table and wherever else the expense ratio is disclosed. Because the bill would retain the current expense ratio, while also creating a new total expense ratio that includes portfolio transaction costs, it would allow the markets to decide which measure of fund costs is most appropriate and useful. Once this information is brought out into the open, these costs are more likely to be subject to competitive pressures, helping to drive down expenses for shareholders.

The bill would supplement this disclosure by requiring individualized disclosure in annual reports of the projected actual dollar amount of each investor's total annual costs based upon the investor's assets at the time of the disclosure. We strongly support individualized dollar cost disclosures, but believe that, to be workable, this information must be provided in the quarterly or annual account statements that show the shareholder's account balance and transaction activity. Putting cost information in dollar amounts side-by-side with information on the fund's gains or losses for the year is key to helping investors to put those costs into perspective. We urge you to adopt this clarification.

In addition, the draft version of the legislation that we have reviewed does not require pre-sale disclosure of mutual fund costs, as opposed to distribution costs. If we are to promote effective cost competition in the mutual fund industry, investors must receive cost information in advance of the sale. Post-sale disclosure, while useful in raising investor awareness of costs, comes too late to influence the purchase decision. We believe investors would be best served by pre-sale cost disclosures that are comparative in nature, showing how the fund's cost compare to category averages and minimums, and how this is likely to affect performance over the long-term. The provision in the bill that allows for point-of-sale disclosure provides an easy mechanism for offering this information. We urge you to add a provision to this effect to your bill.

With these changes, the cost disclosure provisions in this bill will go a long way toward bringing meaningful cost competition to an industry that has too long escaped its disciplining effects.

3. The bill would prohibit a variety of distribution practices that create unacceptable conflicts of interest.

Growing investor reluctance to pay the front loads that were common in the 1980s has driven mutual fund distribution costs underground. Funds substituted a variety of distribution practices—e.g., 12b-1 fees, directed brokerage, and payments for shelf space—that were less visible to shareholders. These practices encouraged the impression that the funds were load-free when in fact they imposed significant distribution costs. The practices adopted also posed significant new conflicts of interest.

Although 12b-1 fees are disclosed as a separate line item on prospectus fee tables, evidence suggests that investors are less aware of the cost implications of annual expenses than they are of front loads and do not necessarily understand that 12b-1 fees are used to compensate brokers. Because they are included in the expense ratio, 12b-1 fees appear to be a cost the shareholder pays for the fund, not a cost they pay for the services the broker provides. Problems with 12b-1 fees abound, including the fact that investors in funds that charge substantial 12b-1 fees may be stuck paying distribution costs whose benefits flow partially, or even primarily, to the fund company. Shareholders are forced to pay the fees even when they do not use the services the fees are designed to provide. With fund manager compensation based on a percentage of assets under management, fund managers reap significant benefits from the asset growth the fees promote, without having to risk their own money in the process.

Because it also uses shareholder assets to promote distribution, directed brokerage creates many of the same conflicts as 12b-1 fees and more. Not only are shareholders forced to pay higher costs for benefits that flow in part or in full to the fund manager, in some cases costs paid by one set of shareholders may be used in part to promote sale of other funds in the same fund family. Furthermore, these arrangements may encourage fund managers to decide where to conduct their portfolio transactions based not on where they can get the best execution, but on where they get the best distribution. They may even encourage fund managers to trade more than necessary simply to fulfill their directed brokerage agreements. This, in turn, drives up costs to shareholders. While 12b-1 fees are disclosed to investors, distribution costs paid through directed brokerage are not. Instead, they are hidden in undisclosed portfolio transaction costs.

Payments for shelf space are similar to directed brokerage agreements. Instead of being paid indirectly through portfolio transaction costs, however, these financial incentives are made in the form of cash payments by the fund manager to the broker. At best, by eating into the manager's bottom line, the payments may reduce the likelihood that the management fee will be reduced in response to economies of scale. At worst, fund managers will pass along those costs to shareholders in a form that is even less transparent than directed brokerage payments.

All these practices are designed to encourage brokers to recommend funds based not on which offer the best quality at the most reasonable price, but instead on which offer the most generous compensation to the broker. As such, they stand in sharp contrast to the image brokers promote of themselves as objective advisers. To its great credit, the legislation recognizes that simply disclosing these conflicts will not solve the problem. The best disclosure in the world is unlikely to counteract multi-million dollar advertising campaigns intent on convincing investors to place their trust in the objectivity and professionalism of their "financial consultant."

Instead, the legislation deals with these conflicts in the cleanest, most sensible way possible. It eliminates them. In doing so, it takes an enormous and much needed step toward forcing brokers to act like the objective advisers they claim to be. Furthermore, reforming the distribution system in this way is one of the most important things Congress can do to promote competition in the mutual fund industry based on cost and quality. That is because these practices allow mediocre, high-cost funds to survive and even thrive simply by offering generous compensation to the brokers that sell them. And, by making it harder for brokers to hide the compensation they receive for selling particular funds, this legislation should make it easier for shareholders to assess whether the services they receive from their broker justify the costs.

4. The bill would prohibit soft dollar arrangements that boost shareholder costs and create unacceptable conflicts of interest.

Soft dollar arrangements allow fund managers to pay for services through portfolio transaction costs that they would otherwise have to bill for directly—primarily research, but a variety of other services as well. And, because these costs are hidden, they create a strong incentive for fund managers to pay for services in this fashion. The conflicts they create are substantial. As with directed brokerage agreements, they encourage fund managers to direct their portfolio transactions based on the services they receive and not on who offers the best execution for those trades. Soft dollar arrangements also may encourage excessive trading with no purpose except to fulfill soft dollar agreements. This, in turn, requires shareholders to pay those unnecessary trading costs. Soft dollar arrangements may also encourage fund managers to choose service providers based not on who offers the best service at the best price, but on what services can be paid for through soft dollars, where the costs will be hidden.

As with the distribution practices discussed above, the legislation would deal with these conflicts by eliminating them. We strongly support this approach, which would reduce shareholder costs by requiring funds to seek best execution on all their trades. Some in the independent research community have raised concerns about this approach, suggesting that it will harm independent research. Nothing could be further from the truth. As long as funds can pay for research through soft dollars, they will have an incentive to choose the research whose cost can be hidden in this fashion. If soft dollar arrangements are banned, however, funds will have no reason to choose research based on any consideration but which is of the highest quality. If independent research can compete on quality, its competitive position should be improved under a soft dollar ban.

CONCLUSION

Mutual funds have been largely responsible for making it possible for average, middle-income investors to participate in our Nation's securities markets. As such, they have done much to promote both the financial well-being of those investors and the financial health of our capital markets. Regulatory oversight, however, has not kept pace with mutual funds' growing and changing role in our financial markets. The recent trading and sales abuse scandals have offered a painful reminder of just how far some fund companies have strayed from their obligation to operate in shareholders' best interests.

Fundamental reform is needed to get the fund industry back on track. The SEC has gotten us part of the way there with its recent enforcement actions and rule proposals. But partway there is simply not good enough. Important gaps exist in the SEC's agenda that will keep it from delivering the comprehensive reform that the current situation demands. This legislation fills those gaps. It offers a far-reaching and thoughtful approach that, if enacted, will go a long way toward getting the mutual fund industry back to operating in shareholders' best interests once again. Please let us know what we can do to help win passage of these essential, pro-investor reforms.

COALITION OF MUTUAL
Washington, DC, January 26, 2004.
Hon. PETER FITZGERALD,
Chairman, Subcommittee on Financial Management, The Budget and International Security, Committee on Governmental Affairs, U.S. Senate, Hart Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR FITZGERALD: The Coalition of Mutual Fund Investors ("CMFI" or "Coalition") has reviewed your legislative proposals to reform the mutual fund industry. Without a doubt, your legislative initiative is the most comprehensive mutual fund bill yet to be introduced in either the House or the Senate.

The Coalition strongly supports your efforts to improve the mutual fund regulatory framework in a manner which benefits all individual investors. As the mutual fund reform debate begins this year in the Senate, your bill is likely to serve as the gold standard by which other legislative proposals are evaluated for their effectiveness in protecting the interests of individual investors.

CMFI supports the provisions contained in the mutual fund reform bill which recently passed the House of Representatives (H.R. 2420), however, the Coalition has been advocating additional regulatory measures to protect the interests of individual investors. These additional measures include: (1) better shareholder disclosure of mutual fund operating and transaction costs, (2) improved oversight of "omnibus" accounts operated by financial intermediaries, and (3) enhanced disclosure of the Statement of Additional Information.

You have included many of these reform proposals in your bill and so the Coalition is very pleased to offer its support to your legislation. The Coalition is particularly pleased that your legislation includes a CMFI proposal to require financial intermediaries operating "omnibus" accounts to disclose basic shareholder identity and transaction information to mutual funds so that the funds can ensure uniform application of their policies, procedures, fees, and charges across all shareholder classes. The interests of long-term shareholders are being harmed by a lack of oversight regarding the trading activities occurring in these "omnibus accounts" and your legislation addresses this structural problem with an effective solution.

The Coalition looks forward to working with you and your staff to enact the many thoughtful provisions contained in your bill.

Sincerely,

NIELS HOLCH,
Executive Director.

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE; TABLE OF CONTENTS.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This Act may be cited as the "Mutual Fund Reform Act of 2004".

(b) TABLE OF CONTENTS.—The table of contents for this Act is as follows:

(b) CONTENT.—The rule or regulation prescribed under subsection (a) shall identify, in addition to significant events, the conditions or circumstances from which such an obligation will arise, such as the need to value securities traded on foreign exchanges, and the methods by which fair value methods shall be applied in such events, conditions, and circumstances.

S. 2059

SUMMARY OF KEY PROVISIONS OF THE MUTUAL FUND REFORM ACT OF 2004

The Mutual Fund Reform Act of 2004 makes fund governance truly accountable, requires genuinely transparent total fund costs, enhances comprehension and comparison of fund fees, confronts trading abuses, creates a culture of compliance, eliminates hidden transactions that mislead investors and drive up costs—and saves billions of dollars for the 95 million Americans who invest in mutual funds. MFRA strives above all to preserve the attractiveness of mutual funds as a flexible and investor-friendly vehicle for long-term, diversified investment.

TITLE 1: TRULY FIDUCIARY FUND GOVERNANCE

The Mutual Fund Reform Act of 2004 puts the interests of investors first by:

Ensuring independent and empowered boards of directors;

Clarifying and making specific fund directors' foremost fiduciary duty to shareholders;

Strengthening the fund advisers' fiduciary duty regarding negotiating fees and providing fund information; and Instituting Sarbanes-Oxley-style provisions for independent accounting and auditing, codes of ethics, chief compliance officers, compliance certifications, and whistleblower protections.

TITLE 2: MEANINGFUL FUND TRANSPARENCY

The Mutual Reform Act of 2004 empowers both investors and free markets with clear, comprehensible fund transaction information by:

Standardizing computation and disclosure of (i) fund expenses and (ii) transaction costs, which yield a total investment cost ratio, and tell investors actual dollar costs;

Providing disclosure and definitions of all types of costs and requiring that the SEC approve imposition of any new types of costs;

Disclosing portfolio managers' compensation and stake in fund;

Disclosing broker compensation at the point of sale;

Disclosing and explaining portfolio turnover ratios to investors; and Disclosing proxy voting policies and record.

TITLE 3: STRAIGHTFORWARD FUND TRANSACTIONS

The Mutual Fund Reform Act of 2004 vastly simplifies disclosure regime by:

Eliminating asset-based distribution fees (Rule 12b-1 fees), the original purpose of which has been lost and the current use of which is confusing and misleading—and amending the Investment Company Act of 1940 to permit the use of the adviser's fee for distribution expenses, which locates the incentive to keep distribution expenses reasonable exactly where it belongs—with the fund adviser;

Prohibiting shadow transactions—such as revenue sharing, directed brokerage, and soft-dollar arrangements—that are riddled with conflicts of interest, serve no reasonable business purpose, and drive up costs;

"Unbundling" commissions, such that research and other services, heretofore covered by hidden soft-dollar arrangements, will be the subject of separate negotiation and a freer and fairer market;

Requiring enforceable market timing policies and mandatory redemption fees—as well as provision by omnibus account intermediaries of basic customer information to funds to enable funds to enforce their market timing, redemption fee, and breakpoint discount policies; and Requiring fair value pricing and strengthening late trading rules.

MUTUAL FUND REFORM ACT OF 2004

The Mutual Fund Reform Act of 2004 (MFRA) restores truly fiduciary fund governance, simplifies fund fees, confronts trading abuses, creates a culture of compliance, and eliminates the conflict-riddled shadow transactions that drive up costs. The essence of the legislation is not any regulatory regime it creates, but the market forces it liberates. Obscurity is the enemy of a free market. Too little information—and too much incomprehensible information—equally undermine informed investor decision-making. The Mutual Fund Reform Act lifts the veil off mislabeled and misleading transactions, ensures genuine transparency, and promotes true price competition.

With 95 million American stakeholders, mutual funds are truly America's investment vehicle of choice. MFRA strives above all to preserve the attractiveness of mutual funds as a flexible and investor-friendly vehicle for long-term, diversified investment. That goal requires a careful balancing of accountability and incentive—or carrot and stick. Federal and state governments cannot police, much less micromanage, over 8,000 funds. The overriding duty to shareholders rests primarily with the funds themselves, and secondarily with the funds' service providers—each guided by a clearer statement of purpose and priority, incentivized by a more robust and transparent market that rewards low cost and good performance—because it can truly identify them—and accountable for failures that privilege fund managers' or brokers' interests over shareholders.

Vanguard Founder and industry savant John Bogle calls the Mutual Fund Reform Act of 2004 "the gold standard in putting mutual fund shareholders back in the driver's seat."The Consumer Federation of America says the Mutual Fund Reform Act of 2004 "will save mutual fund investors potentially tens of billions of dollars a year by wringing out excess costs." The Securities and Exchange Commission's (SEC) recent spate of regulatory initiatives is a testament to Washington's will in redressing the scandals and excessive fees that erode America's retirement and college savings. But the SEC cannot take the range of initiatives that are necessary to rationalize an industry governed by 64-year-old legislation. It is time for Congress to take the step that truly empowers America's investors and invigorates market forces. It is time for reforms that finally put investors first.

MFRA is divided into four titles: Title 1 (Fund Governance); Title 2 (Fund Transparency); Title 3 (Fund Regulation and Oversight); and Title 4 (Studies). The provisions under each title are analyzed below.

TITLE 1: FUND GOVERNANCE

Independent directors

The Mutual Fund Reform Act empowers a truly independent board of directors to exercise its essential "watchdog" role as the original Investment company Act of 1940 envisioned. An inherent tendency to defer to authority—or to parties with more information—must be countered with both numbers and authority for the board to reliably flex its independent muscle in the best interests of shareholders. Thus, at least 75% of the board must be independent—including the chair.

That independence must be self-perpetuating. Thus, independent directors will nominate new directors and adopt qualification standards for such nomination.

Close relationships with fund advisers, or other significant service providers, can easily compromise independence. Thus, the legislation tightens the definition of independence to exclude individuals with material business or close family relationships with such service providers. Further, the legislation directs the SEC to study whether substantial aggregate compensation from a fund adviser, especially when directors serve on multiple boards, compromises independence.

Directors' fiduciary duty

Building on the ringing declaration in the Investment Company Act's Preamble, section 36(a) refers specifically to the fiduciary duty of directors—but it has been a relatively empty reference. Merely to recite "fiduciary duty," it appears, will not ensure fidelity to it. Directors need direction—and content—in discharging their fiduciary duties. MFRA supplies both. MFRA amends the Investment Company Act to make expressly clear that the directors' fiduciary duty obliges them to act in the best interests of shareholders.

A "fiduciary" duty is supposed to be a rigorous one—yet its content has been unenforced guesswork. Mindful of the industry's complexity, NFRA thus directs the SEC to provide directors with specific guidance on the content of their fiduciary duty. Such content will include, at a minimum, determining the extent to which independent and reliable sources of information are sufficient to discharge director responsibilities, negotiating management and advisory fees with due regard for the actual cost of services, including economies of scale, evaluating management quality and considering potentially superior alternatives, evaluating the quality, comprehensiveness, and clarity of disclosures to shareholders regarding costs, evaluating any distribution or marketing plan of the company, including its costs and benefits, evaluating the size of the fund's portfolio and its suitability to the interests of shareholders, implementing and monitoring policies and procedures to ensure compliance with applicable securities laws, and implementing and monitoring policies with respect to predatory trading practices, such as market timing.

Investment advisers' fiduciary duty

After Wharton School and SEC studies in the 1960s found that mutual fund shareholders pay excessive fees because they lack bargaining power, the SEC recommended to Congress that it require that fees be "reasonable." That did not happen. Instead, in 1970, Congress imposed a "fiduciary" duty on fund advisers with respect to fees. As with the directors' "fiduciary" duty, however, the term lost any meaningful moorning in client-first professional stewardship. Indeed, in a watershed judicial interpretation of the adviser's "fiduciary" duty under section 36(b), the Second Circuit deemed the duty satisfied unless the adviser charged "a fee that is so disproportionately large that it bears no reasonable relationship to the services rendered and could not have been the product of arm's-length bargaining." Gartenberg v. Merrill Lynch Asset Mgt., Inc., 694 F.2d 923 (2d Cir. 1982). Against such a startling hurdle, no plaintiff ever wins an excessive fee case—and the SEC has declined to hold fund directors accountable for failing adequately to review adviser fee agreements (under section 36(a)).

Once again, merely invoking the phrase "fiduciary" will not ensure fair stewardship. MFRA makes clear that the fund adviser's fiduciary duty with respect to fees "may require reasonable reference to actual costs of the adviser and economies of scale." Advisers are entitled to a fair profit—and nothing in MFRA "caps" or "legislates" fees, or otherwise imposes a "price control." But MFRA does ensure that accountability is fairly allocated in the interests of shareholders.

MFRA also addresses another fiduciary deficit in the relationship between fund adviser and fund director. Conscienti independent directors may experience ckless intimidation and misdirection tryi o penetrate the adviser's monopoly on tical fund information. Indeed, as Fund moc-racy founder Mercer Bullard not hree years ago, under the current regim fund directors who try t do their jobs m lo so at their own risk. In 1997, the directo f the Navellier Aggressi Small-Cap fun complained to the SE that the fund's viser, Louis Navellier, had refused to provid information they needed to evaluate his services. . . . Intent on proving that no good deed goes unpunished, Navellier dragged the fund's directors through years of litigation," which was finally resolved in the directors' favor.

Subjecting directors to the sufferance of fund advisers turns the fiduciary duties of both on their heads. MFRA cures this damaging imbalance by specifying that fund advisers owe a specific fiduciary duty to provide information that is material to fund governance. In other words, directors will no longer be obliged to think of every possible question necessary to obtain essential information—much less be bullied by resistant advisers.

Termination of fund adviser

When fund managers cease to perform as effective stewards of the investments entrusted to them, they should be subject to the market discipline facing most Americans on the job—termination. Independent directors, exercising their fiduciary duties in the best interests of shareholders, should have the latitude to replace fund managers without undue fear of reprisal, spurious litigation, and other tactics by recalcitrant advisers. MFRA accordingly directs the SEC to issue regulations that facilitate the process by which independent directors, upon critical evaluation of fund management, terminate the service of fund management in the exercise of their fiduciary duties without undue exposure to financial or litigation risk.

Independent accounting and auditing

Last December, Business Week magazine called for Congress to "reverse the embarrassing exemption it gave to the mutual-fund industry from the Sarbanes-Oxley corporate reform law's requirement that outside auditors evaluate internal controls." MFRA requires an audit committee, with requirements that track Sarbanes-Oxley provisions, and selection by that committee of an independent accountant.

Compliance provisions

MFRA, like S.1971 introduced by Senators Corzine and Dodd, draws significant inspiration from the lessons of the corporate scandals that gave rise to the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002. While those corporate scandals triggered a massive public outcry, it is noteworthy that the total cost to the American public was far less than the trading abuses and excessive fees in the $7 trillion mutual fund industry. Thus, MFRA engenders a culture of compliance—employing tools from the landmark Sarbanes-Oxley Act.

MFRA requires adoption—by funds, investment advisers, and principal underwriters—of a code of ethics, which is reasonably designed to prevent violation of securities laws. This code must be disclosed to the public and reviewed annually. MFRA further requires appointment of a chief compliance officer, whose compensation is set by independent directors, who reports directly to independent directors, who may be an employee of the fund adviser, but who may be terminated only with the consent of the independent directors.

MFRA requires certain certifi ions to ensure careful monitoring an ccountability. And finally, mindful of singular contribution of whistleblowers lumination of the current scandals, M installs rigorous protections against r tion for disclosing violations of secur laws or codes of ethics.

TITLE 2: FUND TRANSPAR

Cost consolidation and cl

For the market to discipline excessively high-cost funds, investors must know total costs in comprehensive and accessible disclosures. Current regulations require disclosure of a fund's "expense ratio"—but that figure excludes significant costs borne directly by investors. These largely hidden "transaction costs" occur when the fund buys and sells securities in its portfolio. As the SEC recently noted in its Concept Release on transaction costs, "for many funds, the amount of transaction costs incurred during a typical year is substantial. One study estimates that commissions and spreads alone cost the average equity fund as much as 75 basis points." In other words, transaction costs may sometimes double the cost of investment. Additional transaction costs, such as market impact and opportunity costs, may cost even more.

MFRA enhances cost disclosure in several ways. First, MFRA requires standardized computation and disclosure of two cost ratios: the first is the expense ratio, designed to capture fund operating expenses, and the second is the transaction cost ratio, designed to capture the true costs of portfolio management. These two ratios must then be combined and disclosed as a single "investment cost ratio." MFRA recognizes that certain transaction costs, such as commissions and bid-ask spreads, are indisputable candidates for disclosure in the "transaction cost ratio"—while others, such as market impact and opportunity costs, may more precisely reflect simply the principal price a manager is willing to pay (or accept) for securities, and thus may not, in the ultimate judgment of the SEC, warrant computation and disclosure as part of the transaction cost ratio.

Additionally, MFRA assists investors confronting voluminous fund information with clear, simple, and at-least annual actual dollar cost disclosure. Including actual cost disclosure in the one document that investors do routinely review—their own statement—simplifies cost analysis for all investors and promotes genuine cost competition.

Some say that mutual fund reform invites the proverbial "rock on jello"—and that a wily industry will react to reasonable restraints of one type of cost by simply shifting the cost to a new label. MFRA stabilizes the mutual fund fee structure. The SEC is directed to standardize all allowable types or categories of fees, expenses, loads, or charges borne by fund shareholders. New costs cannot be created without an SEC determination that the new cost is in the best interests of shareholders of (i) a particular fund, (ii) certain types of funds, or (iii) funds generally. Everyone, including (or perhaps especially) the mutual fund industry, acknowledges the critical importance of restoring investor trust. By stabilizing the fee structure—and building in safeguards against cynical manipulation of complex fee structures—MFRA takes the long stride toward ensuring sustained investor confidence.

Finally, MFRA addresses financial literacy by requiring clear explanation and definition of all types of fees, charges, expenses, loads, commissions, and payments—as well as where investors may find additional information about them.

Advisor compensation and ownership of fund shares

The Sarbanes-Oxley Act turned the spotlight on executive compensation—not merely to satisfy casual investor curiosity but to deter conflicts of interest and distorted incentives. MFRA does the same—albeit only with respect to portfolio management. If, as a consequence of disclosure, fund managers feel more motivated to earn their compensation, so much the better for investors. It may likewise be relevant whether fund managers are invested in the very funds they manage—and investors are entitled to know. Finally, insider transactions in the fund must be disclosed to the board of directors. Insider transactions are not per se problematic—quite the contrary, it may be a strong positive to have fund managers invested in the funds they manage. But to help deter potential abuses, the board should be informed of insider transactions. (In Title 3, MFRA prohibits short-term insider transactions to prevent abusive rapid trading by insiders.)

Broker confirmations

MFRA requires point-of-sale disclosure of the source and compensation to be received by the broker in connection with the transaction. Such disclosure is standard with other financial instruments—and broker/dealers can do the same for mutual fund investors. Significantly, however, as discussed below, MFRA vastly simplifies broker disclosures by prohibiting certain conflict-riddled broker-compensation practices—such as revenue sharing, directed brokerage and soft-dollar arrangements—that artificially inflate broker commissions and introduce distorted sales incentives.

Breakpoint discounts

Breakpoint discounts are essentially "volume discounts"—reductions in sales charges for purchases beyond certain thresholds. The policies for applying breakpoint discounts, however, can be complicated. For example, an investor may be entitled to a breakpoint discount based on total shares purchased over a period of time, or from different accounts or together with other family members.

The National Association of Securities Dealers (the self-regulatory organization of brokers and dealers) estimated that more than $86 million in breakpoint discounts were not correctly applied by broker/dealers in 2001 and 2002, which indicates investor overcharges in one out of every five eligible transactions.

MFRA requires more prominent disclosure of information and policies about breakpoint discounts, so that investors are better equipped to help themselves. Perhaps more importantly as discussed below under Customer Information from Account Intermediaries, MFRA bridges one critical gap in the uniform application of breakpoint discount policies.

Portfolio turnover ratio

Many investors do not understand that the benign, or even enticing, term—"actively managed"—may conceal inordinately high transaction costs. When fund managers buy and sell securities in the fund portfolio, they incur transaction costs, such as commissions, bid-ask spread costs, market impact costs and opportunity costs. All of these costs diminish performance. To be sure, some actively managed funds do very well. But investors have a right to know, in straightforward terms, just how "actively" the portfolio is managed. The portfolio turnover ratio is a good indicator. MFRA requires prominent disclosure of the portfolio turnover ratio, as well as explanation of its meaning and implications for cost and performance. Thus, MFRA takes no legislative position on the propriety of active or passive management—but merely equips investors with clearer and more comprehensible information so that they can make decisions based upon their own investment objectives.

Proxy voting policies and record

Mutual funds are a seven-trillion-dollar industry—and control nearly one-third of U.S. equity voting power. See Alan R. Palmiter, Mutual Fund Voting of Portfolio Shares: Why Not Disclose? 23 Cardozo L. Rev. 1419, 1421 (March 2002). That is an impressive stake in U.S. corporate governance. Such enormous power is ill-suited to the shadows. MFRA requires disclosure of the fund's proxy voting record, as well as any proxy voting policies that may better equip investors to align their mutual fund purchasing with their corporate governance preferences.

Customer information from account intermediaries

Rules against market timing, application of breakpoint discounts, imposition of redemption fees on short-term trading—all of these salutary practices work only if the fund knows the identify and trading activity of its investors. But many financial intermediaries, including broker/dealers, convey aggregate trading information to funds through "omnibus accounts," consisting of multiple anonymous fund customers. Failure of a fund to know its own investors seriously impairs fair and uniform enforcement of its trading policies.

As Niels Holch, Executive Director of the Coalition of Mutual Fund Investors, stated in a December 12, 2003 letter to the SEC, "individual, long-term shareholders will not be guaranteed equal and fair application of fund policies, procedures, fees and charges, unless and until each mutual fund is provided information from its intermediaries about the identity of all shareholders in omnibus accounts and the individual transactions engaged in by those shareholders."

MFRA requires that intermediaries convey to funds the basic customer identification and trading activity information needed to enforce fund policies fairly and uniformly. However, such information may only be used to enforce fund policies, and all proprietary rights to such customer information under state and federal law are preserved.

Advertising

Mutual funds fairly compete for investor attention and purchase. Indeed, because a certain percentage of investors can be expected to sell their shares every year, mutual funds want to meet these redemptions with new purchases so that "net redemptions" do not force funds to sell off too many portfolio assets. Advertising is one way to stimulate demand. However, some funds engage in questionable claims. Performance advertising, in particular, is fertile territory for misleading investors. Former SEC Chief Economist Susan Woodward put the matter bluntly in a recent Wall street Journal op-ed: "A fund's past performance provides zero guidance about its future performance."

MFRA directs the SEC to address several aspects of performance advertising, including unrepresentative short-term performance, performance based upon undisclosed non-recurring or improbable events, and performance based upon technically accurate but incomplete or misleading data.

Truthful and non-misleading advertising is a right guaranteed by the United States Constitution. MFRA respects that right—with requisite emphasis on "non-misleading."

TITLE 3: FUND REGULATION AND OVERSIGHT

MFRA is truly structural reform. It does not merely mandate yet more "disclosure" in an industry already saturated with voluminous disclosure rules. MFRA's essence is not the regulatory regime that it creates, but the free market forces that it liberates. MFRA fuels a competitive mutual fund market by making its transactions honest and comprehensible. Market distortions occur when market players can obscure their activities and mislead consumers. Examples addressed in MFRA include 12b-1 fees, revenue sharing, soft-dollar arrangements, and directed brokerage. MFRA lifts the veil of mislabeled and misleading transactions, creates true transparency and promotes meaningful competition. Merely demanding more disclosure—while salutary up to a point—risks encyclopedic and incomprehensible data dumps on investors.

A more honest and straightforward, and thus more vibrantly competitive, mutual fund market well serves the 95 million Americans who entrust their savings to mutual funds—and not incidentally, well serves the robustness of the mutual fund industry itself. Mercer Bullar, founder of Fund Democracy and sponsor of the recent Fund Summit in Oxford, Mississippi—where 11 lawmakers, regulators, and industry leaders convened to debate the direction of the industry—said of his panelists that they all share the aspiration for "America's favorite retirement vehicle, a great institution, a great industry, to provide the best service it can for America's investors." That aspiration permeates the Mutual Fund Reform Act of 2004. And central to that aspiration is the recognition that scandal, cynicism, and revolt are inevitable consequences of confusing and opaque cost schemes.

Time magazine notes, for example, that investors have been flocking to "separately managed accounts"—customized investment vehicles with minimum investment requirements. One noteworthy virtue, writes Time, of separately managed accounts: "fee transparency. Typically, separate-account mangers charge a flat annual fee of 1.5% to 2.5% of assets. In most cases there are none of the loads, redemption fees, 12b–1 marketing fees, trading commissions, or soft-dollar costs that proliferate in the mutual-fund world and drive annual expenses far higher than disclosed levels." The vexation here is not merely with the "hiddenness" of many of these costs—but with the very existence of such a confusing and cynical welter of ways to siphon investors' money. MFRA is a decisive answer to that vexation—and an answer that well serves all Americans, not only the ones who can afford the minimum investment requirements of separately managed accounts and hedge funds.

Asset-based distribution expenses (Rule 12b–1)

A sales load was once an honest sales load. Then came Rule 12b–1. Designed in 1980 by the SEC, Rule 12b–1 permitted funds to use fund assets, temporarily, for distribution and market—to (1) stimulate purchases and thus redress temporary net redemptions, and (2) increase the size of the fund so that cost savings from economies of scale could be passed along to investors. The theory was sound. But Rule 12b–1 has wandered far from its original moorings. It has become a permanent fixture of most fee schedules, and can cost investors up to 1% of their investment every year. Over the life of a retirement plan, that 1% can cost an investor 35% to 40% of his or her retirement income. And it does not appear that investors have benefited from economies of scale.

Nearly two-thirds of 12b–1 fees end up in the hands of brokers. In other words, 12b–1 fees have become disguised loads.

Fund management properly includes fund distribution. MFRA accordingly places the distribution duty where it belongs. MFRA gets funds out of the distribution business by prohibiting asset-based distribution fees (such as 12b–1 fees)—but, importantly, amends the Investment Company Act of 1940 to make clear that fund advisers may use their adviser fees for distribution expenses. What happens when fund advisers use their own profits—instead of tapping directly into investors' money—for distribution expenses? Distribution expenses become very reasonable.

In negotiating their fees with an empowered and independent board, advisers will now have to make the case that their costs necessarily include specified distribution expenses. And once advisers receive their fee, distribution expenses will, dollar for dollar, reduce adviser profits. That dynamic locates the incentive to keep distribution expenses reasonable precisely where it belongs. And MFRA incorporates one additional structural check on unreasonable distribution expenses—one that goes to the heart of the inherent conflict between fund managers and fund shareholders. If the board of directors determines that certain distribution expenses are not in the best interests of existing shareholders, then the board may stipulate that no part of the adviser's fee may be used for that expense. A distribution expense designed solely to pump up the asset base of an already large fund, for example, and not otherwise necessary to meet net redemptions, would obviously well-serve the adviser, who collects a percentage of net assets, but not necessarily existing shareholders.

Importantly, MFRA does not prohibit distribution expenses or sales charges. Charging a load (subject to NASD rules) is fully justified—but call it a load, make it account-based and don't disguise it in a permanent asset-based distribution fee.

Indefensible brokerage practices

There is a reflexive preference in approaching our markets for demanding "disclosure" as a total solution—and sometimes as a total substitute for clear ethical and practical judgments. But some practices cannot be rationally defended. And some clear rules enrich and enliven our markets. We do not tell football players that they can clip, hold, or jump offside as long as they do so openly. We should not tell fund advisers and broker-dealers that they may misuse investor money with soft-dollar arrangements, revenue sharing and directed brokerage as long as they file reports. "Disclosure" of these practices merely precipitates an even more confusing blizzard of incomprehensible information—and even further alienates average investors from meaningful participation in the mutual fund market. As former SEC Chairman Arthur Levitt aptly remarked, "[t]he law of unintended results has come into play: Our passion for full disclosure has created fact-bloated reports, and prospectuses that are more redundant than revealing." Three practices—soft dollar arrangements, revenue sharing, and directed brokerage—ought not clutter any mutual fund prospectus. And neither funds nor fund advisers should oe spending time and money crafting elaborate disclosures and justifications of ultimately indefensible practices. By simply prohibiting these practices, MFRA vastly simplifies the disclosure regime, and benefits all stakeholders.

Revenue sharing

Kiplinger.com commentator Steven Goldberg calls revenue sharing "the fund industry's most insidious practice . . . It sounds benign, but it boils down to mutual fund payola, giving brokers, financial planners or other financial advisers a little extra compensation if they sell a load fund to you. That is, a little something extra over and above the load you're already paying." A "little something"? Annual revenue sharing payments to brokerage firms total an estimated $2 billion. And investors listening to a broker's "advice" may not realize that the broker's "Preferred List" of mutual funds is a function of this payola.

Moreover, revenue-sharing, like nearly two-thirds of 12b–1 money, goes to brokers, as a presumptive "distribution" expense—yet revenue sharing effectively circumvents the elaborate rules capping 12b–1 fees at no more than 1% of assets. The only difference is that revenue sharing payments are made by the fund adviser, out of the adviser's fee—which of course comes from the fund assets. Consumer Federation of America, along with several consumer groups that have endorsed MFRA, note the negative impact of revenue sharing, despite the fact that such payments come from the adviser rather than directly from fund assets: "At best, by eating into the manager's bottom line, the payments may reduce the likelihood that the management fee will be reduced in response to economies of scale. At worst, fund managers will pass along those costs to shareholders in a form that is even less transparent than directed brokerage payments."

Revenue sharing aggravates the conflicted interests of both brokers and fund advisers at the expense of fund shareholders. On the one hand, brokers get payola out of the fund adviser's management fee—and peddle funds they're paid to peddle without the requisite regard for the investor's best interests. On the other hand, fund advisers collectively give away $2 billion of their evidently abundant fees to promote yet further sales of fund shares, which increases fund assets, which increases the adviser's fee, which makes more money available for payola. MFRA breaks this investor-hostile circular enrichment, and restores rational solicitude for investors' money.

Soft dollar arrangements

Under soft dollar arrangements, brokers inflate their commissions on portfolio trades and give credits to fund managers in return. These credits are then used for research services, software, hardware, and other manager "overhead"—which directly and immediately benefit fund managers, but only indirectly, if at all, benefit the shareholders who pay for them. Moreover, these direct costs to shareholders are not even reflected in the expense ratio, because commissions—as with all transaction costs—are excluded from the expense ratio. Thus, by using surreptitious soft dollars, instead of honest hard dollars, the industry effectively hides yet another significant cost of mutual fund investment.

Soft dollars also effectively suppress entire markets. Soft dollar arrangements distort the markets in both trade executions and products and services "purchased" with soft dollars—because there is little or no meaningful price negotiation or competition in these markets. Why would there be? Fund advisers use investors' money, through artificially inflated brokerage commissions, and competition inevitably and severely suffers when demand is driven by someone else's money.

Managers should pay for their overhead out of their management fee instead of forcing shareholders to pick up the tab through artificially inflated brokerage commissions. MFRA effectively "unbundles" the commission dollar. All stakeholders can then more readily assess the true cost of trade execution. And industry research and other unbundled services, now purchased with hard dollars through traditional negotiation, will acquire more authentic market values. Some services will thrive; others will crater. That happens when the market is healthy and transparent, and the demand side cannot spend someone else's money.

MFRA's treatment of soft dollar arrangements, like its treatment of 12b-1 fees, is inspired not by intent to regulate private transactions—but to label such transactions honestly. Just as a load is a load, and should be charged as such, so research expense should be the fruit of competitive negotiation for research—not the backdoor largesse of forcing investors to pay inflated brokerage commissions.

John Montgomery of Bridgeway Funds perfectly summarized the justification for banning soft dollars (as opposed to mandating yet more elaborate "disclosures") when he testified before the House Capital Markets Subcommittee in March 2003: "The bottom lines: Congress should not work to improve disclosure of soft dollars: it should simply stop the practice altogether. Ultimately, this will improve the quality of decisions made on things soft dollars buy, save shareholders some money, and greatly reduce the time that advisers, auditors, regulators, and lawyers spend trying to document the fairness of a firm's practice."

Directed brokerage

Directed brokerage is the practice by a customer (such as a mutual fund or affiliated person) of directing brokerage business to a particular broker or dealer in exchange for services other than trade executions. Examples of such services include sales support (as with revenue sharing), or administrative services. Directed brokerage seems benign—but the effect is yet a further hidden cost to investors, in the form of higher brokerage costs. Once brokerage is "directed" by a customer, the manager's ability to obtain better or less expensive execution from a different broker is disabled.

Last December, Louis Harvey, president of Dalbar Inc., a Boston-based research company, told Investment News that the practice of directed commissions obscures what best execution actually costs. Thus, funds pay more than retail investors to buy and sell stock. "If the practice is done away with, it will be replaced by competitive forces."

In recognition of the indefensibility of the practice, several funds announced recently that they are ceasing directed brokerage arrangements. The industry's leading trade association, the Investment Company Institute, likewise recently advocated prohibiting directed brokerage.

Late trading

Late trading is already illegal. The policy problem with late trading is not with the law, but with the practice of processing some orders after the calculation of "net asset value" (NAV), and thus share price, for that day. Typically, mutual funds calculate their NAVs as of 4:00 p.m. EST, the closing time of the major U.S. stock exchanges. The SEC's Rule 22c–1 requires funds to calculate NAV at least once a day. All orders to buy or sell mutual fund shares received on a particular day are executed at the same price. Under Rule 22c–1, orders to buy or sell mutual fund shares must be executed at a price based on the NAV next calculated after receipt of the order. The Rule therefore requires that orders for most funds received after 4:00 p.m. be executed using the next day's price.

"Late trading" refers to the practice of submitting an order to buy or redeem fund shares after the 4:00 p.m. pricing time yet receiving that day's price rather than the price set at 4:00 p.m. the following day, or placing a conditional order prior to 4:00 p.m. that is either confirmed or canceled after 4:00 p.m. A late trader typically seeks to trade profitably on developments after 4:00 p.m., such as earnings announcements or events in overseas markets. As noted, late trading is already illegal.

But when is an order to buy or sell "received" under Rule 22c–1—when the fund receives the order, or when an intermediary (such as a retail broker or a 401k administrator) receives the order? To date, the SEC has interpreted "receipt" as used in Rule 22c–1 to include receipt of an order to buy or sell mutual fund shares by retail brokers and other intermediaries. Investors may thus place orders to buy or sell fund shares through broker-dealers, through retirement accounts and through variable insurance carriers, confident that they will receive that day's price for the shares. According to some estimates, mutual funds receive over half of their orders in the form of aggregated orders provided by intermediaries after 4:00 p.m. The SEC is currently reexamining its rules.

MFRA directs the SEC to enforce the current strict terms of Rule 22c–1—but gives the SEC the authority to fashion rules that accommodate investors transacting through their preferred intermediaries. For example, if it can be verified that intermediaries received their orders from their customers before 4:00 p.m.—and the intermediaries have systems in place that ensure compliance and permit independent verification—then the rules developed by the SEC may permit processing of such orders by the mutual fund after the 4:00 p.m. close. MFRA's ultimate purpose is two-fold: (1) preserve the appeal of mutual funds as a flexible and investor-friendly vehicle for long-term investment; and (2) prevent the unfair dilution of mutual fund value by short-term predators.

Market timing

"I have no interest in building a business around market timers, but at the same time I do not want to turn away $10–20m," wrote Richard Garland, then head of Janus Capital Groups international business to a colleague. Thus did Mr. Garland succinctly describe the sirenic tug that triggered the current industry scandals.

"Market timing" refers to a form of trading mutual fund shares in which short-term investors seek to exploit a perceived difference between the fund's calculated NAV and the actual underlying value of the fund's portfolio holdings. As earlier noted, funds must calculate their NAV and set their share price at least once a day—typically at 4 p.m. EST. Sometimes, the closing price of a portfolio security at 4:00 p.m. EST may not reflect its current market value. For example, an event may occur or news may be released after 4:00 p.m. that can reasonably be expected to have an impact on a security's price when trading resumes. Securities that trade overseas are especially fertile ground for market timers, because many hours may elapse between the close of trading in an overseas market and the calculation of the fund's NAV.

Market timers seek to reap quick profits in mutual fund shares from these arbitrage opportunities. A market timer seeks to purchase a fund's shares based on events occurring before the fund's NAV calculation. For example, a market timer might guess that rising prices in the U.S. securities markets indicate likely higher prices in overseas markets the next day. The market timer would purchase mutual fund shares that reflect stale closing prices in overseas markets. The market timer would then redeem the fund's shares the next day, when the fund's next NAV calculation would reflect the presumably higher prices in overseas markets. The market timer seeks to make a quick and relatively risk-free profit.

Market timing is not specifically illegal—hence the conundrum facing many fund advisers and other industry players. But many mutual funds discourage market timing, often resolutely, because timers take their profits directly out of the value of shares held by long-term investors—i.e., the very category of the 95 million American mutual fund investors most likely to have entrusted retirement and college savings to mutual funds. Sale of fund shares at an artificially low price based on stale information dilutes the ownership interest of existing shareholders. Similarly, redemption of fund shares at an artificially high price dilutes the interest of remaining shareholders.

Some question whether market timing strategies really work. Importantly, however, merely the perception that market timing works, and is available, encourages rapid trading, which burdens funds regardless of whether the underlying timing strategy works. A fund forced to meet multiple redemptions from rapid trading activity may be obliged to keep more fund assets in cash or sell more portfolio securities to meet such redemptions—which increases the fund's transactions costs at the expense of existing shareholders.

As noted earlier, MFRA's overriding purpose with respect to trading abuses is two-fold: (1) preserve the appeal of mutual funds as a flexible and investor-friendly vehicle for long-term investment; and (2) prevent the unfair dilution of mutual fund value by short-term predators. MFRA thus addresses the problem of market timing with solicitude for the long-term investor, and steers market timing away from the mutual funds. MFRA provisions include:

Requiring explicit disclosure in fund offering documents of market timing policies and specific procedures to enforce policies and requiring that such a policy be deemed a "fundamental investment policy" (which cannot, under the Investment Company Act of 1940, be changed without a shareholder vote).

Requiring that any fund that declines to adopt enforceable restrictions on market timing must so advise prospective investors in its prospectus, advertising, and otherwise as determined by the SEC.

Requiring regular fair value pricing so that NAV more fairly reflects actual portfolio value, and opportunities for predatory arbitrage are diminished.

Requiring mandatory redemption fees for short-term trading (which fees are deposited back into fund assets, thus benefiting all shareholders, while discouraging arbitrage by increasing its cost).

Permitting (but not requiring) redemption fees exceeding two percent for short-term transactions that are unfair to shareholders.

TITLE 4: STUDIES

Learning from experiences: Further study

MFRA seeks to perpetuate the dialogue and to preserve the wisdom gathered from hard experience. Several studies are directed:

A study and report by the SEC on the consequences of the inherent conflict of interest confronting fund advisers, the extent to which legislative or regulatory measures could minimize this conflict of interest, and the extent to which legislative or regulatory measures could incentivize internal management of mutual funds.

A study and report by the General Accounting Office (GAO) on coordination of enforcement efforts between SEC headquarters.

SEC regional offices, and state regulatory and law enforcement entities.

A study and report by GAO on the SEC's current organizational structure with respect to investment company regulation, and whether that organizational structure sufficiently credits the importance of mutual fund oversight to the 95 million mutual fund investors in America, and whether certain features of that organizational structure, such as the separation of regulatory and enforcement functions, conduce to optimal regulatory understanding of current practices.

A study and report by the SEC on trends and causes in arbitration claims since 1995, and means to avert claims.

A study and report by the SEC on whether additional regulation of alternative investment vehicles, such as hedge funds, is appropriate to deter recurrence of trading abuses, manipulation of regulated investment companies by unregulated investment companies, or other distortion that may harm investors in shares of registered investment companies.

A study by the SEC, coupled with regulatory and acquisition initiatives as appropriate, designed to enhance the role of the internet in educating investors and providing timely information about laws, regulations, enforcement proceedings and individual funds. Further, the SEC should study the feasibility of mandating that funds have websites, and disclosure thereupon of material filings and fund information. Further, the SEC should take necessary steps to ensure that its EDGAR system is user-friendly and contains a search-engine that facilitates expeditious location of material information in the SEC's database.

By Mr. REID:

S. 2060. A bill to permit certain local law enforcement officers to carry firearms on aircraft; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce legislation to make it easier for local law enforcement officers to travel across the country. Whether on official travel or personal travel. Federal law enforcement officers are allowed to carry firearms with them throughout their travel. The legislation I am introducing today would extend the same privilege—and responsibility—to local law enforcement officers.

Ever since the horrific terrorist attacks that occurred on September 11, we have seen how our local emergency responders, including local law enforcement officers, play a vital role in protecting not just their local communities, but the entire Nation. We think of local law enforcement officers as the Nation's first responders, but they are also the Nation's early preventers. They are the first to identify local crimes that could turn into national attacks. They are the first to report suspicious behavior that could thwart a future terrorist attack. Stopping a terrorist threat before it becomes an attack is the best way to keep our Nation safe. That effort relies upon the eyes, ears and experience of our Nation's law enforcement officers.

A terrorist attack in any city is a national concern. Local law enforcement officers are a crucial element of the plan to protect our Nation. I appreciate the help of Detective David Kallas and General Counsel John Dean Harper for bringing this issue to my attention. This bill will help give them and their law enforcement colleagues the standing they deserve as they continue to protect our hometowns and the Nation.

S. 2063. A bill to require the Secretary of Veterans Affairs to carry out a demonstration projects on priorities in the scheduling of appointments of veterans for health care through the Department of Veterans Affairs, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Veterans' Affairs.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, as I visit with veterans in North Dakota and here in Washington, too often I hear that waiting periods for medical care, and particularly for specialty care, are too long. We owe an unbelievable debt to American's veterans, and it is just not right that they cannot get the medical care they need when they need it. The legislation I am introducing today begins to address this problem.

Last month, as Ranking Member of the Senate Budget committee, I scheduled a field hearing in Bismarck, ND, to listen to the concerns of veterans regarding funding for the VA. Because more than fifty percent of veterans in North Dakota live in highly rural areas with limited access to VA medical facilities, I was particularly concerned about funding for VA medical care and the continuing reports from veterans regarding access to care and delays in the scheduling of appointments for medical care, especially speciality care.

Last September, I expressed similar concerns in testimony to the VA CARES Commission during field hearings in Minneapolis. I emphasized to Commission members that many North Dakota veterans have to travel hundreds of miles to access health care from the Fargo VA Medical Center or another FA facility in VISN 23 and that the VA must do more to ensure timely access for appointments and other VA medical services.

Reports in the national press make clear, however, that significant problems remain in the scheduling of appointments for medical care, particularly specialty care. Further complicating matters, there are many questions regarding the reliability of VA data on waiting list for appointments and the causes for the waiting periods according to reports in 2003 by the Department of Veterans Affairs Office of Inspector General and in 2000 by the General Accounting Office.

In North Dakota, several veterans service officers have reported a number of veterans waiting months for eye care, orthopedics and one veteran waiting almost ten months for back surgery. Another veteran, from the Bismarck area, was required to travel to Iowa for cancer treatment.

In view of these continuing concerns, I am today introducing legislation that would require the VA to undertake a two year pilot demonstration to study the implementation, cost and impact on VA services of several recent directives by the VA relating to the scheduling of medical appointments. The demonstration would be undertaken in three VISN networks, one highly rural, one rural, and one urban, that represent a cross-section of VA providers.

Under the demonstration, the VA would offer participating veterans, both new enrollees and established patients, service-connected and non-service connected, an appointment for primary care evaluation, hospitalization including specialty care or outpatient care within a 30 day period. If the VA facility is unable to provide the medical care within the designated period, the Department would make arrangements for the care at another VA facility or non-VA facility. Every effort, however, would be made to provide the medical care for the veteran through the VA healthcare network.

Finally, because of concerns regarding the accuracy of VA data on appointment periods, the bill requires the VA to report to Congress by FY 2007 on waiting periods for health care appointments, primary care and speciality care services. The VA would be required to report on the waiting periods for appointments by VA facility and VISN, include a breakdown of waiting periods by speciality, and submit recommendations to Congress for addressing the shortages of medical personnel. Finally, the legislation requests the Secretary, on the basis of the two year demonstration, to report to Congress by FY 2007 on the costs associated with implementation of the VA directive in the three VISNs and to report on the estimated cost to fully implement the directive throughout the VA system.

I am very pleased that my distinguished colleagues, Ranking Member of the Senate Committee on Veterans Affairs, Senator BOB GRAHAM and Senators JAY ROCKEFELLER, TIM JOHNSON and DANIEL AKAKA are joining me in sponsoring this legislation. I am also honored to have the strong support of the Disabled American Veterans and the AMVETS for this legislative proposal. I want to express my appreciation to Dave Gorman, DAV Executive Director; Joseph Violante, DAV National Legislative Director; Mike Dobmeier, former National Commander of the DAV and Rick Jones, AMVETS, National Legislative Director for their support.

It is critical that Congress and the Administration address the concerns of our veterans on the issue of waiting periods for medical care before adjourning of the 108th Congress. Veterans returning from Iraq, Afghanistan and from other peacekeeping deployments around the globe should not have to wait months for needed medical care. The needs of injured military personnel are great and the VA system will play a key role in their recovery. I encourage the Senate Committee on Veterans Affairs to review this legislation carefully and to act favorably on the measure before Congressional adjournment this fall.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of this legislation along with the letters of endorsement from the Disabled American Veterans and the AMVETS be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2063

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. DEMONSTRATION PROJECT ON PRIORITIES IN SCHEDULING OF APPOINTMENTS OF VETERANS FOR HEALTH CARE THROUGH THE DEPARTMENT OF VETERANS AFFAIRS.

(a) PROJECT REQUIRED.—The Secretary of Veterans Affairs shall carry out a demonstration project to assess the feasibility and advisability of providing for priorities in the scheduling of appointments of veterans for health care through the Department of Veterans Affairs in accordance with the following:

(1) The Department of Veterans Affairs Waiting Time for Appointments goals (30-30-20) of 2000.

(2) The provisions of the Veterans Health Administration directive entitled "Priority For Outpatient Medical Services and Inpatient Hospital Care" (VHA Directive 2002-059).

(3) The provisions of the Veterans Health Administration directive entitled "Priority Scheduling for Outpatient Medical Services and Inpatient Hospital Care for Service Connected Veterans" (VHA Directive 2003-062), dated October 23, 2003.

(b) PERIOD OF PROJECT.—The Secretary shall carry out the demonstration project during the two-year period beginning on October 1, 2004.

(c) LOCATIONS OF PROJECT.—(1) The Secretary shall carry out the demonstration project throughout each of three Veterans Integrated Service Networks (VISNs) selected by the Secretary for purposes of the project.

(2) In selecting Veterans Integrated Service Networks under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall ensure that the project is carried out in urban, rural, and highly rural areas.

(d) PROJECT REQUIREMENTS AND AUTHORITIES.—(1) Except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3), in carrying out the demonstration project the Secretary shall schedule appointments for veterans for outpatient medical services and inpatient hospital care through the Department in accordance with the goals and directives referred to in subsection (a).

(2) The veterans covered by the demonstration project shall include any veterans residing in a Veterans Integrated Service Network covered by the project, whether new or current enrollees with the Department and including veterans with service-connected disabilities and veterans with non-service-connected disabilities.

(3) The Secretary shall schedule each appointment under the demonstration project in a Department facility unless, as determined by the Secretary—

(A) the cost of scheduling the appointment in a Department facility exceeds the cost of scheduling the appointment in a non-Department facility to an unreasonable degree; or

(B) the scheduling of the appointment in a non-Department facility is required for medical or other reasons.

(4) In carrying out the demonstration project, the Secretary may utilize the Preferred Pricing Program (PPP) of the Department, or similar programs or authorities, in the locations covered by the project.

(5) In this subsection, the terms "Department facility" and "non-Department facility" have the meaning given such terms in section 1701 of title 38, United States Code.

(e) ANNUAL REPORTS ON WAITING TIMES FOR APPOINTMENTS FOR CARE AND SERVICES.—(1) Not later than January 31 each year, the Secretary shall submit to the Committees on Veterans' Affairs of the Senate and the House of Representatives a report on the waiting times of veterans for appointments for health care and services from the Department during the preceding year.

(2) Each report under paragraph (1) shall specify, for the year covered by the report, the following:

(A) A tabulation of the waiting time of veterans for appointments with the Department for each category of primary or specialty care or services furnished by the Department, broken out by particular Department facility and by Veterans Integrated Service Network.

(B) An identification of the categories of specialty care or services for which there are lengthy delays for appointments at particular Department facilities or throughout particular Veterans Integrated Service Networks, and, for each category so identified, recommendations for the reallocation of personnel, financial, and other resources to address such delays.

(f) REPORT ON PROJECT.—The report under subsection (e) in 2007 shall also include information on the demonstration project under this section. That information shall include—

(1) a description of the project, including the, Veterans Integrated Service Networks selected for the project, the number of veterans covered by the project, the number and timeliness of appointments scheduled under the project, and the costs of carrying out the project;

(2) an assessment of the feasibility and advisability of implementing the project nationwide; and

(3) such other information with respect to the project as the Secretary considers appropriate.

DISABLED AMERICAN VETERANS,
Washington, DC, February 4, 2004.

Hon. KENT CONRAD,
U.S. Senate, Hart Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR CONRAD: On behalf of the more than one million members of the Disabled American Veterans (DAV), we are pleased to support your proposed legislation to assess the feasibility and advisability of providing priorities in the scheduling of appointments through the Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) in accordance with VA's own access directives and goals.

The highest priority for VA health care must always be the core group of veterans the system was designed to treat: service-connected disabled veterans, the medically indigent, and those with special needs and catastrophic disabilities. As you are aware, in the past year, the Secretary of Veterans Affairs has issued two directives relating to priority care and the scheduling of appointments for service-connected veterans. In addition, VA has set access standards for patient appointments and struggled with improving its access goals of 30-30-20 for primary and specialty care appointments; specifically, access to non-urgent primary care appointments within 30 days, non-urgent appointments with a specialist within 30 days of the date of referral, and being seen by a provider at VA health care facilities within 20 minutes of a patient's scheduled appointment. Despite VA's efforts, we continue to hear reports from veterans of lengthy delays in getting appointments for both primary and specialty health care and services.

Through a pilot project in three Veterans Integrated Service Networks representing urban, rural, and highly rural areas, your bill seeks to improve access for veterans seeking VA health care and to evaluate the personnel, cost, and other resources necessary for VA to meet its own access goals. The annual reporting requirements about delay times for primary and specialty care appointments nationwide, and recommendations for the allocation of personnel, financial, and other resources needed to address such delays are essential and will help Congress and VA better understand the actual resources necessary to meet veterans health care needs in a timely manner.

It has been abundantly clear for some time that our government needs to develop long-term solutions to the funding problems facing the veterans health care system. This proposed measure will help begin to address this issue. The DAV and the other major veterans groups are united in our support for legislation that would guarantee an adequate level of funding for the VA medical system as the key to ensuring timely access to quality health care for our nation's veterans. The Congress and the Administration must make the commitment to provide the necessary resources to fulfill the obligation to care for America's sick and disabled vetrans—now and in the future.

Thank you for your continued interest in this issue, and for sponsoring this important legislation. We greatly appreciate your efforts on behalf of our nation's sick and disabled veterans.

Sincerely,

ALAN W. BOWERS,
National Commander.

AMVETS,
Lantham, MD, February 9, 2004.

Hon. KENT CONRAD,
Hart Senate Office Building, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR CONRAD: It is our understanding that you plan to offer legislation that would help reduce the time veterans must wait for a VA doctor's appointment. AMVETS, a nationwide veterans service organization, is pleased to support your proposal.

The need for reducing the time veterans wait for medical exams is well documented. A report issued last year by the President's task force on improving veterans health care delivery said there were nearly 300,000 veterans waiting for medical services at the start of 2003.

While progress is being made to gain more timely care for veterans, the Secretary's decision to halt enrollment of certain veterans for the remainder of the year and into the next fiscal year is another clear indicator that VA cannot meet its own standard for scheduling and appointment within 30 days.

Your proposal would establish a two-year pilot program in three Veterans Integrated Service Networks—a highly rural VISN, a rural VISN, and an urban VISN—to improve access for veterans seeking care and determine how much such standards would cost in terms of resources and impact on other VA medical services.

In effect, the bill provides a valuable tool to use for reducing waiting times and responding to the healthcare needs of veterans. Moreover, it would provide vital information on the actual resource needs necessary to ensure veterans earned benefits are provided in a timely manner.

We are grateful for your leadership in proposing this legislation, and we thank you for supporting the men and women who have served America's Armed Forces.

Sincerely,

RICHARD A. JONES,
National Legislative Director.

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, I rise today with my friend, Senator CONRAD, in support of legislation to ensure that the Department of Veterans Affairs meets appropriate health care access standards.

With more than 60,000 veterans nationwide still on waiting lists to see a doctor—in some cases for more than a year—we must take measures to combat this problem. Right now, at the Gainesville VA Hospital in my home State of Florida, there are 1,085 veterans that have been waiting 6 months or longer to see a primary care doctor. And at the Fort Myers Outpatient Clinic, almost 600 veterans must wait at least a year to see an eye doctor. While VA has made improvements over the past year, I remain skeptical of their ability to rectify the problem. My concerns were exacerbated by a May 2003 Inspector General report which concluded that VA needed to improve their accuracy in tracking patients on waiting lists.

The legislation Senator CONRAD and I are introducing today would establish three pilot programs that seek to improve the timeliness of veterans' access to VA health care services. The programs would first require VA to meet the access standards they set for themselves at 30 days for a primary care appointment and 30 days for a specialty care appointment. If VA cannot schedule an appointment for a patient within this timeline, then they must provide for the service elsewhere, such as through contracts with local private health care facilities.

This initiative would merely put VA's already existing access standards into law, reinforcing VA's own targets and sending a message that we are willing to work with VA to help combat this problem. It has been over a year now that the Department has dealt with waiting lists and has yet to eliminate them. We cannot continue to sit back and criticize—we have provided the funding VA needs, and now we must also try to assist them in other ways.

Most importantly, the pilot program would be cost-neutral because it grants the Secretary discretion to defer from the access requirements if the cost of outside care exceeds that of VA's. Therefore, there will be no detriment to the VA system for providing timely access to needed health care services. I know my colleagues agree that our Nation's veterans deserve quality health care within a reasonable time frame, and I urge them to support this legislation.

Subtitle C—Household Goods Movers

SEC. 4301. SHORT TITLE; AMENDMENT OF TITLE 49, UNITED STATES CODE.

(a) Short Title.—This subtitle may be cited as the "Household Goods Mover Oversight Enforcement and Reform Act of 2004".

(b) Amendment of Title 49, United States Code.—Except as otherwise specifically provided, whenever in this subtitle an amendment is expressed in terms of an amendment to a section or other provision of law, the reference shall be considered to be made to a section or other provision of title 49, United States Code.

SEC. 4302. FINDINGS; SENSE OF CONGRESS.

The Congress finds the following:

(1) There are approximately 1,500,000 interstate household moves every year. While the vast majority of these interstate moves are completed successfully, consumer complaints have been increasing since the Interstate Commerce Commission was abolished in 1996 and oversight of the household goods industry was transferred to the Department of Transportation.

(2) While the overwhelming majority of household goods carriers are honest and operate within the law, there appears to be a growing criminal element that is exploiting a perceived void in Federal and State enforcement efforts. The growing criminal element tends to prey upon consumers.

(3) The movement of an individual's household goods is unique and differs from the movement of a commercial shipment. A consumer may utilize a moving company once or twice in the consumer's lifetime and entrust virtually all of the consumer's worldly goods to a mover.

(4) Federal resources are inadequate to properly police or deter, on a nationwide basis, those movers who willfully violate Federal regulations governing the household goods industry and knowingly prey on consumers who are in a vulnerable position. It is appropriate that a Federal-State partnership be created to enhance enforcement against fraudulent moving companies.

SEC. 4303. DEFINITIONS.

In this title, the terms "carrier", "household goods", "motor carrier", "Secretary", and "transportation" have the meaning given such terms in section 13102 of title 49, United States Code.

"(B) DEFINITION OF ECONOMIC SUBSTANCE.—For purposes of subparagraph (A)—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—A transaction has economic substance only if—

"(I) the transaction changes in a meaningful way (apart from Federal tax effects) the taxpayer's economic position, and

"(I) the present value of the reasonably expected pre-tax profit from the transaction is substantial in relation to the present value of the expected net tax benefits that would be allowed if the transaction were respected, and

"(II) the reasonably expected pre-tax profit from the transaction exceeds a risk-free rate of return.

"(C) TREATMENT OF FEES AND FOREIGN TAXES.—Fees and other transaction expenses and foreign taxes shall be taken into account as expenses in determining pre-tax profit under subparagraph (B)(ii).

"(B) ARTIFICIAL INCOME SHIFTING AND BASIS ADJUSTMENTS.—The form of a transaction with a tax-indifferent party shall not be respected if—

"(ii) it results in a basis adjustment or shifting of basis on account of overstating the income or gain of the tax-indifferent party.

"(3) DEFINITIONS AND SPECIAL RULES.—For purposes of this subsection—

"(A) ECONOMIC SUBSTANCE DOCTRINE.—The term 'economic substance doctrine' means the common law doctrine under which tax benefits under subtitle A with respect to a transaction are not allowable if the transaction does not have economic substance or lacks a business purpose.

"(A) notwithstanding any other provision of this title, any gain arising from such sale shall be taken into account for the taxable year of the sale, and

"(B) any loss arising from such sale shall be taken into account for the taxable year of the sale to the extent otherwise provided by this title, except that section 1091 shall not apply to any such loss.

Proper adjustment shall be made in the amount of any gain or loss subsequently realized for gain or loss taken into account under the preceding sentence.

"(3) EXCLUSION FOR CERTAIN GAIN.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The amount which, but for this paragraph, would be includible in the gross income of any individual by reason of this section shall be reduced (but not below zero) by $600,000. For purposes of this paragraph, allocable expatriation gain taken into account under subsection (f)(2) shall be treated in the same manner as an amount required to be includible in gross income.

"(B) COST-OF-LIVING ADJUSTMENT.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—In the case of an expatriation date occurring in any calendar year after 2004, the $600,000 amount under subparagraph (A) shall be increased by an amount equal to—

"(ii) in the case of property to which this section would apply but for such election, the expatriate shall be subject to tax under this title in the same manner as if the individual were a United States citizen.

"(B) REQUIREMENTS.—Subparagraph (A) shall not apply to an individual unless the individual—

"(i) provides security for payment of tax in such form and manner, and in such amount, as the Secretary may require,

"(ii) consents to the waiver of any right of the individual under any treaty of the United States which would preclude assessment or collection of any tax which may be imposed by reason of this paragraph, and

"(2) DETERMINATION OF TAX WITH RESPECT TO PROPERTY.—For purposes of paragraph (1), the additional tax attributable to any property is an amount which bears the same ratio to the additional tax imposed by this chapter for the taxable year solely by reason of subsection (a) as the gain taken into account under subsection (a) with respect to such property bears to the total gain taken into account under subsection (a) with respect to all property to which subsection (a) applies.

"(3) TERMINATION OF POSTPONEMENT.—No tax may be postponed under this subsection later than the due date for the return of tax imposed by this chapter for the taxable year which includes the date of death of the expatriate (or, if earlier, the time that the security provided with respect to the property fails to meet the requirements of paragraph (4), unless the taxpayer corrects such failure within the time specified by the Secretary).

"(4) SECURITY.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—No election may be made under paragraph (1) with respect to any property unless adequate security is provided to the Secretary with respect to such property.

"(B) ADEQUATE SECURITY.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), security with respect to any property shall be treated as adequate security if—

"(i) it is a bond in an amount equal to the deferred tax amount under paragraph (2) for the property, or

"(ii) the taxpayer otherwise establishes to the satisfaction of the Secretary that the security is adequate.

"(5) WAIVER OF CERTAIN RIGHTS.—No election may be made under paragraph (1) unless the taxpayer consents to the waiver of any right under any treaty of the United States which would preclude assessment or collection of any tax imposed by reason of this section.

"(6) ELECTIONS.—An election under paragraph (1) shall only apply to property described in the election and, once made, is irrevocable. An election may be made under paragraph (1) with respect to an interest in a trust with respect to which gain is required to be recognized under subsection (f)(1).

"(7) INTEREST.—For purposes of section 6601—

"(A) the last date for the payment of tax shall be determined without regard to the election under this subsection, and

"(i) such interest shall not be treated as sold for purposes of subsection (a)(1), but

"(ii) an amount equal to the present value of the expatriate's nonforfeitable accrued benefit shall be treated as having been received by such individual on such date as a distribution under the plan.

"(B) TREATMENT OF SUBSEQUENT DISTRIBUTIONS.—In the case of any distribution on or after the expatriation date to or on behalf of the covered expatriate from a plan from which the expatriate was treated as receiving a distribution under subparagraph (A), the amount otherwise includible in gross income by reason of the subsequent distribution shall be reduced by the excess of the amount includible in gross income under subparagraph (A) over any portion of such amount to which this subparagraph previously applied.

"(C) TREATMENT OF SUBSEQUENT DISTRIBUTIONS BY PLAN.—For purposes of this title, a retirement plan to which this paragraph applies, and any person acting on the plan's behalf, shall treat any subsequent distribution described in subparagraph (B) in the same manner as such distribution would be treated without regard to this paragraph.

"(C)(i) such separate share shall be treated as a separate trust consisting of the assets allocable to such share,

"(ii) the separate trust shall be treated as having sold its assets on the day before the expatriation date for their fair market value and as having distributed all of its assets to the individual as of such time, and

"(iii) the individual shall be treated as having recontributed the assets to the separate trust.

Subsection (a)(2) shall apply to any income, gain, or loss of the individual arising from a distribution described in subparagraph (C)(ii). In determining the amount of such distribution, proper adjustments shall be made for liabilities of the trust allocable to an individual's share in the trust.

"(D) ALLOCABLE EXPATRIATION GAIN.—For purposes of this paragraph, the allocable expatriation gain with respect to any beneficiary's interest in a trust is the amount of gain which would be allocable to such beneficiary's vested and nonvested interests in the trust if the beneficiary held directly all assets allocable to such interests.

"(i) the tax determined under paragraph (1) as if the day before the expatriation date were the date of such cessation, disposition, or death, whichever is applicable, or

"(ii) the balance in the tax deferred account immediately before such date.

Such tax shall be imposed on the trust and each trustee shall be personally liable for the amount of such tax and any other beneficiary of the trust shall be entitled to recover from the covered expatriate or the estate the amount of such tax imposed on the other beneficiary.

TITLE __ WARTIME TREATMENT STUDY ACT

SEC. __01. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Wartime Treatment Study Act".

SEC. __02. FINDINGS.

Congress makes the following findings:

(1) During World War II, the United States successfully fought the spread of Nazism and fascism by Germany, Italy, and Japan.

(2) Nazi Germany persecuted and engaged in genocide against Jews and certain other groups. By the end of the war, 6,000,000 Jews had perished at the hands of Nazi Germany. United States Government policies, however, restricted entry to the United States to Jewish and other refugees who sought safety from Nazi persecution.

(3) While we were at war, the United States treated the Japanese American, German American, and Italian American communities as suspect.

(4) The United States Government should conduct an independent review to assess fully and acknowledge these actions. Congress has previously reviewed the United States Government's wartime treatment of Japanese Americans through the Commission on Wartime Relocation and Internment of Civilians. An independent review of the treatment of German Americans and Italian Americans and of Jewish refugees fleeing persecution and genocide has not yet been undertaken.

(5) During World War II, the United States Government branded as "enemy aliens" more than 600,000 Italian-born and 300,000 German-born United States resident aliens and their families and required them to carry Certificates of Identification, limited their travel, and seized their personal property. At that time, these groups were the two largest foreign-born groups in the United States.

(6) During World War II, the United States Government arrested, interned or otherwise detained thousands of European Americans, some remaining in custody for years after cessation of World War II hostilities, and repatriated, exchanged, or deported European Americans, including American-born children, to hostile, war-torn European Axis nations, many to be exchanged for Americans held in those nations.

(7) Pursuant to a policy coordinated by the United States with Latin American countries, many European Latin Americans, including German and Austrian Jews, were captured, shipped to the United States and interned. Many were later expatriated, repatriated or deported to hostile, war-torn European Axis nations during World War II, most to be exchanged for Americans and Latin Americans held in those nations.

(8) Millions of European Americans served in the armed forces and thousands sacrificed their lives in defense of the United States.

(9) The wartime policies of the United States Government were devastating to the Italian Americans and German American communities, individuals and their families. The detrimental effects are still being experienced.

(10) Prior to and during World War II, the United States restricted the entry of Jewish refugees who were fleeing persecution and sought safety in the United States. During the 1930's and 1940's, the quota system, immigration regulations, visa requirements, and the time required to process visa applications affected the number of Jewish refugees, particularly those from Germany and Austria, who could gain admittance to the United States.

(11) Time is of the essence for the establishment of commissions, because of the increasing danger of destruction and loss of relevant documents, the advanced age of potential witnesses and, most importantly, the advanced age of those affected by the United States Government's policies. Many who suffered have already passed away and will never know of this effort.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES—Tuesday, February 10, 2004

The House met at 12:30 p.m. and was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. BOOZMAN).

DESIGNATION OF SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Speaker:

WASHINGTON, DC,
February 10, 2004.

I hereby appoint the Honorable JOHN BOOZMAN to act as Speaker pro tempore on this day.

J. DENNIS HASTERT,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

MORNING HOUR DEBATES

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of January 20, 2004, the Chair will now recognize Members from lists submitted by the majority and minority leaders for morning hour debates. The Chair will alternate recognition between the parties, with each party limited to not to exceed 30 minutes, and each Member, except the majority leader, the minority leader, or the minority whip, limited to not to exceed 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. BLUMENAUER) for 5 minutes.

AMERICAN MIDDLE-CLASS TAX

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Mr. Speaker, listening to the President's State of the Union speech and the Republican leadership in Congress, I have been struck by the false choices and misplaced priorities that have been presented to the American public.

We heard pledges from the Presidential candidates on the campaign trail in the year 2000 to save the Social Security surplus and put it in a lockbox.

The reality of the President's 2005 budget proposal is that he feels it is more important to reward those who need help the least, instead of correcting, for example, the looming crisis in Social Security. Perhaps, a cynic would say, because it does not explode until after the expiration of the next Presidential term.

Rather than protect future retirements for American workers, this administration would instead borrow more from the Social Security trust fund to finance tax breaks for people who already have gained the most. But the most disingenuous, insidious, and destructive of all of these policies to American middle-class families is the refusal to deal with the alternative minimum tax, which has become a cruel penalty on middle America.

This tax was established 35 years ago after a study revealed that there were 155 people who paid no Federal income tax at all despite having an annual income, in today's dollars, of over a million dollars. This led to the alternative minimum tax passed in 1969. It was designed to ensure that a few ultra-rich people at least paid something. This alternative minimum tax, the AMT, has now morphed into a money-raising bonanza for the Federal Government and a nightmare for middle America.

Because it was never indexed for inflation, more people pay this every year, people who were never designed to be subjected to it. Congress now uses these tax revenues to finance other tax cuts for more privileged people. The goal of the administration and the Republican Congress is to make dividend and investment income tax free, inheritances tax free.

As recently as 1997, less than 1 percent of the American tax payers were subjected to the alternative minimum tax. Because of inflation, rising incomes, and added gimmicks to the tax system, today, almost 2½ million families pay the AMT. By 2005, we will have five times as many people, over 12 million families; by 2010 over 33 million American families are going to be providing half the Federal income tax through the alternative minimum tax. By 2013, 10 years from now, 37 percent of all taxpayers, 41 million families, will pay it.

The tragedy is that instead of catching a few who avoid paying taxes, the alternative minimum tax is specifically penalizing hard-working families who are doing exactly what government and this administration ask. Rather than strike people who avoid paying taxes, the alternative minimum tax penalizes families who are because they pay high local property and income taxes. It penalizes people with children who take advantage of the child care deductions and family credits. It penalizes those who save for their own future with 401(k) or other tax-deferred programs. These things trigger the alternative minimum tax for doing exactly what people are asked by this government to do.

Finally, many people are going to pay more to a CPA to make complex calculations than the tax itself will cost them, thus a double tax penalty.

Where is the outrage from this administration and from the Republican leadership in Congress about this disaster that is befalling American families? They claim that they are for tax fairness and justice, yet they are addicted to the Federal Government raising revenues unfairly while they are cutting taxes for people whose taxes have already been cut and who need the help least of any Americans.

Federal taxes overall as a percentage of government spending are at the lowest level of national income since the 1950s; but they are being shifted. Because of the policies of my Republican friends in Congress and this administration, they are being shifted to America's hard-working families who deserve better.

There ought to be no more talk about tax cuts for the most well-off until we fix this nightmare. The failure to address the alternative minimum tax makes a mockery of alleged concern for middle America, for families, and for tax fairness.

WE DID THE RIGHT THING

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of January 20, 2004, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DELAY) is recognized during morning hour debates for such time as he may consume.

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Speaker, there is one point to make in the debate about the war on Iraq and it is this: we did the right thing.

After September 11, President Bush declared war on the terrorists and all the regimes who support them. Saddam Hussein's dictatorship was the very definition of a terrorist regime. He started two wars, invaded two neighbors, and tried to assassinate an American President. He was obsessed with obtaining nuclear weapons and was bent on using them to blackmail the civilized world. He was a merciless tyrant with no respect for human life who butchered his own people and threatened the stability of a fragile region in the Middle East. He worked with terrorists and financed their operations. He was going to kill more Americans and help others to do so. In short, Mr. Speaker, Saddam Hussein was Iraq's weapons of mass destruction; and he had to be removed.

Yet, now in this political season, partisan opportunists suggest that the war was somehow illegitimate because we have not found massive World War II-style warehouses full of missiles. But

Matter set in this typeface indicates words inserted or appended, rather than spoken, by a Member of the House on the floor.

9-11 taught us that our enemies need not have conventional weapons to threaten us. If Saddam Hussein had just a briefcase full of one chemical or so much as a vile of another given his past, his hatred of the United States and his ties to international terrorism, he posed a grave and gathering threat to our national security, period.

Critics who now undermine the legitimacy of Operation Iraqi Freedom with their slanderous attacks against the President and the international intelligence community undermined our security at the same time. Revisionists these days seem to believe it was someone other than Saddam Hussein who deceived the international community during the buildup of this war. But by doing so, Mr. Speaker, they embolden our enemies. Every world leader, especially those of us with the honor to serve in this body, should stand up and speak with one voice on the war on terror and how it will be fought and how we should win it in Iraq and elsewhere. Undermining our mission in Iraq to score political points dishonors the victory we won there and the legacy of the men and women who gave their lives in its winning.

We did the right thing, Mr. Speaker; and we would do it again.

PRESIDENTIAL SUPPORT FOR OUTSOURCING JOBS IS OUTRAGEOUS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of January 20, 2004, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. BROWN) is recognized during morning hour debates for 5 minutes.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, today I picked up a newspaper, picked up a Los Angeles Times, and the headline of the Los Angeles Times, I believe the second largest daily paper in the Nation, said, "Bush Supports Shift of Jobs Overseas." The subheadline was, "The loss of work to other countries, while painful in the short term, will enrich our economy eventually," the President's report to Congress says.

Now, I thought maybe that was just an overzealous headline writer, so I looked at some other newspapers.

The Seattle Times headline was, "Bush Report: Sending Jobs Overseas Helps the United States."

Then I looked at the Pittsburg Post Gazette: "Bush Economic Report Praises Outsourcing Jobs," sending those jobs overseas. The Orlando Sentinel in the President's brother's home State: "Bush Says Sending Jobs Abroad Can Be Beneficial."

Now, this is a President of the United States who in 3 years has seen a job loss of 3 million people. In my home State of Ohio, we have lost 300,000 jobs. One out of six manufacturing jobs in Ohio has disappeared to Mexico, to China, somewhere overseas generally.

We have seen continued job loss in every State in this country. In fact, we have seen manufacturing job loss every single month of the Bush administration. And after I read these headlines and I read the articles which correspond precisely to the headlines, it makes me think maybe that is the Bush plan overall, that we are sending these jobs overseas. Maybe that is what he planned. And that does not make any sense, that the President of the United States would want to send jobs overseas; but this President supported the North American Free Trade Agreement running for Governor of Texas. Then he supported as Governor of Texas the Permanent Normal Trade Relations, the trade agreement with China. He supported Fast Track Trade Promotion Authority. He now supports the Central American Free Trade Agreement which will hemorrhage more jobs to Latin America. And his office is right now negotiating the Free Trade Act of the Americas, which will quadruple the size of the North American Free Trade Agreement, causing more hemorrhaging of jobs.

So when the President's head of Council of Economic Advisors, Gregory Mankiw, when he prepared this report, he said in this report, "Outsourcing is just a way of doing international trade. More things are tradeable than were tradeable in the past. And that is a good thing." He then goes on to claim that, as the gentleman from California (Mr. SHERMAN), who is with me here, points out, that this Bush plan will create 2.6 million jobs in 2004.

It is another promise of job creation, but we have seen manufacturing job loss every single month of the Bush administration. And now apparently they are saying this outsourcing, this job loss overseas is a good thing.

Now, the most interesting, maybe if not the most important because it is not as big as the job loss in manufacturing, but he talks about one particular group of people who happen to be radiologists. And I know of radiologists in the United States, they are the people that read the x-rays and the MRIs and all of that, who have said that when they take x-rays, when they do MRIs, sometimes those x-rays are literally e-mailed to India, read by radiologists in India, and then sent back. So radiologists are concerned about their work, frankly.

In his report he said, "Maybe we will outsource a few radiologists. What does that mean? Maybe the next generation of doctors will train fewer radiologists and will train more general practitioners or surgeons. Maybe we have learned that we do not have a comparative advantage in radiologists."

Maybe Mr. Mankiw has read too many economics text books when he says we do not have a comparative advantage in radiologists.

But the point, Mr. Speaker, is that this administration has totally lost touch with reality, if they can look in the eye a worker in Akron, Ohio, in the steel industry or in Lorraine or Cleveland or anywhere in this country, look them in the eye and they can say, outsourcing is a good thing. Your job going overseas is a good thing because then maybe you can get a job at Wal-Mart that pays $7 an hour with health care benefits. Or maybe you can get a job somewhere else part-time, or maybe you can figure out what is going to happen to your health insurance and what is going to happen to your pension.

The fact is that this administration's answer to everything is more tax cuts for the richest people and more trade agreements that hemorrhage jobs overseas. We have seen enough job loss in this country without the President piling on, without the President, as the L.A. Times says, supporting the shift of jobs overseas; without the President, as the Seattle Times said, sending jobs overseas helps the United States; without the President, as the Pittsburg Post Gazette says, his economic report praises outsourcing jobs; or as the Orland Sentinel says, sending jobs abroad can be beneficial.

It does not make sense for our country. It does not make sense for workers. It does not make sense for our people.

DEFICIT ACCOUNTABILITY

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BOOZMAN). Pursuant to the order of the House of January 20, 2004, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. STEARNS) is recognized during morning hour debates for 5 minutes.

Mr. STEARNS. Mr. Speaker, I would say to my colleague from Ohio that President Clinton of his party supported a lot of this free trade. In fact, President Clinton was very active in getting passed in previous Congresses many of these free trade agreements that the gentleman from Ohio is complaining about. So I think it is just a question of whether one is for free trade or not. I am for fair trade not free trade.

But, Mr. Speaker, I am here to talk about a deficit that is continuing quite dramatically, and now all of us are faced with a tough task of balancing the budget the next 5 years, and the President is committed to that.

One of the reasons this budget is in a deficit mode is because of the recession that President Bush inherited; also what happened on 9/11. It changed this country's perspective completely and, of course, with it our efforts to secure our homeland borders and security within our buildings. So, obviously, we have had to expend extra money to do that; and the President rightly did so and Congress agreed to reduce taxes so we could help the economy.

Obviously, there is no quick fix for the deficit. However, we must act decisively today in the budget process so that we do not put undue burden on future generations.

I believe that Members of Congress realize how accountability works. We want to support reduced spending around here, and that is why I am introducing a bill this day to underscore accountability that will connect all of us here in Congress with the rest of the country.

Year in and year out, we all have to explain to our constituents why we automatically receive a pay raise regardless of the deficit that occurs here in Congress. So why not have a bill simply to say that no automatic pay adjustments will be made for Members of Congress in the year following a fiscal year in which there is a Federal budget deficit? Something very simple. My bill, the Deficit Accountability Act of 2004, basically says that, again, no automatic pay adjustments are made for us here in Congress unless we balance the budget.

If this Congress can work together, I think we can control spending. We must lead by example, and I believe this simple measure could do just that. The bill would provide a real-world incentive for Members of Congress to curtail wasteful and abusive spending.

So it is a good-faith measure, Mr. Speaker. It is in a small way just symbolic, but I think our constituents would appreciate that, and that is why I am offering this bill today.

All of us have returned from our respective retreats, the Democrats and Republicans, and all of us, of course, are resolved to have a tougher stance on spending and try to balance the budget. There has been some talk again about having a line item veto. I would like to see that effort reenergized, reenacted; and I believe now is the time to support the shift in this fiscal environment towards a balanced budget.

Momentum is building in this House to write a congressional budget resolution that would freeze outright nondefense, nonhomeland security appropriations. Furthermore, many Members have introduced legislation that seeks to make deep cuts in the discretionary spending of the various departments. These departments have lots of accountability problems. There is waste and fraud in some of these Departments. The President's budget proposal makes a strong effort to address these problems.

Mr. Speaker, I just bring to my colleagues' attention a recent GAO report that showed that the collective departments, across the board every department in the budget reported a staggering $17.3 billion in unreconciled transactions in 2002. That is, to put it bluntly, we have lost $17 billion. It is unaccounted for. I know all Members will agree that these lost funds are staggering, and something must be done to get to the bottom of this, and obviously in this budget process we should do this.

At this time, we clearly have an opportunity to curtail wasteful spending and at the same time support our President as he seeks to balance the budget in the next 5 years. I believe starting today this body can make a statement of how we want spending in this Congress to proceed and also how to pay ourselves in the event we have a deficit. Mr. Speaker, we must draw a line on spending, and hopefully we can now remember it is the American taxpayers who occupy the most prominent position at the negotiating table here in Washington.

THE RULE OF LAW SHOULD MATTER

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of January 20, 2004, the gentleman from California (Mr. SHERMAN) is recognized during morning hour debates for 5 minutes.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, just for a second I would like to go over the remarks of the gentleman from Ohio where he says that the Republican administration actually promotes the outsourcing of jobs, reducing jobs here in the United States. It almost makes it sound like the Bush administration does not care about Americans.

Keep in mind, for every 100 jobs we export, we create one or two very rich Americans; and, on balance, that may be thought to be a good thing by the Bush administration.

We also have a huge half trillion dollar trade deficit.

THEFT OF DOCUMENTS FROM JUDICIARY COMMITTEE

But I want to remind my colleagues of a day back in 1972 when we had a positive trade surplus and when the Watergate headquarters of the Democratic Party was burglarized. Howard Hunt and G. Gordon Liddy went to jail for that burglary because Republicans here in Washington believed that the rule of law was more important than Republican success.

Today, a similar crime has been committed. At the Senate Committee on the Judiciary, a computer server that was jointly used by Democrats and Republicans was burglarized, and thousands of the Democrats' documents were stolen, far more than Howard Hunt and G. Gordon Liddy ever thought to steal.

A shared computer server is not an unusual thing on Capitol Hill. My Democratic colleagues need to be reminded that every e-mail we send, every e-mail we receive goes through a shared computer server, under the control ultimately of the Speaker of this House and his staff. But we Democrats here in the House do not believe that the Speaker and his staff are criminals. We believe they are honorable men and women, and so we send e-mail today just as we do every other day.

What is happening in the other body, Mr. Speaker? A small cabal has decided to burglarize documents. That is the same as what happened back in 1972, but what is more interesting is that the predominant power in the Republican party, the predominant power here in Washington, wants to protect this act of robbery.

Sure, one staffer has been fired. Now that staffer is free to obtain lucrative employment and cash gifts without having to report it. Another staffer has left, and that staffer boasts about being in control of stolen documents, stolen property. Instead of going to jail for being in possession of stolen property, he trumpets how he is going to use this property for the support of the Republican position.

The rule of law should matter. We are told, though, that the rule of law is being upheld because a couple of staffers lost their jobs. Since when is it the criminal law in this country that if one steals something the only sanction is they have to go get employment elsewhere?

We are told that this crime is not a crime because it was a shared computer server. That is a little dangerous for Democrats in the House, where every e-mail is going through a shared server under Republican control.

It is also a complete repudiation of American criminal law. If two partners share a safe deposit box or a safe, that does not mean that one can use the combination to steal all the cash and valuables that the other has put in it. It is very clear. Sharing a box does not mean one gets to steal the other person's or other entity's property. Except that is what it seems to mean in the Republican lexicon.

Burglary and robbery are reasons for people to be indicted and sent to jail. That is what happened to G. Gordon Liddy, that is what happened to Howard Hunt, and we will see whether the Republicans in control of this House and the other body, and in control of Washington and all of its agencies, will make sure that there is a criminal investigation of this theft. Stealing from a safe is wrong, even if one has been trusted with the combination.

If this does not happen, then we in the House will have to look at the additional governmental expense involved in having a separate Democratic e-mail server. Because how can we trust a Republican Party that seems to have gone from a party that puts the rule of law first to one that glorifies burglary and defends criminals?

I look forward to the indictment of those who committed robbery.

19-CENTS-A-DAY CAMPAIGN ON SCHOOL FEEDING

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of January 20, 2004, the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MCGOVERN) is recognized during morning hour debates for 5 minutes.

Mr. MCGOVERN. Mr. Speaker, I have come to the well of this floor many times to speak in support of the George McGovern-Robert Dole International Food for Education and Child Nutrition Program.

McGovern-Dole provides hungry children around the world at least one nutritious meal a day in a school setting. The Bush administration's own Department of Agriculture has evaluated this program and found it to be very effective at reducing child hunger, increasing academic attendance and performance, especially among girls, and strengthening community commitment to education.

The McGovern-Dole program is carried out in the field by a wide range of partners, principally through U.S. private voluntary organizations and the United Nations World Food Programme, which has a special unit specializing in school feeding programs.

Currently, the World Food Programme, or WFP, carries out McGovern-Dole-supported school feeding programs in Bhutan, Bolivia, Cambodia, Cameroon, the Ivory Coast, Ghana, Mozambique, Nepal, Pakistan, Tanzania and Uganda. But this is just part of WFP's worldwide effort in the area of school feeding, which reaches literally every corner of the world.

Mr. Speaker, over 840 million people do not have enough food to eat on a daily basis. Three hundred million of these are children, who go to sleep every night without enough food to eat. Today, and every day, 24,000 people will die because of hunger and its ugly effects. This is more than HIV and AIDS, malaria and tuberculosis combined, although hunger and disease are closely intertwined.

In short, between 8 and 10 million people die needlessly every year because of hunger and malnutrition.

Last year, the World Health Organization listed the top 10 health risks around the world. The number one risk is not cancer or HIV/AIDS or heart disease. It is not war or armed conflict or accidents. The number one health risk in the world is simply the lack of food.

In an effort to reach out to students and communities throughout the United States, the World Food Programme has launched a campaign to raise money and awareness about the hunger and educational needs of children in Third World countries.

This campaign will help shine a light on what life is like for the more than 300 million children who daily endure, suffer and die from hunger. Nearly half of these children, mainly girls, do not go to school. The campaign will give students in communities a simple yet concrete way to make a difference in these children's futures.

The campaign is called the 19-Cents-a-Day Campaign depicted in this poster here. Why 19 cents? Because 19 cents is the average daily cost to feed a child in a school setting.

Think about this for a moment, Mr. Speaker. Nineteen cents a day, a dime, a nickel and four pennies, that is half the cost of a first-class stamp. For about the cost of one Big Mac, a soda and an order of fries each month, we can feed a child for an entire school year.

Mr. Speaker, we know that one of the best steps anyone can take to reduce or escape poverty is to get an education. Offering a meal at school is a proven method of convincing poor families to send their children to school, including their daughters.

Last month, Judith Lewis, the Washington Director of WFP, traveled to her home State of Mississippi to officially launch the 19-Cents-a-Day Campaign. Mississippi is a place that knows something about hunger. Last year, over 392,000 Mississippi children received free or reduced school lunches. I am happy to report the response from the high school students in Brandon, Mississippi, was overwhelmingly positive, raising hundreds of dollars for WFP school feeding programs.

The 19-Cents-a-Day Campaign is a great way to talk about child hunger, both around the world and in our own congressional districts. It is a great way to raise awareness and funds and engage our own students and communities in the fight against hunger abroad and here at home.

☐ 1300

In the weeks to come, the campaign will be launched in high schools in Illinois, North Carolina, and California. I hope to launch a similar campaign in Massachusetts, my home State. I encourage my colleagues to contact the World Food Program to find out more about the 19 Cents a Day Campaign and how more students and communities can become involved.

Mr. Speaker, I firmly believe we can end hunger among children, both here in the United States and around the world. It only takes the time, commitment, and political will to do so.

RECESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BOOZMAN). Pursuant to clause 12(a) of rule I, the Chair declares the House in recess until 2 p.m. today.

Accordingly (at 1 o'clock and 1 minute p.m.), the House stood in recess until 2 p.m.

☐ 1400

AFTER RECESS

The recess having expired, the House was called to order at 2 p.m.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, the Reverend Daniel P. Coughlin, offered the following prayer:

Lord, did Your ancient seer David see people gathered on Capitol Hill when he asked: "Who shall climb the mountain of the Lord? Who shall stand in the Lord's awesome presence?"

Surely the Members of Congress know the answer to this question as did David's own: "Those with clean hands and pure hearts. Those who do not desire worthless things or have never taken an oath only to deceive their neighbor."

Lord, this great Nation and its fullness, the whole world and all its people are Yours. Renew Your blessings upon us today and make us humble enough to acknowledge that all is Your gift.

So we enter into Your presence to praise You now and forever. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman from Maine (Mr. MICHAUD) come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Mr. MICHAUD led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

> I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

Clerk of the House.

ECONOMIC REPORT OF THE PRESIDENT—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES (H. DOC. NO. 108–145)

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. COLE) laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States; which was read and, together with the accompanying papers, without objection, referred to the Joint Economic Committee and ordered to be printed:

To the Congress of the United States:

As 2004 begins, America's economy is strong and getting stronger. Over the past several years, this Nation has faced major economic challenges resulting from the decline of the stock market beginning in early 2000, a recession that began shortly after, revelations about corporate governance scandals, slow growth among many of our major trading partners, terrorist attacks, and the war against terror, including in Afghanistan and Iraq. These challenges affected business and consumer confidence and resulted in hardship for people in many industries and regions of our Nation. Americans have responded to each challenge, and now we have the results: renewed confidence, strong growth, new jobs, and a mounting prosperity that will reach every corner of America.

This Report, prepared by my Council of Economic Advisers, describes the economic challenges we faced, the actions we took, and the results we are seeing. It also discusses our plan to continue growing the economy and creating jobs.

In May 2003, I signed a Jobs and Growth bill that focused on three key goals. First, we accelerated previously passed tax relief and let American households keep more of their own money to save, invest, and spend. Second, we increased incentives for small businesses to invest in new equipment and plant expansions. Third, we enacted important tax relief on dividend income and capital gains to help investors and businesses. These actions were designed to promote investment, job creation, and income growth. By all three measures of performance, we are seeing signs of success.

Since May 2003, we have seen the economy grow at its fastest pace in nearly 20 years. Consumers and businesses have gained confidence. Retail sales are strong, and Americans are buying, building, and renovating houses at a record pace. Investment has strengthened, with spending on business equipment the best in 5 years. The unemployment rate has fallen from it peak of 6.3 percent last June to 5.7 percent in December, and employment is beginning to rise as new jobs are created especially in small business. Productivity growth has been strong, leading to higher incomes for workers, while the tax relief we passed means that American families keep more of their money instead of sending it to Washington.

We are moving in the right direction, but have more to do. I will not be satisfied until every American who wants a job can find one. I have outlined a six-point plan to promote job creation and strong economic growth. This plan includes initiatives to help manage rising health care costs to make health care more affordable and accessible for American workers and families; reduce the burden of junk lawsuits on the economy; ensure a reliable and affordable energy supply; simplify and streamline government regulations; open foreign markets for American goods and services; and allow businesses and families to keep more of their hard-earned money and plan with confidence by making our tax relief permanent. This year, I will work with the Congress to achieve these goals.

I will also continue to work with the Congress on another important shared goal: controlling federal spending and reducing the deficit. The federal budget is in deficit, foremost because of the economic slowdown and then recession that began in 2000 and the additional costs of fighting the war on terror and protecting the homeland. We are continuing to take action to restrain spending and bring the deficit down. By carefully evaluating priorities and being good stewards of the taxpayer's money, we will cut the budget deficit in half over the next five years.

The task of reducing the deficit will become easier because America's economy is growing. We have taken the actions needed to restore growth, and we are pursuing additional policies to help create jobs for American workers and families. I'm optimistic about the future of our economy because I know the values of America and the decency and entrepreneurial spirit of our people.

GEORGE W. BUSH.

THE WHITE HOUSE, February 2004.

PROLIFERATION OF WEAPONS OF MASS DESTRUCTION

(Mr. RADANOVICH asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. RADANOVICH. Mr. Speaker, the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction poses the most serious of dangers to the peace of the world. Chemical, biological, and nuclear weapons in the hands of terrorists could bring catastrophic harm to America and to our friends around the world. We must oppose that threat by any means necessary.

The men and women of our intelligence community have already found a very revealing component of Iraq's biological weapons program. Two mobile production facilities equipped to produce biological weapons. Iraqis allege that these trucks are pharmaceutical labs. But what possible reason could there be for two such mobile labs in the middle of the desert? And why, if these vehicles were merely pharmaceutical trucks, did the Iraqi soldiers wash them out with bleach while the war was going on?

President Bush's decisive action and leadership is keeping our country and allies safe from terrorist groups that are unrestrained in their choice of weapon and undeterred by conventional means. Our perseverance and our belief in the success of liberty assures our security, and we will not relent until this war is won.

OUTSOURCING OF U.S. SERVICE JOBS OVERSEAS

(Mr. MICHAUD asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. MICHAUD. Mr. Speaker, I come to the floor today in total disbelief. The Washington Post reported this morning that President Bush's top economic adviser, Gregory Mankiw, said that outsourcing U.S. service jobs overseas is actually good for the Nation's economy. This is absolutely outrageous. Sending jobs overseas is good?

Just tell that to the 23,000 Mainers who lost their manufacturing jobs in the last 8 years. Tell that to the 2.2 million Americans who lost their jobs since President Bush took office. These people have seen their hard-earned jobs shipped overseas due to unfair trade agreements and terrible management of our economy. They are the ones who suffer.

I spent 30 years working in a paper mill. It went bankrupt last year. Maybe this administration should take a look at what is happening in places like my hometown, places that need these jobs all across America, before saying that shipping jobs overseas is a good idea.

It might give them a dose of reality that real Americans face every day.

COMMENDING FN MANUFACTURING, INC.

(Mr. WILSON of South Carolina asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WILSON of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, when Americans watch the nightly news images of U.S. troops on duty in Iraq and Afghanistan, they see them carrying out their most difficult duties, using the finest small arms in the world. Those weapons are proudly made in South Carolina's Second Congressional District by FNMI, FN Manufacturing, Incorporated, in Columbia, South Carolina.

Since the mid-1980s, FNMI has been building the M–16 rifle, the M 249 Squad Automatic Weapon, and the M–240 Medium Machine Gun for the U.S.

Armed Forces. In other words, FNMI is the principal supplier of small arms to the military. These arms are universally recognized as the finest infantry weapons in the world, perhaps the finest ever made. They are known for their ruggedness, reliability, and effectiveness and are on duty everywhere American troops are deployed in the war on terror, as I have seen first hand in Iraq.

Additionally, FNMI is one of the largest defense industries in South Carolina, employing approximately 450 dedicated personnel.

I ask all of my colleagues to join me in thanking the professional employees of FNMI Manufacturing, as their work makes it possible for our brave men and women to protect us in the war on terrorism.

In conclusion, may God bless our troops, and we will never forget September 11.

REMEMBERING CARLIE BRUCIA

(Mr. FOLEY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Speaker, it is with a saddened heart that I come to speak to this Chamber today. Last week our Nation was again rocked when we learned of another senseless death of an innocent child. Carlie Brucia, a beautiful young girl from Sarasota, Florida, was violently kidnapped and brutally murdered on her way home from a friend's house, not too far away from her own.

There is nothing I can say that will bring comfort to her family today. No parent should ever lose a child, and all communities throughout the country should shiver at what has happened in Florida this past week. This crime happened in daylight, on a major thoroughfare and in front of passersby. Carlie's death is not just her family's loss but a loss to us all.

This fallen angel's death must not be in vain. Police and prosecutors must ensure that her murderer will never see the light of day again, but that is not enough. We must come together as a community, and as a State, to make sure we never let such a crime happen in our backyard again.

The AMBER Alert system is the best tool we have, but it is just a tool. I wish there was something I could do to undo this terrible crime, but I cannot. What I can offer is my promise to Carlie's family that I will never stop working to ensure that law enforcement has the tools necessary to capture these pedophiles and that families are fully armed with the information they need to protect themselves and their children.

Mr. Speaker, all I can wish for is that I will never have to come to the House floor to talk about the murder of another child ever again. I want to offer my deepest condolences to Carlie's family. I hope that with the help of their family and friends they will be able to get through this terrible time. God bless Carlie.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

Such record votes on postponed questions will be taken after 6:30 p.m. today.

☐ 1415

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased today to rise in support of House Concurrent Resolution 358. This is somewhat of a mundane measure. As a member of the Committee on House Administration, it is a housekeeping responsibility that we take care of obligations such as this.

This particular measure authorizes the printing of a new annotated edition of the United States Capitol by Glenn Brown. Brown's History of the United States Capitol represents the most scholarly publication on the United States Capitol to date. This book was originally written to celebrate the centennial of the move of Congress to the Capitol in 1800.

The volume by Brown continues to provide important information on the development of the United States Capitol building and is also a visual record of the building and the art collection at the turn of the century. The publication sets a new standard for architectural history, as well as being very well received in both this country and abroad.

Glenn Brown's book also played an important role in the revival of Pierre Charles L'Enfant's plan for Washington, D.C., through its influence on the 1901 McMillan Plan; and thus it has also had a very significant effect on the shape of this city, the District of Columbia, and how we see it through the twentieth century.

The idea of publishing a new annotated edition of Glenn Brown's history of the Capitol, published in 1900 and 1903, was first discussed back in 1987. This new annotated history will provide both historical context and contemporary perspective. Glenn Brown and his philosophy and achievements will be examined in the introductory biographical profile.

Annotation of the text will correct errors, review some very important, sometimes controversial issues, mention recently discovered documentation and direct the reader to relevant sources. The publication will be illustrated with high-quality photographs based on Glenn Brown's selection and will introduce color when appropriate to enhance the architectural renderings.

The book will be prepared under the auspices of the Architect of the Capitol, with support from the United States Capitol Preservation Commission and the United States Capitol Historical Society.

Glenn Brown's History of the United States Capitol will be of interest not only to Members of Congress but of significant value to the public, to libraries across the United States, and also to scholars investigating the rich history of the United States Capitol.

Mr. Speaker, I urge full support of House Concurrent Resolution 358. I am pleased to present it on behalf of the Committee on House Administration this afternoon.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. LARSON of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I wish to associate myself with the remarks of the distinguished gentleman from Florida.

As a sponsor of this resolution, I join our distinguished chairman, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. NEY), and I am happy to help bring this publication to fruition. It has been a pleasure for me to work with the gentleman from Ohio (Chairman NEY) on this and other such collaborative matters as they regard the history of our great institution and the history of this Capitol.

The gentleman from Ohio will recall that we worked together in developing a history of the House, and his longstanding appreciation of the history of this great institution of ours and history in general go a long way towards keeping those relationships that accrue on our committee and throughout this institution at a level of deep understanding about the process and the procedure that goes on in this glorious building on a regular basis.

The gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA) has outlined the importance of Glenn Brown's landmark two-volume History of the United States Capitol. Clearly, history should be updated from time to time, especially with the kind of annotated pictures that we can now provide for people, which yet unfolds the richness of this great institution and this marvelous building.

People that come to work here on a daily basis and those that visit the Capitol cannot help but be in awe of the marble and the alabaster of Statuary Hall and all the great symbolism and history represented here. So for us not to make sure that these publications continue to go forward and further enlighten and provide historical research and data about our institution would be a travesty.

Therefore, I am delighted to join with the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA) and again want to applaud the outstanding leadership of the gentleman from Ohio (Chairman NEY) and his willingness to collaborate on this specific publication, an interest that is both near and dear to both of our hearts with regard to historic preservation.

For more than two centuries, this Capitol has stood as a shrine to our democracy and a beacon to millions across the globe. We must preserve not only the bricks and mortar of this Capitol but also its history. The volume printed pursuant to this resolution will make a substantial contribution to that preservation. I urge an "aye" vote on this motion.

As the sponsor of the resolution, I join the distinguished chairman in support of his motion, and I am happy to help bring this publication to fruition. It has been a pleasure to work with the chairman in the past 5 years on matters of common interest, especially related to congressional history. The gentleman may recall that shortly after he became the chairman of the House Administration Committee, I visited his Longworth office and discussed placing a greater emphasis on the history of this institution. We have had significant success in this respect, as the gentleman had while serving in his state's legislature in Columbus. I look forward to working with the chairman further on history-related matters in the months and years ahead.

Mr. Speaker, the American people revere this historic Capitol, the temple of our democracy, and they are rightly proud of what it has come to represent. In the more than 227 years since our Founding Fathers charted a new course for our civilization, this experiment in self-government has not only survived, but flourished. The ideals symbolized by this Capitol inspire millions around the world, giving hope that they and their descendants may someday enjoy the liberty that Americans cherish.

Over a century ago, Congress celebrated the Capitols' centennial by publishing Glenn Brown's landmark two-volume History of the United States Capitol. Brown's handsome volumes chronicled the development of the Capitol and its art collection to that time. Brown's work set a new standard for architectural history, affecting the development of the Capitol, and of the capital city, in the years that followed.

The Capitol has changed considerably in the last century, and present generation should take care to document those changes and preserve the history of this magnificent structure for the future. Plans for an updated, annotated edition of the Glenn Brown History began as the Capitol's 2000 bicentennial approach, and Congress authorized such a volume in 1993. Today, only the final proofreading work remains, save for this renewed printing resolution, before the Government Printing Office can proceed to publish.

The new annotated volume will update the Glenn Brown work, correcting errors, adding new historical context and enhanced color photographs, among other improvements. The new edition, prepared by the Architect of the Capitol with the support of the U.S. Capitol Preservation Commission and the U.S. Capital Historical Society, will be published under the direction of the Joint Committee on Printing in consulting with the House Clerk and the Senate Secretary. The joint committee plans a single-volume format that is both economical and reader-friendly but, like the original, worthy of this splendid structure.

Mr. Speaker, I urge support for the motion. This body should ensure preservation of the Capitol's history, just as in 1999, with the gentleman from Ohio's strong support, the House passed my bill authorizing a written history of the House itself. That House history, being written by the distinguished historian Dr. Robert Remini, is well underway. As entertaining as he is learned, Professor Remini participated last November in the Cannon Centenary Conference on the modern speakership. Those fortunate to hear the professor's remarks left both enlightened and eager to read the completed work chronicling the House's role and contributions to America's history.

Mr. Speaker, for more than two centuries this Capitol has stood as a shrine to our democracy and a beacon to millions across the globe. We must preserve not only the bricks and mortar of this Capitol, but also its history. The volume printed pursuant to this resolution will make a substantial contribution to that preservation, and I urge an "aye" vote on the motion.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, just in conclusion. I am very pleased that we can come together and take care of this housekeeping chore. During the discussion this afternoon on the passage of this resolution I would have liked to have been presented a copy of Mr. Brown's book. I am told the only volumes we have the Architect has, and they are too tattered to even leave his office. So it is time that Congress meet its obligation of preserving the rich history of this great building that is a symbol of liberty and democracy.

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield back the balance of my time and ask for passage of this resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. COLE). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA) that the House suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution, H. Con. Res. 358.

The question was taken.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. In the opinion of the Chair, two-thirds of those present have voted in the affirmative.

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX and the Chair's prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on H. Con. Res. 358.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

PERMITTING USE OF ROTUNDA OF CAPITOL FOR CEREMONY AS PART OF COMMEMORATION OF DAYS OF REMEMBRANCE OF VICTIMS OF HOLOCAUST

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 359) permitting the use of the rotunda of the Capitol for a ceremony as part of the commemoration of the days of remembrance of victims of the Holocaust.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. CON. RES. 359

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the rotunda of the Capitol is authorized to be used on April 22, 2004, for a ceremony as part of the commemoration of the days of remembrance of victims of the Holocaust. Physical preparations for the ceremony shall be carried out in accordance with such conditions as the Architect of the Capitol may prescribe.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA) and the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. LARSON) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA).

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today to urge passage of House Concurrent Resolution 359, which permits the Capitol Rotunda to be used for a ceremony as part of the Days of Remembrance commemorating the victims of the Holocaust.

Mr. Speaker, it is necessary to go through this procedure to use the very sacred center of the Capitol for a ceremony and joint authorization by both the House and the other body because of the significance of this particular location and its significance and importance in this building.

The United States Holocaust Memorial Museum is mandated by Congress to educate Americans about the history of the Holocaust and to annually honor and remember the victims of this catastrophic, horrible event, and that is done on the National Days of Remembrance observance. The purpose of the Days of Remembrance is to ask all Americans to reflect on the Holocaust, to remember the victims and to renew and strengthen our commitment to democracy and to human rights for every person.

The very first Days of Remembrance ceremony was held in the United States Capitol Rotunda in the year 1979. It has been held there every year since, except when the Rotunda has been closed for renovations. At last year's National Days of Remembrance observance, Secretary of State Colin Powell gave the keynote address. The theme of this year's Days of Remembrance commemoration is entitled "Justice and Humanity." That title, Justice and Humanity, is in memory of the Jews of Hungary who were deported 60 years ago in the final stages of World War II. The commemoration will honor the courageous individuals, as well as the organizations and countries who attempted to rescue them.

In this country, official response to the mass murder of European Jews and others resulted in the creation of the War Refugee Board in 1944. Established by the Executive Order of President Franklin Delano Roosevelt, the War Refugee Board worked with Jewish organizations, diplomats from neutral countries and resistance groups in Europe to rescue Jews from occupied territories and provide relief to inmates of Nazi concentration camps. Although belated, this action saved thousands of lives, reminding us of the terrible consequences of indifference and of the ability of organizations, individuals and countries to confront and work to halt acts of genocide or related crimes against humanity.

How appropriate I believe it is, Mr. Speaker, at this time that we remember the victims of the World War II Holocaust. It is my hope also that during this ceremony we can reflect upon others who have lost their life to genocide and to murderous regimes. I have often wondered how the world could stand by in World War II and not do more to save people who were headed for extermination camps. Not being alive in that era, I have, however, been alive during an era of other holocausts, such as in Cambodia, where millions literally were murdered in a genocide.

During my term in office, I remember Rwanda where nearly a million Africans were slaughtered and the world did not come to their aid. And, once again, we remember and we should reflect during our Day of Remembrance on those in Iraq as we uncover hundreds of mass graves throughout that country. Our obligation, whether it is in Asia, Africa or the Middle East, is to make certain that a holocaust does not take place, to make certain that tens of thousands are not murdered by any despot regime.

This ceremony that will be conducted will be the centerpiece of similar remembrance observances to be held throughout our Nation in all 50 States. Members of Congress, government officials, foreign dignitaries, Holocaust survivors and citizens from all walks of life have attended previous commemorations. House Concurrent Resolution 359 provides for the 2004 commemoration to be held in the rotunda on the day of April 22 of this year.

Mr. Speaker, I urge the support of my colleagues for this resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. LARSON of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I wish to associate myself with the remarks of the distinguished gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA).

Mr. Speaker, I rise with a great deal of humility and strong support for House Concurrent Resolution 359, authorizing the use of the Capitol rotunda for the Days of Remembrance ceremony on April 22.

During the week of April 18, similar Holocaust remembrance days will take place all across this country, as the distinguished gentleman from Florida pointed out. As this body has done every year since 1979, Congress will use the historic rotunda location to reflect on one of the most painful moments in all of world history: the Holocaust.

This very special day of remembrance, along with the creation of the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum, was established by Congress to permanently honor these victims. They were created not only to remember those who perished but also to educate the world about human rights.

The 2004 Days of Remembrance asks us to honor the memory of the Jews of Hungary, who were deported 60 years ago in the final stages of World War II, and to honor those courageous individuals as well as the few organizations and countries who attempted to rescue them. This year's theme is "For Justice and Humanity." It has specific poignancy for me as a Member from Connecticut, knowing that Hadassah Lieberman's mother was part of that.

I had the honor in Connecticut as Senate President to preside over the Days of Remembrances for 8 years. I often reflect on how solemn and important those ceremonies were, and still are. I can still see the survivors and their family members coming forward to light the candles and the solemnness of the occasion.

Given the current conflicts around the world, it is especially important to remember the message of the Holocaust victims who said, do not forget us. We cannot forget them or the evil that sent them to their deaths. Tragically, we need only to watch the nightly news to realize that this evil still exists in the world.

The ceremony we are authorizing today reminds us that when we respect the lessons of the past, we strengthen the values of every future generation.

Mr. Speaker, I urge passage of this concurrent resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. LATOURETTE), the sponsor of this resolution.

Mr. LATOURETTE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA), my friend, for yielding me this time; and I also want to thank him and the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. LARSON) for managing this concurrent resolution. I also, Mr. Speaker, want to thank the chairman of the Committee on House Administration, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. NEY), for permitting me to carry this piece of legislation.

I have had the pleasure for the last 10 years to be a member of the Holocaust Governing Council, one of the five appointed Members of Congress. During my time in Congress I have seen such giants in this institution as Ben Gilman of New York and recently the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. CANTOR) and the gentleman from California (Mr.

LANTOS) in bringing this resolution to the floor, and it is an honor for me to have the opportunity to be a part of that today.

Mr. Speaker, H. Con. Res. 359 permits the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum to use the Capitol rotunda for the Days of Remembrance observation. This annual event, which takes place in the symbolic heart of our American democracy, honors the victims of the Holocaust and is a reminder to all of us that freedom and liberty have both rights and responsibilities.

Since the opening of the museum and the beginning of the Days of Remembrance sponsored by the museum, world events have continued to demonstrate that it is imperative that we remember and study the Holocaust. From the violent breakup of Yugoslavia and the cataclysmic terror in Rwanda, to the rise of anti-semitism around the world that continues today, we live in a time when the great strides in human rights made over the last half century are in danger of losing ground to ignorance and intolerance.

That is why the theme of this year's commemoration, "For Justice and Humanity," is so timely. The title comes from a statement made by President Franklin D. Roosevelt who, when he called for the rescue of the Jewish population in Hungary in March of 1944, said, "In the name of justice and humanity, let all freedom-loving people rally to this righteous undertaking." By honoring rescuers along with the victims in this year's commemoration, we are shining a light on the brave acts of individuals and organizations that can teach important lessons today.

Of course, we know that it was too late for many Jews in Hungary in 1944. With the war entering its final stages, Nazi and Hungarian authorities deported about 440,000 Jews. At least half of those were murdered in gas chambers immediately upon their arrival at the labor camp Auschwitz. By the time the Nazis and their Hungarian collaborators were driven out of Hungary in April, 1945, nearly four-fifths of the Hungarian Jewish community had been killed.

Yet there were some individuals, organizations and countries that asserted the value of human life in the face of the systematic murder of men, women and children. The War Refugee Board, established in January of 1944 by President Roosevelt, had the mandate to take "all measures to rescue victims of oppression in imminent danger of death."

Raoul Wallenberg, a Swedish diplomat based in Hungary, led the War Refugee Board's most extensive rescue efforts by distributing protective Swedish passports or travel papers to tens of thousands of Hungarian Jews. Carl Lutz, a Swiss diplomat, issued certificates of emigration, placing nearly 50,000 Jews in Budapest under Swiss protection. Italian businessman Giorgio Perlasca issued forged visas and established safe houses. When Budapest was liberated in February of 1945, more than 100,000 Jews still remained in the city because of the efforts of Wallenberg, Lutz, Perlasca and other diplomats and individuals. The War Refugee Board played a crucial role in the rescue of as many as 200,000 Jews in German-occupied Europe.

This year, as we commemorate the lives of the millions of victims of the Holocaust, we also pay tribute to the rescuers for their courageous efforts rallying "to this righteous undertaking."

The first visit that I had to the Holocaust Museum following my election in 1994, I was taken around by the son of a Holocaust survivor; and there are two exhibits that I would commend to my colleagues on their next visit. One was a temporary exhibit that detailed the sailing of the steamship St. Louis and how that boat was turned from port to port to port as no one would take the Jews into their country.

The second is the failed conference that took place in Avignon, France, where countries from around the world, aware of the "Jewish problem" during the Second World War and some of the solutions that Nazi Germany was prepared to undertake, country after country declined to take affirmative action to take Jewish immigrants into its borders, the United States being one of them.

As we ponder not only the Days of Remembrance, I hope that we as legislators also learn the lessons of the St. Louis and the conference at Avignon; and I would ask all of my colleagues to join us in supporting House Concurrent Resolution 359.

Mr. LARSON of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Again, I would like to close on this particular resolution before the House, a simple resolution to allow the use of the rotunda for this ceremony. But when we enter the rotunda, the sacred center of the Capitol building on April 22, it is important that we do remember those victims who were lost in this horrific slaughter of human beings in World War II. We remember, as the gentleman from Ohio said so eloquently, that there were incidents like the turning away of the steamship St. Louis that went from port to port, and hundreds met a horrible fate because of the nations, and even the United States, who turned their backs.

The good Lord gave the United States the responsibility now, as the superpower of the world, an important responsibility that we should not lose sight of.

So as we reflect upon those victims, as we reflect upon those who ignored their responsibility, and as we recognize our responsibility in the world today, it is important that again we reflect at this time on what occurred, what was done, and what was left undone, and that we also make certain as we reflect on April 22 that we do not allow a holocaust of our time.

So with those comments, Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support this resolution.

Mr. CANTOR. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to express my support for House Concurrent Resolution 359, permitting the use of the rotunda of the Capitol to commemorate the Days of Remembrance of victims of the holocaust.

It is appropriate that we commemorate those who perished during the Holocaust. It is also important that we not forget that genocide and human rights abuses continue to occur elsewhere around the world. As the leader of the Free World, the United States must use its power and influence to bring stability to the world. History serves as a lesson to all, and we must ensure that the horrors of the Holocaust must never happen again.

I am proud to be a founding trustee of the Virginia Holocaust Museum and am pleased that a growing number of community-based Holocaust museums around the county are a reflection of our increasing awareness of the lessons of the Holocaust. Only when every person understands the magnitude of death, destruction, and utter horrors of the Holocaust can we feel we have done everything to prevent its recurrence.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to express my support of H. Con. Res. 359, to allow the use of the Capitol Rotunda for a ceremony to commemorate victims of the Holocaust. Our Nation's Capitol is a symbol of freedom and democracy to so many. This resolution gives us a forum to pay service to the victims of the Holocaust. I pray that such a tragedy should never touch the world again.

A Holocaust memorial is not something to be taken lightly, or to be rushed without its due respect. The Holocaust is a product of authoritarian government and evil intentions, and we must continue to study and remember it, lest it be repeated. Hate, genocide, racial supremacism still occur in parts of the world and I believe that we as Americans can still focus our efforts on stopping them before they grow to an uncontrollable magnitude.

My heart goes out to the victims and survivors of Adolf Hitler's death camps. Every time I reexamine the Holocaust, and pay tribute to what happened, I am still shocked and pained by the organized, methodical killing that went on in Europe.

For the 12 million people that Nazi Germany exterminated, we must remember. For each of the six million Jews killed, we must respond. For the Gypsies, the gays, the political dissenters and any of the righteous people who spoke out against what they thought was evil—for this we commemorate and remember the Holocaust. It can never happen again.

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. COLE). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA) that the House suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution, H. Con. Res. 359.

The question was taken.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. In the opinion of the Chair, two-thirds of those present have voted in the affirmative.

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX and the Chair's prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on the subject of H. Con. Res. 359.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

PERMITTING USE OF ROTUNDA OF CAPITOL FOR CEREMONY TO AWARD CONGRESSIONAL GOLD MEDAL TO DR. DOROTHY HEIGHT

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 357) permitting the use of the rotunda of the Capitol for a ceremony to award a Congressional Gold Medal to Dr. Dorothy Height.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. CON. RES. 357

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the rotunda of the Capitol is authorized to be used on March 24, 2004, for a ceremony to award a Congressional Gold Medal to Dr. Dorothy Height. Physical preparations for the ceremony shall be carried out in accordance with such conditions as the Architect of the Capitol may prescribe.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA) and the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. LARSON) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA).

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise this afternoon in support of House Concurrent Resolution 357. This is a resolution authorizing again the use of the rotunda for a ceremony which will be conducted on March 24 honoring Dr. Dorothy Height. Dorothy Height will receive a great honor of the United States Congress when she is awarded in that ceremony the Congressional Gold Medal.

Mr. Speaker, as we just authorized the use of the rotunda for a different ceremony, and that particular ceremony and the previous action for a memorial service, this is a service of celebration and also of the life of a distinguished American, Dr. Dorothy Height.

□ 1445

This is a service of celebration and also of the life of the distinguished American, Dr. Dorothy Height. On December 6, 2003, the resolution awarding Dr. Dorothy Height the Congressional Gold medal became public law. That is the purpose for our requesting a ceremony in the Capitol rotunda; and, of course, as I said before, we need permission of the House and the other body to conduct this ceremony.

I want to talk a little bit about Dorothy Height and tell a little bit about her history. She is an outstanding American and truly deserving of this great honor.

Dorothy Height was born in Richmond, Virginia, in 1912. At an early age she moved with her family to Rankin, Pennsylvania. While in high school, Dorothy Height was awarded a scholarship to New York University where she studied and earned a master's degree. At a very early age she established herself as a dedicated student with exceptional oratorical skills.

After graduating from New York University, Dr. Height began her career working as a case worker with the New York City Welfare Department. At the age of 25, she began her journey as a civil rights activist when she joined the National Council of Negro Women. In 1957, Dr. Height was named president of the council, a position which she held until 1977.

During the height of the civil rights movement in the late 1960s, Dorothy organized Weekdays in Mississippi, which brought together black and white women from the North and the South to create a dialogue of mutual understanding.

Throughout her life, Dr. Height fought for equal rights for both African Americans and also for women. And in 1944 she joined the national staff of the Young Women's Christian Association, the YWCA. She remained active with the organization until 1977. During her tenure at the YWCA, she developed leadership training and other programs and other projects promoting racial and religious tolerance and understanding.

Dr. Height has served our Nation in a number of different capacities during her distinguished career, including as a consultant on African Affairs to the Secretary of State, also as a member of both the President's Committee on Employment of the Handicapped and on the President's Committee on the Status of Women. Her tireless efforts for equal rights have earned her the praise and recognition of numerous organizations as well. She has received the Presidential Medal of Freedom, the Franklin Delano Roosevelt Freedom From Want Award, and the NAACP Springarn Medal and now the Congressional Gold Medal. Dr. Height has also been inducted into the National Women's Hall of Fame.

Dr. Height's work has helped countless women in America and around the world participate in democratic reform resulting in new opportunities for themselves, for their families, and their communities.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, if you ever had a chance to hear or see Dorothy Height, you had an opportunity to see one of the most distinguished advocates for women, an advocate for minorities that has ever been in our country's history.

If you have not seen Dr. Dorothy Height, you missed the glow in her eyes, you missed the sparkle in her voice, you missed the strength of an individual who has gone beyond so many barriers in her life, again, opening doors and offering opportunities to women, to minorities, and to all Americans.

I am a strong admirer of this lady and what she has done. I know a former Member of the House, Connie Morella, often talked about Dr. Height and her accomplishments; and others will come forward when we pass this resolution to honor her accomplishments. So I am absolutely delighted this afternoon to be here to offer this resolution to authorize the use of the Capitol rotunda where we will present this distinguished medal to a great American, Dr. Dorothy Height.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. LARSON of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I again would like to associate myself with the remarks of the distinguished gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA), who is eloquent and noteworthy in his praise. This has been a historic afternoon in so many respects, pausing to honor the works of Glenn Brown in the historic writings as they relate to this great Capitol facility, pausing to reflect and remember and reserve the great rotunda to participate in the Days of Remembrance with regard to the Holocaust, and now to step forward and pay homage and honor a living legend.

I urge all Members to join all of us in supporting the distinguished chairman's motion. There can be no more appropriate use of the Capitol rotunda than for a ceremony to honor Dr. Dorothy Irene Height for a lifetime of achievement of social equality and justice.

The author of the original legislation, our distinguished colleague, the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WATSON), could not be here today, but deserves credit for having had the persistency to make sure that not only would Dr. Height receive the gold medal, but also that we would, as this Congress is required, reserve the rotunda for this great ceremony.

It is important for me today to note that Dr. Height is in my home State of Connecticut at a book signing as I speak. I am pleased that the appropriate ceremony will be approaching next month.

Congress reserves its highest civilian honor for men and women whose contributions to American society exemplify the highest traditions and ideals of public service. By every measure, Dr. Dorothy Height's lifelong commitment to the principles of freedom, equality, and social justice compels this award.

Beginning during the administration of Franklin Roosevelt and continuing to the present day, Dorothy Height has fought to promote human and civil rights throughout our society. For decades she has worked tirelessly to promote the appointment of qualified women to senior Federal positions. As president of the National Council of Negro Women since 1957, Dr. Height has been an especially forceful advocate for the advancement of African Americans. In addition, and on a personal note, I would like to acknowledge the work of Mrs. Mary A. Ballard, who leads the Hartford section of the National Council of Negro Women in my home district.

Mr. Speaker, as Congress recognized last year, there is no doubt that America is a far better place thanks to the labor and commitment of Dr. Dorothy Height on behalf of not only those among us who face the burdens of injustice but all of us. She deserves great credit. The use of the Capitol rotunda to award the gold medal to Dorothy Height is not only fitting; it is required and long overdue.

I urges all Members to join in supporting the resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. DAVIS).

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I want to first of all commend the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WATSON) for introducing this resolution, and I want to thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Dr. Dorothy Height is a steadfast pioneer of women's rights and racial justice for people of color. She has set an example of what can be achieved through commitment and group activism.

As the fourth elected president of the National Council of Negro Women, Dr. Height led a crusade for justice for black women. To help strengthen the black family, she conceived of and organized the Black Family Reunion Celebration, which has been held here in Washington since 1986, an activity in which I have participated.

Under the leadership of Dr. Height, the NCNW achieved tax exempt status; raised funds on behalf of thousands of women in support of erecting a statue of Mary McLeod Bethune, NCNW's founder, in a Federal park; she developed several model programs to combat teenage pregnancy and address hunger in rural areas; and established the Bethune Museum and Archives for Black Women, the first institution devoted to black women's history. She was instrumental in the initiation of NCNW-sponsored food, child care, housing and career educational programs.

No stranger to political activism, in the 1960s Dr. Height called on the NCNW to sponsor Wednesdays in Mississippi when interracial groups of women would help out at Freedom Schools and conduct voter registration drives in the North and voter registration in the South. She worked with Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., and Roy Wilkins to prevent lynchings, desegregate the Armed Forces, reform the criminal justice system, and provide equal access to public accommodations.

Dr. Dorothy Irene Height has a long legacy as a leader in the struggle for equality and human rights. She has through her words and deeds proven distinguished service to humanity and her many contributions for equality, social justice and human rights for all people. She is commended for her efforts. And even at this stage of her life, every time I go to an event, an activity, she is generally there in her wheel chair. Someone is pushing her, bringing her, but she is there.

I grew up as a great fan of Dr. Mary McLeod Bethune. And Dr. Height inherited the legacy. I also work with two women who are very close to Dr. Height, Ms. Rosie Bean and Ms. Arnetta Wilson. I am sure that they are both rejoicing to note that their distinguished leader who is deserving of such an honor is to be recognized.

Mr. LARSON of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to again support this resolution that I think is somewhat overdue to present and conduct this ceremony for the presentation of the gold medal for Dr. Dorothy Height.

Dr. Dorothy Height, as I said, is a delightful lady. She just celebrated, I am told, her 91st birthday just some 2 weeks ago. She has an incredible career that has spanned nearly this century, and she has a public career that spans over 65 years. She unquestionably has been recognized as one of the preeminent social and civil rights activist of our time. In fact, Dorothy Height, I am told, was the only female at the table when Dr. Martin Luther King planned the civil rights movement.

□ 1500

She has all her life struggled for equality, for social justice and for human rights for all people.

Mr. Speaker, when young people need role models, and certainly in the time that we live in they need role models, we have had two women so honored. Soon Dorothy Height will receive this honor. The other I remember is Rosa Parks since I have been in Congress. She was awarded a gold medal, and certainly Dorothy Height is in the same category and deserving of recognition of this honor by Congress.

So I think, whether it is Rosa Parks who changed the course of history in this country or someone who worked tirelessly through their life and has an incredibly distinguished career, as we heard, promoting the rights of all individuals, women and minorities in our society, that we take this time to honor her in this ceremony in March. I urge the passage of this resolution.

Mr. HOLT. Mr. Speaker, I rise to honor one of America's great citizens—Dr. Dorothy Height.

For more than six decades, Dorothy Height has tirelessly fought for those who are less fortunate, for those who have been denied access to an education, and for those who have been denied equal rights. Both through personal example and her commitment to social equality, Dorothy Height has provided women and minorities with hope to dream and the tools to realize their potential.

During the civil rights movement, Dorothy Height led the fight for inter-racial schooling, and spearheaded African American voter registration drives. She worked closely with Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., Roy Wilkins, Whitney Young, A. Philip Randolph, and others as they developed plans for obtaining civil rights. It should be noted that she was the only woman allowed to be present in several high-powered strategy sessions with those great leaders.

Dorothy Height was an advocate for women's rights during a time when few African American women were engaged in the feminist movement. She fought tirelessly to implement her vision of full and equal employment, fair pay, and access to education for all women.

In addition to her work for equality in the United States, Dr. Dorothy Height has been a leader in the struggle for international human rights. In 1975 she helped establish the sole African-American private voluntary organization working in Africa. She has improved the quality of life for women in developing countries, and has worked to combat the AIDS crisis in Africa.

A Congressional Medal of Honor is well deserved, and one of many honors earned by Dr. Dorothy Height over her long and distinguished career. I am very pleased to join my colleagues in the House in marking this honor for an individual who dedicated her life to the struggle for social equality and justice.

Mr. CUMMINGS. Mr. Speaker, it is with a great sense of pride that I stand before this chamber as we act on legislation that moves us one step closer to awarding the Congressional Gold Medal to Dr. Dorothy Height.

Two months have passed since the bill bestowing this great honor upon Ms. Height (H.R. 1821) was signed into public law. Now, during the celebration of Black History, I can think of no better time to put the proper procedures in place for Dr. Height to receive her award on March 24, 2004. I can also think of no better place to bestow this award on Dr. Height than in the Capitol rotunda's Statuary Hall—a place that memorializes the giants of our country. I think Dr. Height is a giant in her own right and apparently many people in our country agree.

Who would have imagined some 90 years ago that the daughter of James Edward Height and Fannie (Borroughs) Height of Richmond, Virginia would one day be receiving the Nation's highest civilian honor.

Born in 1912 in Richmond, Virginia, Dr. Dorothy Irene Height distinguished herself at an early age as a dedicated student with exceptional oratorical skills. As a young girl she fearlessly and vehemently stood up to the racist and sexist climate of the times. At the age of 25 she heeded the call of her mentor, Mary McLeod Bethune, founder of the National Council of Negro Women, and joined the struggle for women's full and equal employment and educational advancement. She has and continues to dedicate her life to the struggle for equality, social justice, and human rights for all peoples.

Mr. Speaker, throughout her illustrious career as a civil rights advocate, Dr. Height tirelessly worked to prevent lynching, encourage voter registration, desegregate the armed forces, reform the criminal justice system, and create equal access to public accommodations.

And a long career it has been. In fact, her public career spans 65 years. She was a valued advisor to First Lady Eleanor Roosevelt and encouraged Presidents Eisenhower and Johnson to desegregate the Nation's public schools and to appoint African American women to sub-Cabinet positions. Since 1957, she has served as President of the National Council of Negro Women, an umbrella organization for 250 local groups and 38 national organizations dedicated to economic development and women's issues.

Mr. Speaker, the numerous awards and accolades Dr. Height has received over the years is a testimony to her invaluable contributions to the progress of this Nation. The NAACP has awarded her The Spingarn Award, its highest honor. She is also the proud recipient of the John F. Kennedy Memorial Award from the National Council of Jewish Women; the Ministerial Interfaith Association Award; the Lovejoy Award; and the Congressional Black Caucus's William L. Dawson Award for her decades of public service to people of color and particularly women. However, Dr. Height is not one to rest on her laurels. She continues to lead the fight against social injustice and inequality. Her profound love for our youth is unmatched. As a direct link to the civil rights movement of the 1960s, Dr. Height continues to inspire future generations of civil rights activists.

What is truly remarkable about this grand dame is that at age 90 she does not plan on slowing down. And although she spends much of her time in a wheelchair, she continues to stand up for equality and social justice.

Mr. Speaker, once again, I am proud to stand before this body as we move ever closer to bestowing upon Dr. Dorothy Height our Nation's highest civilian honor.

I want to thank my colleagues from the House Administration Committee, Mr. LARSON and Mr. NEY for setting the procedural stage to allow this great ceremony to take place in the Capitol rotunda. I especially thank my friend, Diane Watson for sponsoring this legislation as well as for sponsoring the original legislation honoring Dr. Height that passed in the House.

Ms. WATSON. Mr. Speaker, H. Con. Res. 357, authorizing the use of the capital rotunda to award the congressional gold medal to Dr. Dorothy Height, is offered today to sanction the venue for the upcoming award of the medal to Dr. Height on March 24, 2004.

I want to thank Congressman NEY, Chairman of the Committee on House Administration, and Congressman LARSON, Ranking Member, for their cooperation and support in bringing this bill to the floor in an expeditious manner. I also want to thank Maria Robinson and Catherine Tran, House Administration Committee staff members, for their work.

Mr. Speaker, on December 6, 2003, President Bush signed into law P.L. 108–162, which authorizes Congress to present a congressional gold medal to Dr. Height in recognition of her many distinguished contributions to the nation. The presentation of the congressional medal to Dr. Height will appropriately recognize her long and productive public career and her superior service to our Nation.

Dr. Height's numerous accomplishments span the history of the 20th Century. She is currently President of the National Council of Negro Women (NCNW), a position to which she was appointed in 1957 upon the retirement of Dr. Mary McLeod Bethune, one of the most influential African-American women in U.S. history. Under Dr. Height's leadership, the National Council of Negro Women implemented a number of new and innovative programs, including leadership training for African-American women in the rural South; the Bethune Museum and Archives, devoted to African-American women's history; the Black Family Reunion, a nationwide annual gathering to celebrate not only the black family, but all families; and Operation Woman Power, a project to expand business ownership by women and to provide funds for vocational training.

In addition to her many accomplishments as president of the NCNW, Dr. Height had a persistent, active, and significant presence during our Nation's historic civil rights movement. As a member of the so-called "big six" civil rights leaders, which included A. Philip Randolph, Martin Luther King, and Roy Wilkins, Dr. Height was the only female who participated in the major planning of one of the most important movements in U.S. history. She has been an advisor to presidents, and remains and active and respected advocate for human rights around the globe.

Dr. Height is the recipient of numerous awards over her long and active life, including the Citizens Medal Award, presented by President Reagan, and the Presidential Medal of Freedom, awarded by President Clinton.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support H. Con. Res. 357 so that Congress can appropriately honor a woman who has done and given so much to better our Nation.

Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, it is indeed a great honor to rise before this body as a strong supporter of the H. Con. Res. 357.

I first want to thank my distinguished colleague, Ms. WATSON for her diligent work on this resolution. And I also wish her a speedy recovery.

Mr. Speaker, it is because of people like Dorothy Height that we can all enjoy the freedom that America bestows upon her people. Ms. Height is a pioneer and trail-blazer. Like other pioneers, both celebrated and unknown, she has opened the doors of opportunity to all, making America the free country it is today.

From the very beginning, Dorothy Height was a crusader. During the depths of the Great Depression she managed to do something very few of her contemporaries were able to accomplish.

She knew that education was a key to making one's way in the world and the way to enlighten the path for others. She graduated from New York University with a bachelors and a master's degree in Education in 1933.

Immediately afterward, she launched a career in civil rights. She has remained on the battlefield for six decades. Her first venue for advocating the rights of others was the Young Women's Christian Association (YWCA). Here she led an advocacy movement aimed at improving conditions for black domestic workers.

Within the YWCA, she worked to integrate an organization that still had separate facilities for blacks and whites. Because of her determined and dogged efforts, women of all racial backgrounds could use the same facilities with the same privileges.

Her leadership at the national level resulted in the YWCA adopting an interracial charter in 1946 that called on the organization and its members to stand against racial injustice in the United States.

After her work with the YWCA, Ms. Height became president of the National Council of Negro Women. She steered the organization through the civil rights struggle of the 1960's.

She helped organize voter registration in the South, at a time when it was dangerous and nearly impossible to be an African-American voter below the Mason-Dixon line.

Ms. Height also organized voter education programs and scholarship programs for student civil rights workers.

In 1970 Dorothy Height expanded the goals of the NCNW to encompass vocational training and assist women in opening businesses, forms of education that were not readily available to women at the time.

Since then, Dorothy Height has served as a social services expert on local, state, and federal governmental committees concerned with women's issues. She has also led numerous campaigns for the war on drugs, encouraging youngsters to take advantage of education and vocational training.

Mr. Speaker, in 1996, the United States Government recognized Dorothy Height's achievements with the Presidential Medal of Freedom.

I am pleased, Mr. Speaker, to join my friend, the gentlewoman from California, Ms. WATSON, in support of this most appropriate use of the rotunda of the Capitol of the United States.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to support this legislation that honors and salutes a giant and to acknowledge my good friend the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WATSON) for her leadership and insight on an effort long overdue.

We have all truly been blessed with Dr. Dorothy Irene Height, born on March 24, 1912 in Richmond, Virginia and raised in Rankin, Pennsylvania. Many of us have had the fortunate opportunity to study Dr. Height's personal and professional history and her numerous contributions-which are extensive, as she has given the greater part of her life to the service of others. Therefore, some might describe her as an activist for social justice and civil rights, a servant of the people, one who has served a number of Presidents, a humanitarian, an American hero, and a patriot, to name a few. The above-mentioned titles are merely words but are given color and meaning when one actually meets the acquaintance of Dr. Dorothy Height. Her charm, energy, insight, intellect, wisdom, and her compassion easily captivate others. I am honored to have had the opportunity, among others, to share in her vision. It is wonderful to know that she can speak eloquently about Mary McLeod Bethune, that she can speak to the concept of ownership for African American people, having led the effort to erect the first African American-owned building on Pennsylvania Avenue just two blocks away from the White House. She believes in women's rights and the economic empowerment of minorities and is a strong, passionate activist for these causes.

Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to be here today because our words are simply that, simple words, mere words. But if our presence on the floor today commemorates the honor that is being given to Dr. Dorothy Height under the leadership of the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WATSON), I urge my colleagues to join us in acting to honor and salute this great leader. Dr. Height, we love you.

Dorothy Height's lifetime of achievement measures the liberation of Black America, the advance of women's rights, and a determined effort to lift the poor and the powerless into the Halls of Power and influence in our Nation. She began her career as a staff member of the YWCA in New York City, becoming director of the Center for Racial Justice. She became a volunteer with the National Council of Negro Women (NCNW), where she worked with its founder, Mary McLeod Bethune.

When Bethune died, Height became president, a position she continues to hold. NCNW, an organization of national organizations and community sections with outreach to four million women, develops model national and international community-based programs, sent scores of women to help in the Freedom Schools of the civil rights movement, and spearheaded voter registration drives. Height's collaborative leadership style brings together people of different cultures for mutual benefit.

Because of Dorothy Height's commitment to the "Black family," she has hosted the Black Family Reunion Celebration since 1986, in which almost 10 million have participated. As stated above, Dr. Height was born in Richmond, Virginia, and moved with her parents to Ranklin, Pennsylvania at an early age. Winner of a scholarship for her exceptional oratorical skills, she entered New York University where she earned the Bachelor and Master degrees in 4 years.

While working as a caseworker for the welfare department in New York, Dr. Height joined the NCNW in 1937 and her career as a pioneer in civil rights activities began to unfold. She served on the national staff of the YWCA of USA from 1944 to 1977 where she was active in developing its leadership training and interracial and ecumenical education programs. In 1965 she inaugurated the Center for Racial Justice which is still a major initiative of the National YWCA. She served as the 10th national president of the Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Inc., from 1946 to 1957 before becoming president of the NCNW in 1958.

Working closely with Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., Roy Wilkins, Whitney Young, A. Philip Randolph and others, Dr. Height participated in virtually all major civil and human rights events in the 1950's and 1960's. For her tireless efforts on behalf of the less fortunate, President Ronald Reagan presented her the Citizens Medal Award for distinguished service to the country in 1989.

Dr. Height is known for her extensive international and developmental education work. She initiated the sole African American private voluntary organization working in Africa in 1975, building on the success of NCNW's assignments in Asia, Africa, Europe, and South America.

In three decades of national leadership, she has served on major policy-making bodies affecting women, social welfare, economic development, and civil and human rights, and has received numerous appointments and awards. As president of NCNW, Dorothy Irene Height has an outstanding record of accomplishments. As a self-help advocate, she has been instrumental in the initiation of NCNW sponsored food, child care, housing and career educational programs that embody the principles of self-reliance. As a promotor of Black family life she conceived and organized the Black Family Reunion Celebration in 1986 to reinforce the historic strengths and traditional values of the African American Family. Now in its ninth year, this multi-city cultural event has attracted some 11.5 million people.

Dr. Height's lifetime of achievement measures the liberation of Black America, the brilliant advance of women's rights, and the most determined effort to lift up the poor and the powerless. Still fighting, pushing, and advocating, Dr. Dorothy Height—mother, wife, grandmother, great-grandmother, doctor, civil/human rights activist, and freedom fighter continues unrelentingly to serve our country in the health and most meaningfully—the civil arena at the age of 91.

Dr. Height is a commendable and formidable woman. She has whole-heartedly devoted her life to public service, struggling for social justice, the eradication and education of HIV/AIDS, unprivileged children, equal rights, voting rights, women's rights, and education opportunities for all citizens irrespective of color, ethnicity, gender, disability, sexuality and other markers of difference.

She as the leading lady in the civil rights movement, sitting as the only female on the planning table with Whitney Young, Dr. Martin Luther King, James Farmer, A. Phillip Randolph, and Roy Wilkins. She has been and continues to be emulated internationally. Needless to say, Dr. Height is a jewel in the African American community and an influential and exemplary leader in the country.

Many examples of her work stand out in our minds. To give just one—under her leadership of the National Negro Women's Council, she introduced and implemented many initiatives and programs geared towards the betterment of the Afro-American community, the advancement of minority women in all sectors of society, most notably, in business and non-traditional careers. Serving in all capacities imaginable, she has served distinguishably.

Dream giver and earth shaker, Dr. Dorothy Height has followed and expanded on the original purpose of the National Council of Negro Women, giving new meaning, new courage and pride to women, youth and families everywhere. While most individuals resolve to retirement at her current age, Dr. Dorothy Height continues to extend and commit herself beyond measures; she has done so not for recognition or national esteem, but as a labor of love. For the above-mentioned reasons, it is our rightful duty to honor her in recognition of her many priceless contributions to the civil growth of this nation and the beautiful legacy she will leave by awarding her a congressional gold medal.

For the above reasons, Mr. Speaker, I support H. Con. Res. 357.

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. COLE). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA) that the House suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution, H. Con. Res. 357.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the concurrent resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on H. Con. Res. 357.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

AUTHORIZING ISSUANCE OF PROCLAMATION COMMEMORATING 200TH ANNIVERSARY OF BIRTH OF CONSTANTINO BRUMIDI

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 264) authorizing and requesting the President to issue a proclamation to commemorate the 200th anniversary of the birth of Constantino Brumidi.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. CON. RES. 264

Whereas Constantino Brumidi, born in Rome, Italy, on July 26, 1805, landed at New York Harbor on September 18, 1852, as a political exile, making his flight from Italy to the United States because of his love for liberty;

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the President is authorized and requested to issue a proclamation commemorating the 200th anniversary of the birth of Constantino Brumidi and calling upon the people of the United States, State and local governments, and interested organizations to commemorate this anniversary with appropriate ceremonies, activities, and programs.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA) and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. DAVIS) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA).

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I am pleased to offer a resolution, the fourth measure today. This bill passed the Committee on Government Reform and will be considered by the full House at this time, a resolution which would honor the memory of Constantino Brumidi.

Not too many people have probably heard of Constantino Brumidi. He is not exactly a household word or name in America, but Constantino Brumidi has been called the Michelangelo of the United States Capitol Building. House Concurrent Resolution 264 was introduced to honor both the life and also the work and creative genius of Constantino Brumidi.

Mr. Brumidi was an Italian immigrant who spent 25 years, from 1855 to 1880, painting, decorating and making the United States Capitol as we know it even today a more beautiful place to live and visit and have as a treasure for our country.

Brumidi was born in Italy in 1805, and he worked as an artist in Rome. He also worked in the Vatican, where he had many commissions, including a famous portrait of Pope Pius IX.

In 1852, Brumidi immigrated to the United States; and he dedicated really the balance of his life to making this building, our United States Capitol, one of the most impressive structures in our great Nation.

In 1865, Brumidi spent 11 months walking dangerously and working high atop the Capitol rotunda where he labored on his masterpiece. His masterpiece, and we can see it today if we walk out into the rotunda and look up, is called The Apotheosis of Washington, and it is located in the very center, in the eye of the dome of the ceiling of the Capitol.

Six years later, he created the first tribute to an African American in the Capitol when he placed the figure of Crispus Attucks at the center of his painting of the Boston Massacre.

In 1878, at the age of 72 and in poor health, Brumidi began work on the rotunda frieze. If we look in the Capitol around the frieze, about midway, we can see his work. The frieze chronicles the history of the United States.

Constantino Brumidi's life and work exemplifies the lives of millions of immigrants who came to the United States, and they came from all lands, sometimes to escape adverse conditions, to build a better life, to leave the problems of their native lands, and they brought their skills and their hard work and their talents, which not only bettered their lives and those of their children but immensely created the art, the trade, the richness that we have in the United States and enjoy today.

There are many organizations supporting this resolution, including NAIF, which is the National American Italian Foundation. That is an organization that promotes Italian American relations, cultural and business relations. We also have other numerous United States Italian American groups who support the recognition that we are bringing forward today, again to recognize the life and talents of Constantino Brumidi.

The year 2005 is the bicentennial of Brumidi's work, and I can think of no better way to honor this patriotic Italian American's contribution to our great Nation, to this incredibly historic building, than by passing this resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I urge passage of the resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I would consume.

Let me, first of all, commend the gentleman for his introduction of this resolution.

Mr. Speaker, H. Con. Res. 264 honors the 200th anniversary of the birth of Constantino Brumidi. Mr. Brumidi was a wonderful artist who dedicated over 25 years to painting the Capitol Building. He is a symbol of the American dream. Born in Italy, he moved to the United States and, like so many other immigrants, made wonderful contributions to our great country.

Although Mr. Brumidi was known for his masterpiece, The Apotheosis of Washington, located in the Capitol dome, I would like to mention the fact that he was first to use the Capitol to pay tribute to an African American when he painted Crispus Attucks in his portrayal of the Boston Massacre.

Another treasure is Brumidi's corridors, the beautifully decorated corridors on the first floor of the Senate wing in the Capitol.

Mr. Brumidi's work is enjoyed by the millions of visitors to the Capitol each year, as well as by those of us who have the privilege of using the Capitol for official business.

Mr. Speaker, an outstanding artist, whose work continues to delight and inspire millions of people each and every year as they come and visit the Capitol, as they view portraits of the Capitol and as they recognize the tremendous masterpiece that this edifice is, and so I commend my colleague, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA), for introducing this resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

In closing, I urge my colleagues to support House Concurrent Resolution 264, a resolution again recognizing the 200th anniversary of the birth of Constantino Brumidi. I urge its adoption.

Mr. EMANUEL. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of the proclamation to commemorate the 200th anniversary of Constantino Brumidi's birth. Often referred to as the Michelangelo of the Capitol, Constantino Brumidi's frescoes decorate the Capitol Rotunda, House Chamber, committee rooms, and corridors of the Capitol with their incorporation of classical artistic traditions and patriotic American themes.

Born in Italy in 1805, Constantino Brumidi studied at the Italian Academy of Arts and demonstrated his talent for fresco painting at a young age, painting several Roman palaces and working three years in the Vatican. He immigrated to America in 1852 at the age of forty-seven and settled in New York City. The artist later took on other important works such as the frescoes in St. Stephen's Church and an allegorical depiction of the Holy Trinity in a Mexico City cathedral. It was upon his return from Mexico that Constantino Brumidi stopped in Washington and visited the Capitol where he was excited about the opportunity to decorate its interiors.

Constantino Brumidi was hired by Captain Montgomery Meigs and his first art work in the Capitol was in the House Committee on Agriculture's room. Because his art garnered such favorable attention, he was awarded more commissions and eventually became a Government painter. While Brumidi created scores of frescoes depicting allegories and scenes from American history, perhaps his most important work was "The Apotheosis of George Washington" which appears in the Rotunda of the Capitol dome and depicts Washington's ascension to heaven. Today, no visit to the Capitol is complete without viewing this incredible work. Although immigrating to America later in life, he drew from his Italian artistic experience and blended it with the history of his new country. The artist took great pride in his new home, even signing one fresco, "C. Brumidi Artist Citizen of the U.S."

Mr. Speaker, on behalf of my district's more than 62,000 constituents of Italian descent, I am proud to join this body in celebrating Constantino Brumidi's lasting contributions to our country as the 200th anniversary of his birth approaches.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, as a cosponsor of H. Con. Res. 264, I am very pleased to join in this effort to honor the life and accomplishments of Constantino Brumidi. An Italian immigrant of partial Greek descent, his beautiful works of art grace our greatest symbol of democracy, our Capitol building where we gather to conduct the nation's business and where we welcome hundreds of thousands of visitors from around the world each year.

Constantino Brumidi spent 25 years of his life, from 1855 to 1880, painting, decorating and enhancing the beauty of the United States Capitol. This talented artist was born in Rome, Italy to Stauros Brumidi from Greece and Anna Bianchini Brumidi of Rome on July 26, 1805. He was trained as an artist and painted in Rome and at the Vatican. He arrived in New York City as a political refugee on September 18, 1852 and became an American citizen in 1857. He began painting in the U.S. Capitol on February 19, 1855 and spent more than 25 years of his life painting, decorating and beautifying the corridors, committee rooms and the Rotunda of the Capitol. Brumidi created many magnificent paintings and decorations depicting the history, inventions, values and ideals of the United States, thus enhancing the dignity and beauty of the Capitol and inspiring tens of millions of visitors. In 1865, he painted in just 11 months his masterpiece, The Apotheosis of Washington in the canopy of the eye of the Capitol dome. In 1871, Brumidi created the first tribute to an African American in the Capitol when he placed the figure of Crispus Attucks at the center of his painting of the Boston Massacre. He died on February 19, 1880, exactly 25 years to the day that he first began work in the Capitol.

Brumidi also painted in Catholic churches in cities along the east coast, including Washington, DC (St. Aloyisus Church), Baltimore, Md., Philadelphia Pa. and most especially, in St. Stephen's Catholic Church in New York City. Brumidi is buried in Glenwood Cemetery in Washington, DC. His grave marker there was authorized and paid for by the U.S. Congress in 1950.
